Prisoner Escaped.

Josh Moody, of the great Falls company, a negro who was captured by J. R. P. Gibson to be placed in jail Monday evening on the charge of seriously cutting and slaying his wife's face, made his escape after reaching this city. The deputy brought the negro through the country in a buggy and drove to one of the three stables to have his horse tethered. Alighting from the buggy and while his back was turned, the negro, handcuffed, leaped out of the buggy and ran and was soon lost in the darkness. We have heard, though it cannot be reached for, that the negro made his way back to the Co. Co. Falls neighborhood that night and his handcuffs were removed by the negro that was killed, or one of the party who was shot. The negro was captured and left the neighborhood unaccompanied.

Chester Boy Dies.

In the preliminary contest at the Citadel Saturday evening, Mr. C. Corwell, of this city, was elected alternate orator to represent the institution at the annual oratorical contest of the various colleges of the state, which is to be held at Greenwood in April.

Cadet Nobdrin, who won first place, is a member of the class of 1907, while Mr. Corwell is only in his second year at the institution. During this short time, however, he has won several contests in declamation and oratory, and there is every reason to believe that speaker he will be a finished speaker.

Deaths.

Mrs. Margaret Brice Dead.

Mrs. Margaret Brice, widow of the late Wm. Brice, died at 3 o'clock this morning, Feb. 21, 1908, at the home of her son, Mr. W. White Brice, aged 73 years and eight months. She was stricken with paralysis nine years ago and for the past six years she has been almost entirely helpless. Mrs. Brice's maiden name was Hutchinson and she was born in Ireland. Her parents came to this country when she was three years old and settled in Fairfield county, where she made her home until 1860, when she came to her home here and has since made her home with her son, where through all her years of helplessness, she has been tenderly nursed by him and family and her daughter, Miss Nettie Brice.

Mrs. Brice is survived by five children: Dr. John Brice, of Kentucky; Mrs. Maggie Turner, of Winnsboro, Mr. W. W. Brice and Miss Nettie Brice, of this city, and Mr. W. H. Brice, of Rock Hill.

The funeral service will be at the residence on West End this afternoon at 4 o'clock, conducted by Rev. S. J. Carver, and the burial will be to Evergreen cemetery.

HOGLESS LARD

Nature made it, and made it right,—the just-right cooking-fat for all purposes,—the economical substitute for butter. There's no indigestible hog-fat in it. It's the pride of the South,—her leading agricultural contribution to international food-purity.

The Dead Mother.

The hour set for the funeral had come. The hearse with its black plumes stood at the farmhouse door. It seemed a strange and foreign thing among the bright-colored hollyhocks, the commonplace sunshine, the lowing of cows in the barnyard, and the chickens that were about upon the green lawn before the house. The Jersey wagons of the neighboring farmers tilted the road to the Garretts, were much respected.

Mrs. Garrett who had just died, was a "home body" and saw but little of her neighbors, but her husband had grown rich by great industry and close saving, and had pushed his children on in the world.

John, his oldest son, had been to college and the girls to a boarding school, and they were so improved that they seemed to belong to quite another class from their mother.

They had stood with their father as the coffin, to look for the last time at the woman who lay there.

"Your mother was a pretty woman when she was young," the farmer had said.

It had started him to see how thin and withered her face was under the white hair.

"She had ought to look so old," he said. He had not thought of her looks when she was young.

There was a certain sullen resentment under his grief that she was dead. How was he to do without her? She was a master hand at cooking and butter-making and laundry work and sewing. He had never thought to ask her if she needed help. She had never complained, and to complete her work she had risen at four and gone to bed late at night. Things always ran smoothly. She never spoke of her father, it started him when she took this cold and sank under it two days. The doctor said that all her strength was gone.

"Sarah had the strength for a woman," the husband declared. "Where had it gone?"

He was amazed and indignant. Was this the justice he should talk to a woman so useful in the world who had never complained, and who had so much for them. They had never heard her sob, and when she died, her lips were pale and cold, and her eyes were closed, and her hands were cold, and she had never complained, and to complete her work she had risen at four and gone to bed late at night.

"Idle Men and Idle Farms."

The recent great increase in the number of unemployed able-bodied men and the simultaneous cry from the farm districts for more work, draw sharp attention to an incongruous condition. The problem of inducing idled men to remain upon or return to the farms is one that becomes more difficult, and yet more important, every day. It must be solved, somehow, if the prosperity of the country is to continue.

It would be poor business policy, and worse charity, to feed the "army of the unemployed" in the large cities while the farms are lacking laborers. If any among the unemployed are sick, or unable to stand the strain of hard work, let other provisions be made for their relief.

The North Carolina Breaks Record.

Washington, Feb. 12.—The official report of the trial of the new armored cruiser North Carolina of the Virginia class Saturday night confirms the statement in the press dispatches that she averaged approximately 22.48 knots in her four hours' speed trial. It says that the trial was "a very successful one, although made in a heavy sea."

Although the speed made by the North Carolina is the best ever made by an American armored cruiser, her 15½-hull vessels of the same class have made much better records, running up to 24 knots an hour, and one of them, the Duke of Edinburgh, it was estimated, would make 27.5 knots.

Admiral Coker, president of the board of inspection and survey, and the results of the board which conducted the trial have returned to Washington and state the speed is the best ever made by an armored cruiser. He adds that the splendid run to the fact that plied cold was used, and that more lead was given to the steam valve of the engine than was used in the previous ones of the cruiser by the government is now guaranteed.
