Brock and Engineer J. H. Stannard, both of this city, turned over exactly opposite the telegraph office at "Wainsboro." The train had been reported "safe" by the operator at that point and following on this message were the words "the engine has turned over into the ditch." The rains had washed the tracks almost completely away and on top of the rails were piled tons of sand. No one was hurt, although the early morning trains for Charlotte and the north were detained by way of Spartanburg. The tracks were cleared by noon yesterday.—The State.
