Method of Protecting Peach Trees.
Dr. L. B. Owens yesterday furnished the State an interview upon the subject of protecting peach trees from late frosts—and especially the peach trees.

Dr. Owens said: "One of the greatest enemies of the peach tree is the late frosts which destroy the buds in the spring. Peach trees which yield a large profit can be protected in the following way, which is simple and inexpensive: All farmers have guano, cotton seed meal, cat manure, or any other material which they can purchase. They should mix up a solution of these materials in water, and spray the trees with it. This solution should be applied to the buds of the trees, and it will protect them from the late frosts. For instance, you have a tree five years old. It can be easily protected with six large sacks as follows: First, spread all the guano over the top of the tree in a strip of shape and envelope them in a strip of cloth, made from old sacks, but do not use any other material that is soft and will not cut into the limbs as a string or wire would do. Thereafter you get the tree into the shape of a cone, which is the important part as you can reduce a good sized tree into a small space by this method, you apply the guano as follows: Place one sack of guano in the bottom and top of the cone. Then put it around the trunk of the tree and draw the guano strip. Now you are ready to begin the vertical seam. Now push the cone over with a spike as a hook on the end, all around and to the top of the tree. The use of a string of guano and guano string tight at the top and you will be protected.

"A large tree that has stiff branches that can not be drawn in, can be made up separately, that is instead of having a number of small cones for each large branch, you would probably be able to remove the guano about April 1, unless spring is late. The cones can be put away for another year."

A Tame Wild Rabbit.
Two sportsmen lay in a Montgomery county field the other day, smoking and enjoying in the possession of a tame wild rabbit, the first of the Philadelphia Record. "Did you ever see a tame wild rabbit?" said one of the men. "No, they can't tame the wild ones," the other answered. "My boy used to have some domestic rabbits, though." "Well, my boy had a tame wild rabbit," said the first man. "How did you get it?" "Well, I was out for a walk one day, and I saw a wild rabbit come up to the porch and jump on my lap like a kitten. I tried to get it down, but it was so tame that it would come up to me and try to make you play with it. I saw when you took it out the little thing would make naturally for the woods and underbrush, though if it's a dog or if it would sit like the wild one for the house. A very tame wild rabbit. My boy kept it in the yard with a guinea pig and an alligator. Sometimes he would take all three out for an airing, and it was funny to see, on the pavement, going slowly along with the guinea pig and the alligator, and the rabbit in the middle. They were the best of friends, but some boys would not do that. I saw a boy the other day one night and killed them with an ax. That rabbit of my boy's was, I guess, the only wild one ever known to be tame."

Dr. A. MacNeil and His Cure.
Dr. A. MacNeil, a leading physician of New York City, has been making a report to the New York Academy of Medicine regarding his recent researches into the causes of mental degeneracy in school children. He puts a lot of blame on the front end of the brain, and says that it is the cause of degeneracy. He says:

"In concocting this work I was forcibly impressed by the co-operation of the brain, occupied by the cause of mental degeneracy of children. Alcohol, by destroying the integrity of the nerve structure, lowering the standard of organic relations, induces hereditary influences which, by continued transmission, gain momentum and leave their impact upon the brain and nervous system. Faculties are demoralized, physical energies hopelessly impaired and the moral nature becomes degenerate and dies."

Dr. MacNeil found that the children of drinking parents, but of abstaining grandparents, 75 per cent were dull; of the children of abstaining parents and grandmothers, 18 per cent were dull. All this tallied with other searches in Massachusetts, which demonstrated that forty-seven per cent of the offspring of such parents is found among children of drunkards. It is recalled that a former trustee of the Central Imbecile Asylum at Columbus, O., testified, in an article in the American issue, that he and Dr. Doren had concluded that there were not less than 4,000 imbeciles in the State as the result of fact that drinking parents more than double their chances of having idiotic children in comparison with total abstainers.

Protect the Robins.
The Audubon Society is devoting special attention to the protection and preservation of the robins, now reduced to a mere beggary handful in numbers. At the North the robin is a song bird, the harbinger of spring, and he is dear to millions there as he is dear to millions here. In the South the robin stands at the head of the insect-eating birds.

A Rule Without Exception.
During the panic a man in a New York City restaurant in Hartford, Conn., was charged with the possession of potato, 100 pounds of flour, 30 pounds of meat and some other articles of food to each family in his town and neighborhood. He was charged with his proposal that he would not give anything to any family which used whiskey or tobacco or kept a dog. No family had called on him to this day. On investigation it was found that no family who kept neither of these luxuries had any need. The Southern Carolina for whiskey, tobacco and dogs would not only run the government and thus save all taxes but would pay the cost of the food bill of the whole State. Let's vote for prohibition of all three of these articles.—Wilmington News and Herald.

Suspicious Character.
Friday, March 2, at a late hour Saturday night Police Officer Cain found three suspicious looking men loitering on the railroad track near the plant of the industrial Lumber Company and succeeded in arresting one of them. The man gave his name as P. W. Powell. On searching the man Cain found four small tin cans on him that can be compared only to burglar's kit. There were several stolen keys and a number of instruments for removing safes. The man was inserted from the inside. Every effort is now being made to capture the other two. It is believed that these are the men who burglarized the store of Mr. Hood in Blenheim on Friday night, an account of which appeared in the State Sunday morning. The stolen keys were found in the doors of several business houses here and opened them easily. In addition to these there seemed to be every kind of house and car, key on the bunch.—The State.

Don't Burn Money.
As soon as the season opens up, do not go out and commence to burn off your valuable matter. Burn off your old suits, hats, and shoes. It is a mistake to burn grass, corn stalks or cotton stalks. If you are able, buy the stalk cutter and use it. It will not be in the way of the plow or the growing crop. If you do not wish to purchase a stalk cutter, take some one's sticks and break them up. Many farmers think that they are doing something and in fact they are burning up money for nothing or for a small return. It is a mistake to burn grass, corn stalks or cotton stalks. If you are able, buy the stalk cutter and use it. It will not be in the way of the plow or the growing crop.

Sold Game Birds.
Sumter, March 2.—In the magistrate's court here today the case of the state against the Dixie Game Bird was tried for unlawfully offering for sale game birds. The state was represented by the attorney general. The defendant was charged with selling 150 birds, some of which were sold for $1.00 each. The state was successful in its case. The defendant was fined $100 and costs.
