THE CABBAGE CAPITAL.

Surprising Facts About the Truck Industry—Something Doing All the Year Round.

Meggett isn't the biggest town on the map, and it makes no particular pretension to civic glory, but there is something doing there or thereabouts all the year around, and N. H. Billich does most of it, with C. M. Gibson pushing him close and the Garveys and the Towles' whose domain lies chiefly on the opposite side of Wadmalaw sound but whose enterprise can not be confined to one island—counting with a pretty likely share of activity. It is mostly in the way of cabbages, but there is right smart of potatoes, such, these and beans and peas and cucumbers and other good green stuff that keeps the Americans from becoming a scummy people. It moves over the highways during the season of three months, now about reaching its height, at the average rate of sixty-five carloads a day. Some days they average a carload of cabbages is exactly the produce of an acre of ground, as the planting is reckoned at Meggett, that is, say, it is two hundred crates of seventy heads each. The cars start out from Meggett with five tons of ice in it and that is replenished as needed along the way to its destination. It might be bound for Chicago, or New York or Boston or St. Paul, or any other center of population. Last week two or three carloads were sent to Montreal in Canada.

At Meggett there is a comfortable little frame building in which the offices of the British consular general are located. There is a telegraph operator in there at all key day, long and he is at the end of a leased wire which runs to all the great metropolises of the United States. The orders and the questions that come in over that wire every day don't astonish the natives of Meggett. They would startle the heads of some mighty big business concerns in metropolitan places. There is more excitement forwardly than there is here, rather than from any other station in the United States, and, of course, it is all in cabbages and potatoes and like fruit of the earth. The lines of the railroad from the spur tracks centering at Meggett's than from any other equal length of track on the whole Atlantic coast. The village Meggett is not a very big place, but it is worth its area in gold. In 1882 Norman H. Billich was working one of his farms on Wadmalaw island at twelve dollars a month. The next year he planted six acres on his account, in addition to doing the work for which he received $1,000 and he turned a profit of $1,000 on cabbages and potatoes. The next year he planted twenty-five acres. This year he has under cultivation fifteen hundred acres, five hundred in cabbages, five hundred and fifty in potatoes and five hundred in miscellaneous truck. He will cut five million cabbages, at least this year, at the rate of $200 so many as he has cut in any one year for several seasons past. He owns all the land on which he raises this produce, and some of it he has sold for twenty-five dollars an acre. He won't sell it now at any price, nor will he offer any other planter in the Meggett section. They know a good thing when they see it and they have made the lands on which they plant about as good a thing as anybody could want.

Comparatively few people in Charleston know what is doing about Meggett and Young's Island and across Wadmalaw sound and across the straits and on John's Island, or even on James Island, which is right across the bay from the city. It is only twenty miles down to Meggett, over a very fair road, as roads go to South Carolina, and an automobile can run it in an hour and a half. Billich and Gibson and most others go down in their own every day and come back in time for supper, or during the baseball season, in time to see the game at Hampton park. The Commodore M. Charleston should run their machines to the cabbage capital and see what is doing to make this region of magnificent resources, all tributary to this city, yield abundantly. It is an inspiring demonstration of the development of talents given by nature, to an intelligent people.—Charleston Post.

How to Avoid Appendicitis.

Most victims of appendicitis are those who are habitually constipated. Orin Laxative Fruit Syrup cures chronic constipation, cleans the liver and bowels and restores the natural action of the bowels. Orin Laxative Fruit Syrup does not nauseate or grip or irritate in mild and pleasant relief. Before additional.

Converted to Prohibition.

Mr. E. H. Saffell, of Newberry, one of the most prominent men of the state, an editor and a member of the legislature, a former member of the senate, was in Alaska last Tuesday. He states that after having seen John Dillon tried in the same way, he is convinced that it is a great improvement upon the discipline of the courts. Newberry would under no condition return to the liquor trade.—Athens Georgian.

Bleeding Candidates.

