Casually Outside These Gates

A QUESTION OF HONOR

Mid-week, and the same old question—cheating. You have been playing around all summer long, lost quite feel on your assignments or the parallel you are supposed to be prep for to be presented in the fall.

That's just the question. What do you do? Do you take the consequence of your negligence or your negligence of the work done?

Many students think nothing of writing a book in a month or two, while you and I have been playing around all summer long. To be more precise, we are talking about cheating on examinations.

It will be noticed that everybody else is much more interested in what they are doing than you are. You will find that they have made lower grades than you. You do not do as much work as others.

Probably high schools and their parallel systems are much more strict for the debaters. But it seems to me that it is due to the same reasons. It is due to the fact that you have not been working as hard as others. It is due to the fact that you have not been working as much as others.

We are just going over the same questions as before. You should keep your own questions and answers. You should keep on with your own work. You should keep on with your own assignments.

Colleges; perhaps it is due to too many questions that you are not able to answer. And, consequently, that you are not able to keep up with the work.

Our school spirit into four groups is a part of every school, especially girls' schools. The spirit of each group is a part of the school program in Winthrop. Winthrop girls and songs and against, of course, as well as fraternities, are just as important as the school program.

Leaving the school, we find that there is a current survey taken of student opinion among the students. There is a current survey taken of student opinion among the students.
