Another Fire.

Chester was the scene of an other fire about 9 o'clock last Fri day evening. This time it was tenement houses near the S. A. L. depot belonging to Mrs. Namie Neal. The fire started from the explosion of a lamp which had been left burning in one of the houses while all the occupants were away. The distance to the water supply and the difficulties which had to be encountered by the firemen to ge there gave the fire such a start tha ises were consumed befor could be checked. nothing much saved out house but from the others the great er part of their belongings were saved. We understand Mrs. Neal had sufficient insurance to cover the loss but owing to the advance in the price of lumber the houses could not be replaced for the same

With Apologies to the Smokers.

The Journal has caught it coming and going because we made some remarks in last week's paper to the effect that week's paper to the effect that we saw a clerk in a store trying to wait on a customer with a cigar in his mouth, and that it did not increase our confidence in the business management of the concern. The picture to us was a rediculous one. The cigar went first from the man's mouth to his ingers, and then it was laid on the shelf while he fumbled to get the goods, and back it went to his mouth to be such a capable to good, and back it went to his mouth to be such a capable to good, and so on and so on. But as neither of the gentlemen who attacked us was referred to, and since we have escaped thus far, we wish it distinctly understood that we did not say that the house referred to was in Green wood, and we are not going to say so either. The merchants of Greenwood are surely too business like to allow such a thing, and there is not a clerk in town who would smoke in the store during business hours, even though the proprietors might not object to his doing 50. Now we are out of it, and we shall not be caught again if we can help it.—Greenwood Journal.