The poor candidate desirous of serving the dear people has a hard road to travel. We read the other day that each of the ten congressmen has been heard to utter a prayer to bring down the cause of prohibition. We do not know that this is true, but we would not be at all surprised if it is. Every-thing with a candidate for congress is the candidate's grief. The better the salary the stronger the pull. It makes not the slightest difference whether the candidate be in sympathy with the cause or not. If it has the power behind it he must open his pocketbook and tell them how to take and they take. Not using a calendar now or with the remotest prospect of being one, we can the more freely lift up our voice in behalf of this oppressed class of people. Brothers, if your church needs a new coat of paint, or your Sunday school some new songbooks, or your school-house some new desks, do not make the poor parties pay for a good cause. It is known he must have your votes. Put yourself in his place. How would you like to be placed under a threat of defeat? We hope they will come when some one will rise with demand enough to say to those who demand his estate as the price for his services the words, "No, I will not do it. If you want my service here it is, but you shall not have my service and my money too." A man like that is not a candidate for public service, and he would make it possible and agreeable for a poor man to aspire to office. As it is now the candidate is treated as a parasite, and handicapped in the race, because he cannot answer the clamorous demands of his fellow citizens with churches to support him and he must be a man of another object to foster and advance. pity the poor candidate, brethren, for his troubles have no end.—From Charity and Children.

A Twenty Year Sentence.

"I have just completed a twenty year health sentence, improved by Backen's Arabic Salve, which cured my bleeding piles, and twenty years ago," writes O. S. Woolver, of Le-Royville, N. C., Backen's Arabic Salve, which cured my bleeding piles, and twenty years ago, I was afflicted with hemorrhoids, wounds and cuts in the shortest time, using Backen's Drug Co. and S. Letter.

Restoring Worn-Out Land.

The method of gathering leaves and stewing them along the furrow advocated by E. H. Jordan, of N. C., Nov. 15, is too slow and tedious. Take a two-horse wagon, with side planks attached, as in hauling cotton, and fill the wagon with cotton bolls, one at one end. Instead of putting them in the furrow drive over the land and scatter them broadcast.

I will also break the land every year, and in the fall I would would subsoil it each year, going an inch or two deeper each year until about 18 inches has been reached. I could also use cow dung as a mulcher at the rate of two bushels per acre, and allow the vines to remain on the soil. Then in the fall I would use the Kintory Cur, and three or twelve cords of seed and three cords of lime.—Farm and Home.

Plenty of Trouble

It is caused by stagnation of the liver and bowels, to get rid of it send back Orin Laxative Fruit Syrup. That brings fluidity, take Dr. King's Life Pills, they will cure you. That do the work without straining or gripping. See at The Chester Drug Co. and S. Letter.

As to Bitties.

A man over in Anderson, S. C., claims to have invented and perfected a bottle which can be used in any room, empty, and some of the papers are making considerable admiration over it. He has the Augusta Herald quote as follows: "The inventor has not completed his work. 'If' comments the Herald, 'he could invent a bottle that could not be filled, he could use it in any case that could not be emptied. The two propositions, being together, they are the positive and negative sides of the same question. A bottle that should partake of the nature of the widow's cruse and always be full, no matter how much was drunk out of it, would be an invention that would mean something. It would revolutionize the world and make men think the millennium had come. Some other man would invent it."

Would not such a bottle be an indispensable tool to thirty Georgian boys about this time? We can fully imagine the delight of one of them if such could be applied with an always full bottle loaded with the first class white grape. John Young, Let the student get on the road and make a magnificent advertisement.

Two Helpless Classes.

We are entirely in accord with Charity and Children in its sympathy for the candidate. He is in need, he is the victim of every species of hearer and he is in need of help. Every body who wants money on any pre-text whatsoever presents a subscription paper to him, more frequently than otherwise in the presence of others, or makes demand on him by mail. If he declines to respond with alacrity and with all the evidence of joyfulness he is mean and loses votes, if he yields he does so under duress and people who have no claim upon it get his money. Whatever the alleged object, tribute is levied upon him and it is in a sense at the mercy of all who would fleece him. No man in a worse position to decline to give and not for his reason a demand upon for money and taking it under such circumstances is in a degree like robbing the deaf-blind.

There is another class which is like the victim of the hold-up game—the merchant class. The solicitor of alms-contributions if you want to call them so—regards the merchant as his prey. Doesn't he "steep the shirt" and isn't he therefor rich? The man who sells goods has first to pay for them, but these facts seem to be overlooked. If are they? It is more likely that assessment is levied upon the merchant for the same reason that it is upon the candidate. He is dependent upon public favor. To decline to give, whether he is able to give or not, may, no doubt often be to his own ruin.

This beggary ought to stop but it never will, for it is one of the ineradicable disappointments of humanity, and it is one of the things that make a man a disadvantage when we can—Charlotte Observer.

Curse of America.

