BElIEVING that undergraduates know very little of the life and problems of their fellow students, the Woman's Club of Greenville, S.C., having heard of a series of illustrated stories describing student life at the leading universities in the many lands of the world, decided to organize a similar series to be published in The Carolina Literary Journal, the magazine of the South Carolina Student Voluntary Assistance Bureau.

The world is too small for any one nation — especially one as the United States — to have a monopoly of the world's cleverest brains, of the best workers, or of the finest ideas, and it seems desirable to all progressive people that the students in other countries are looking at identified problems.

Far East

Twentieth articles, dealing with 10 countries, comprise the series. As England is so readily accessible and the language is familiar to the student, the writer, Miss Margaret C. O'Leary, has undertaken the work of describing the life of the American student at Oxford and Cambridge for the first articles.

In a letter published in a recent issue of the Baptist Review, Miss Margaret C. O'Leary, daughter of the late Dr. James B. O'Leary, who graduated at Winthrop, alluded to her experiences of a year as a student in England, and in the course of her remarks, Miss Margaret C. O'Leary said:

"I have no doubt that good literature is the best of all gifts to students. It will improve our citizens, and the object of this series is to acquaint students with the world of thought and progress.

"In the column, students are given an opportunity to express their ideas and to place their articles for publication in the magazine. This will be of great benefit to the students, and will be of great assistance to all students, since they will be able to express their opinions and to influence other students by their writings.

"In conclusion, I would like to say that I am very grateful to the Editor of the Carolina Literary Journal for allowing me to write these articles, and I hope that my students will enjoy them and will be encouraged to write their own articles for the magazine.

"Thank you for your interest in my work, and I hope that you will continue to support the Carolina Literary Journal and the Student Voluntary Assistance Bureau.

"Yours sincerely,

"Margaret C. O'Leary, England"

The essays are written in a fluent and knowledgeable manner, and the students will find them interesting and informative. The series is a welcome addition to the literary world, and it is hoped that it will prove to be a useful tool in the education of students.

BRYAN WOODFORD

ATTENDANCE OF THE F.I.L.

In a letter written to the President of the United States, Bryan Woodford, a native of Greenville, S.C., stated that he had been greatly disappointed in the attendance of the F.I.L. at the recent conference in Washington, D.C.

"I am writing to express my disappointment in the attendance of the F.I.L. at the recent conference in Washington, D.C. It is my understanding that the F.I.L. is one of the most important organizations in the world, and it is therefore unfortunate that so few of its members could attend.

"In conclusion, I would like to say that I am deeply disappointed in the attendance of the F.I.L. at the recent conference, and I hope that in the future more of its members will attend similar conferences.

"Thank you for your time and attention.

"Yours sincerely,

"Bryan Woodford, Greenville, S.C."
Self-Government Association of the Constitution, By-Laws and student responsibility in upholding them. For instance, the Student Government handbook includes those who have literary ability and are demanding by student standards of the college and from the dignity of a marshal. There is an optimistic strain in many of the writings of these men,—their affection for ice cream. I'm like a bear to think of graduating without a chance to build a gong again. The builder lifted his old gray head, our line of fresh greens, vegetables, and fruits. The newest shades. Our line of fresh greens, vegetables, and fruits. The newest shades. Our line of fresh greens, vegetables, and fruits.
