GOOD ROADS MEETING

Delegation to Introduce Bill—Chairman's Report—Educational Campaign to be Started.

The good roads mass meeting scheduled for Saturday was held at the Chamber of Commerce rooms and was well attended considering the extreme cold weather and the condition of the roads throughout the county. In all there were about thirty-five representative citizens present, including the Chester county delegation.

State Senator A. G. Price presided as chairman of the meeting. Mr. R. E. McNamee, who at a previous mass meeting was selected as chairman of a committee of eight to have the roads of the county surveyed, read his report in detail, giving the roads to be built under a proposed plan, the expense, mileage, cost per mile, etc.

At the meeting Saturday a committee of five was requested to select three citizens who would have charge of the copying of all notices if the proposed bond issue is carried in Chester county. The three appointed are, Messrs. R. S. McNamee, Great Falls; H. S. Adams, of Chester and J. B. Abell of Lowryville.

The Chester delegation was requested to introduce a bill in the legislature as early as possible authorizing Chester county to float $450,000 in bonds. The committee of three mentioned above to handle the expense of the funds will be mentioned in the bill and are to serve without compensation other than necessary expenses.

It was also decided at this meeting that in the event bonds were floated the proceeds from the sale of same would be deposited in all the banks of Chester county and checked out as expended.

The Chamber of Commerce will at once begin an educational campaign with a view of acquainting every citizen of the county with the details incident to the issuing of bonds. It is desired that every citizen be made familiar with all the details before the matter is voted upon.

Mr. Ben Cassels, who lives near Cassels, is of the opinion that he had a very narrow escape from probable death last Wednesday morning. It was the habit of Mr. Cassels to get up early in the morning and build a fire after which he goes to feed his stock. Early last Wednesday morning he got up as usual and built a fire but for some reason did not immediately go to the barn. While in the house he was very much alarmed when he heard a gun-shot in his yard and a later investigation showed that a plank which supported a clothes line had been riddled with shot. It is supposed that the would be assassin was waiting in the dark for Mr. Cassels and that the wind caused the plank to shake and the Mr. Cassels thought it was the fork-off Mr. Cassels, whereupon he opened fire. The range of the shot would indicate that the party was in a reclining position behind a small tree. Mr. Cassels states that if he had been shot at instead of the plank the loss of shot would have hit him full in the face.

MEETING COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

The County Commissioners, Messrs. Jordan and Gregory, met at the office of the County Supervisor yesterday morning. Supervisor Anderson being present.

The board decided to locate the office of Magistrate Shannon in the Grand Jury room. Just where Magistrate Shannon will locate his office is not yet stated.

Dr. Hope and Mr. William T. Thompson, of Lockhart, appeared before the board and asked that the Chester county delegation be instructed to have authority issued to expend $10,000 on the bridge over Brashear creek at Lockhart instead of $9,000. In the event this bridge is built it is the intention that Chester county and Union county will appropriate equal amounts and the balance of the cost to be paid by the public on a subscription list. The request was referred to the delegation without recommendation from the board.

Supervisor Anderson was asked by Attorney W. H. Newbold to officially sign a petition for a pardon for Gus Lee, who is serving a sentence on the chain gang. The board decided that if the trial judge, the trial jury and the solicitor would sign the petition the Supervisor would be instructed to sign same officially.

GERMANY WILL NOT MODIFY RIGORS OF U-BOAT DEFENSE.

Berlin, Feb. 4 (via London, Feb. 5).—According to information obtained in official quarters there is no prospect of any modification of German submarine regulations.

Peaceful continuance of German-American relations after the departure of the respective embassies at Washington and Berlin in the sensational manner indicated by President Wilson in his address to congress appears to be very slight, judging by all the information of the highest authenticity, gathered by the Associated Press.

It was stated positively in high political circles that the German offer for the conduct of a summing-up would not and should not be modified; that in Germany the determination to enforce the prohibitive zone order was absolute and final and that the only security for shipping was avoidance of the prohibited zone.