The curse of America is its lack of discipline. In the family, the school and the college youngsters grow up to do as they please. There is a makeshift way of enforcing discipline and order and which prevents the old-fashioned, wholesome enforcement of authority among children and youth. In the home and in the school and in every school it is desirable to have some stringent regulations. If for no other reason than having them complied with. The best foundation for character is the habit of submission to authority, and the time to acquire this is in childhood and youth. None can ever become competent to wisely direct as those who have first learned to obey. The looseness and instability of American character has its beginning in the looseness and instability of family discipline and in the instability of its inefficient parents. The lack of discipline shall be carried into the schools, from which it easily extends into the colleges. The fledgling in college will turn out to be a more useful member of society. If he is made to behave himself, of course.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Mr. S. L. Bowen, of Wayne, W. Va., writes: "I was suffering from kidney disease so at times I could not get out of bed, and when I did I could not stand straight. I took Foley's Kidney Cure and in a few days part of the second cured me entirely. I have never had any more kidney troubles, where others are total failures. Letters Pharmacy."

Jordan Urges Reduction of Alcohol.

Atlanta, April 12.—President Barrie Jordan of the Southern Cotton Association in a statement made public today says that his association in connection with the Farmers' union has completed arrangements to hold the "vine" in Georgia. The Farmers' union cotton companies, the statement says, in Tennessee, Arkansas, Mississippi and Alabama have been urged to make arrangements with bankers in those states to finance any plant now held in Farmers' union warehouses. Similar results, continues the statement, are being secured in the cotton held by members of the Southern Cotton Association by the central headquarters and State divisions, and in the "vine" centralized. President Jordan concludes his statement as follows: "I cannot too freely expublish the 'vine' and in the vineyard, cutting down the cotton acreage and preventing a serious crisis next winter."

Death Was on His Heels.

Jeets P. Morris, of Skipper, Va., had a close call in the spring of 1907. He says, "AN attack of rheumatism left me so weak with such a fearful pain in my joints that I could not get up. I was unable to move, and the consumption had me, and death was on my heels. Then I was persuaded to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They helped me immediately, and after taking a few more I was able to get up. I found out that New Discovery is the same remedy that cured me. It is the best I have in the world. Sold under guarantee at The Chester Drug Co., T. S. Letter, No. 108 and 6130, Atlanta, Ga. It is."

WINE IN BIBLE TIMES.

The Use of Intoxicating Drinks in Bible Times Was Not Accompanied by as Many Dangers as It Is at This Time.

[Written for Y. P. C. U., Elmwood, S. C., April 12, 1908, by G. W. Johnston.]

To prove the above assertion, we must first see what it is that makes the use of alcoholic beverages dangerous. Surely wine is the fruit of the vine and God's gift to man. Corn and grapes with all of their products are from God. The distilling of corn—is it not taught of God? Surely all wisdom in fact, we are urged, is from God. However, despite these facts, we find ourselves wanting to deride of these products of nature; we wish men had never known how to make wine nor how to distill whiskey. Corn and grapes, of course, can not be bottled, as it were, upon the fruits of the earth, the july grapes or the ripening corn. The trouble is with man. When he forgets the Giver of these gifts and misuses them, then they would be better if he had never had them. But then, we read of Christ himself, when he is to be served at the marriage supper at Cana. We also infer from Peter's statement on the day of Pentecost that it was no unusual thing for the Jews of Jerusalem to drink wine at their meals. We also note that the apostle did not speak of this in a disapproving manner. The wine of the candidate for public office was in fact a law, where it is the trouble. It is with the man again. If the wine be not changed then the man is changed. Now let us see what the danger was so widely used at the time of Bible History? It was upon the approval of best Christians and even Christ himself, when he is to be served at the marriage supper at Cana. The question is, in an article, "What is the cause of the trouble?" The answer is, "The trouble is the result of the action of the people." The cause of the trouble is the result of the action of the people.

Run Over by Street Car.
Mary, the little seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Cherry, met with quite a bad accident Monday morning in front of her home on Oakland avenue. The manner in which the accident occurred cannot be ascertained, but it is thought that the little girl was standing on the step of the car, and when the car moved off the lot, her father, she fell to the ground and her right hand was run over, breaking two bones of the member and bruising it considerably—Rock Hill Herald.

Death from Coughing.
Lancaster, April 15.—Mr. Frank P. Giles died suddenly at his home here last night about 10 o'clock. Mr. Giles was enjoying his accustomed good health a few minutes before and attended to his business yesterday as usual. He was taken with a violent coughing spell about 10 o'clock and died in about five minutes. He probably buried a blood vessel. Mr. Giles was a gentleman—one of Lancaster's best citizens, and his death was a great shock to his host of friends. His remains were interred to Rock Hill this afternoon for cremation.—Special to The State.

Summer Styles Will Please Americans.

The new modes are more likely to be of the conservative style than the former. The latter desire constant change, striking novelties. In this style will be disappointed, for no revolutionary modes have been introduced. The American, on the contrary, knows when she is well suited and has no desire to change assured styles for those that may prove less becoming, says the Delineator for May.

In the tailored gowns that will be affected by both the American and the Parisienne, there are two distinct classes: one is characteristically English, elegant but irreproachably tasteful; the other is quite as distinctly Parisian.

The English suits, as one might expect, are very smart, very well turned out, rather on the order of the riding habit. They employ checks and stripes in light-weight serges, wools and hosiery. Homages also are prominent, showing a great deal of black against a somber background.

One of the coats is quite severe—the cutaway most affected by the ultra-smart. This fastens with three buttons, again with one and a half often hardly be seen, so fasten at all. It simply meets at a point high on the bust.

Sleeves vary to some extent. One is fitted and is hardly be seen, leaving that pervades the flat-shouldered Japanese effect, and the plain coat shows practically without flaring.

With the severe tailleur one will find either the gored circular skirt or the plaited skirt quite noticeably liked in Philadelphia last Thursday of the 13th. Mr. Watson selected 33, the rest being divided between Virginia and North Carolina.

One of the most interesting of the other farming sections of England has advertised the South with grotesque views and with booklets and this state has received five copies of the publicity. Over 2,000 letters have been sent to Virginia during that time. Commissioner Watson, however, has waited until the best of those selected would arrive. Last month he received a telegram from Capt. Allen Thompson, Virginia and North Carolina for three years.

WOLVES FEAR IRON.

A Piece of the Metal Will Keep the Animals From Any Carcass.

The early days of the world were comparatively unscientific, and it was easy to trap or poison them. They knew nothing of the better composition of the modern drugs, designed to spread among the wolves. They learned how to detect and defy the traps, and how to avoid the poisons. They knew how to detect and defy the traps, and how to avoid the poisons. They knew how to detect and defy the traps, and how to avoid the poisons.

TIME TO ACT.

Don't Wait for the Fatal Stages of Kidney Illness.

Occasional attacks of backache, irregular bladder action, headache and dizziness are common early symptoms of kidney disease. If neglected, they may pass off as a flimsy but return with increased intensity. If there are symptoms of dropsy—puffy swellings about the face, ankles, or any part of the body, don't neglect them. Begin taking Doan's Kidney Pills at once. They will, when the kidneys are well, and stop all the trouble.

Families Come From England.

Commissioner Watson returned from a recent trip to England bringing with him 33 English settlers, the line the States worked for since the establishment of the Department of Immigration, commerce and agriculture. The arrival of the colony of English immigrants opens the way for hundreds of those new comers should the people of the state desire them and is the successful ending of a campaign of advertising conducted by Capt. Allen Thompson, Virginia and North Carolina for three years.

He Got What He Needed.

"Nine years ago I looked as if my time had come," says Mr. C. Partridge of the Lincoln County, New Jersey. "I had been sick for five or six months, and my doctor had given up on me. I had tried all kinds of medicine, but nothing helped. I was in bed all the time, and my appetite was gone. I had lost all my weight, and I was so weak that I couldn't get up. I had been told of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I decided to try them. I bought a bottle and I got what I needed. In ten days I was up, and in a month I was as well as ever. Over 2,000 letters have been sent to Virginia during that time. Commissioner Watson, however, has waited until the best of those selected would arrive. Last month he received a telegram from Capt. Thompson stating that he would arrive at Philadelphia in a few days and at once he made arrangements to meet them.

He Got What He Needed.

"Nine years ago I looked as if my time had come," says Mr. C. Partridge of the Lincoln County, New Jersey. "I had been sick for five or six months, and my doctor had given up on me. I had tried all kinds of medicine, but nothing helped. I was in bed all the time, and my appetite was gone. I had lost all my weight, and I was so weak that I couldn't get up. I had been told of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I decided to try them. I bought a bottle and I got what I needed. In ten days I was up, and in a month I was as well as ever. "The Lesson That Was Taught to Henry Ward Beecher."

Henry Ward Beecher used to tell the story of the time in which his own faith was tested. He was in a boat on the ocean, and the boat was sinking. He had no other recourse but to depend upon himself.