Germany, so the Associated Press was informed, resorted to this measure after the "shameful" rejection by the entente powers of peace overtures made after the official discussion and as the imperative necessity in defense of its threatened interests; Germany can not relinquish this weapon the only one promising a speedy end to the war—reliant as Germany was to take this step.

The government had hoped that the United States would see it in this light and was actuated by no animosity to the United States in its determination, Germany, therefore, so the high information of the Associated Press continues, is very keenly disappointed and grieved by the terms of Mr. Wilson's message, and the government can not after modifying the course upon which it has determined. This official addition:

"We can only hope and trust that American ships and American citizens will avoid the danger zones laid down in the German memorandum."

Stranger Killed by Southern Train.

Saturday afternoon, a white man said to be Ed Stratford, of Morganton, N. C. was struck and instantly killed by a Southern freight train No. 74, a short distance north of Blackstock.

It is said that the man was walking beside the track and just as the train approached stopped immediately in front of same, just whether he heard the train or not is unknown. Some being of the opinion that the man stopped on the track with suicidal intent. His body was horribly mangled.

The inquest was held by Magistrate C. C. Castle due to the fact that Coroner Gladden was indisposed.

CHURCH FINANCING.

It takes money of course to run a church, and in order to raise money for it there must be plans made and carried to a successful issue or the finances will not come. The object in raising money by a church for its current expenses is to maintain it or it should be two fold. First to get the funds needed, but this is not, and should not be the sole object, though

PLANNING A ROTATION SYSTEM

Legumes Are a Vital Part of Any Really Successful Plan.

The most important step we make in planning a rotation is getting away from the all-cotton system. The old idea that all other crops than cotton are merely "supplies" to enable us to raise more cotton must be abandoned completely if we are to work out our salvation in a good rotation. True, the farmer should grow as much of his own supplies as possible so as to be independent of the credit merchant, but if he can make any of the "supply" crops pay him a profit he should do so, I believe.

Most farms that have been planted almost entirely to cotton heretofore can easily be put into a three-year rotation, giving cotton one-third the land, corn one-third and wheat or oats one-third. Wheat is coming in its own right, and is being grown more by small farmers than has been the case for many years. The writer believes wheat to be an excellent crop for fitting into the rotation if the land is of the sort to produce it profitably. However, oats will be more profitable than wheat on sandy soils which are lacking in humus.

A three year rotation of corn, oats and cotton, if it is to be of any great benefit to the soil, calls for the sanding-in between the crops of a mass-crop-of-legumes as follows:—
The following spring, the land must be plowed and disked soon, and oats sowed about September or October. When the oats are cut the stubble should be planted at once to cowpeas or peanuts. If this were done merely as a protection to the soil, to prevent it being in the fall, it would pay well. Whatever is planted should be harvested in time to sow the land to crimson clover or a mixture of oats and vetch. This can be pastured in winter, of course, and then turned early in spring for the cotton crop.

Sow crimson clover on the cotton land—the cotton can be gathered early enough; if not, sow a mixture of oats and vetch. In spring, after pasturing, if needed, for pasturage, turn this under for corn and start the rotation again.

Thousands of farmers have made good with peanuts this year. Peanuts are now one of the easiest crops marketed we can grow, whereas a few years ago we had to market them on the hoof—that is, feed them to our hogs. Peanuts belong in the rotation of any Southern farm as a crop that can be grown after oats or wheat, by themselves, for grazing or marketing, or in the corn middle. It is a common practice in many sections to make corn rows six feet wide and plant peanuts between the rows. This should yield more direct cash returns than sowing peas or soy beans in the corn. Lespedeza is a crop that is making good in many sections of the South. One of the uses made of it is sowing it on oats about the time oats start their growth in the spring, and allowing it to grow for hay or pasture after the oats are cut. It is valuable when you have a stock that you wish to grow grazing crops for, and it always yields an excellent summer pasture. Sowed by itself on good land, it makes good crops of excellent hay.

The legume crops that are grown between the regular crops in the rotation should not be allowed to go to waste as is common on many farms. Many farmers, on growing an excellent crop of some legume, will cut it for hay and then sell it. This is very much better than not growing legumes at all, but it is not getting the most returns from them. To get the almost return from any rotation, growing legumes between the crops, calls for keeping livestock to graze such crops as are not fitted for making into hay, and to consume crops that can be made into hay. Taking the three-year rotation I have been described, the farmer can hay down the cowpeas or soy beans or peanuts that have been grown with the corn, or let all his stock run on the plot. After oats are cut, the hay can be stored up for use if they are large enough and, up to the time they start their spring growth, stock should not be allowed to graze there, however, in very wet weather, thus ruining the soil. Supposing Lespedeza to have been sowed on the oats, or soy beans, or cowpeas on the stubble, the farmer can be pastured for about two months in the summer. If peanuts have been planted, they can be hogged down. The whatever winter cover crop is used before and after the cotton can be pastured all winter.—Progressive Farmer.

When Dress is Standardized.
A grave danger threatens the men of this country—a menace so subtle that not everybody understands its nature or perceives its approach. I do not mean the influenza epidemic, but the danger of standardized dress. It is a danger that, at least to, warn the people, even if disaster cannot be averted.

A movement to "standardize" woman's dress has been undertaken by the wives of Stanford University professors who have formed a club for that purpose. By standardizing feminine apparel, class distinction will be a large extent obliterated and the changes of fickle fashion will no longer hold despotic sway.

To a superficial observer, it appears that the wearing of fine garments and costly ornaments by women had its origin in feminine vanity. A deeper insight reveals that it came about by reason of man's effort to prove to other men that he is manly.

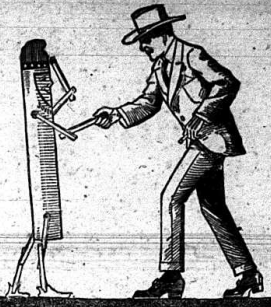

It is therefore, obvious that if women in their blindness go to work and standardize dress, they will automatically and simultaneously deprive men of almost the only method of display that is left to the male. By making all women look alike, they will reduce all men to a level.

The invention of gunpowder was the beginning of democracy. It was the first factor in the standardizing of men: it enabled the down-trodden to get out from under.

And now any man can go fast—just get in a car at least on a motorcycle. The man on the horseback is no longer a symbol of power, because all men are on wheels. A rich man hardly gets started in his limousine before some poorer rattles dustily past in a Ford.

Pity the meekness! How can they show off—except vicariously, with feathers and furs and things?—Anne Shepley third in Southern Woman's Magazine.

A Southern Gentleman Makes a New Friend

I was real tickled today—I made a new friend. And now you bet you, he's some tickled, too.

You see, he is a mighty good fellow—son of a big planter—has bundles of money; can buy anything he wants. And he knows all about tobacco!

He was telling around that he would give a heap for a cigarette that just hit his smoke taste. So I had them wrap me up and I went to the rich planter man.

"Sir, I am a real cigarette," I said. "I am sure you'll like me. I have good blood in my veins. I am of fine Virginia and Carolina stock and was raised in a clean, wholesome home. I am a gentleman of quality—the Quality of the South."

So the planter's son tried me and he liked me, because

You Folks of the South KNOW good blood!
You Folks of the South KNOW good tobacco!

Now my planter's son and I—we're real friends. He buys me regularly, and he tells everybody that you can't buy a better cigarette than SOVEREIGN at any price!

Why can't I be your friend, too? And, remember this—

I am guaranteed by The American Tobacco Co.—Buy me. If you don't like me return me to your dealer and get your money back. I have said it. A Southern gentleman is known the world over for keeping his word, and I have given you mine.
