DYNAMITE IN WAR. Recent Experiments-Opinion a

to Future Use. WASHINGTON, July 10 .- There are many points regarding modern fighting ships on which naval mer are at odds. The idea in naval con-struction that looks forceful today may be weakened by an event that takes place tomorrow. There are mighty engines of destruction in use in modern ravies whose effectiveness is practically untested.

Theorizing on the effect of the dynamite guns of our Vesuvius, the naval men are brouget face to face the questions of a battleship be blown to pieces by that may single explosive from this new demon of the sea ?" For it is a fact that one shot from the Vesuvius landing squarely on the deck of the most strongly protected vessel afloat would sink her as surely as though her thick steel sides were mere match-boarding.

the Vesuvius failed to land nearer than 30 feet of an armored vessel, to itself, and from that moment the place the vessel out of action, dis-locating her machinery and rending ram had never been. That threat her gun gear apart.

e Vesuvius has had an oppor tunity of testing her dynamite guns on stationa y forts during the recent bombardments by Admiral Sampson's ships, and the result has been sufficiently appalling to show that the dynamite gun is a factor in naval warfore that seems likely to revolutionize warship construction in a way that has not been done since vooden vessels became obso

And again the theorists, delving deeper into the question, ask: "Why should not dynamite guns be extensively used on land as well as sea?' a charge as one of the three guns of the Vesuvius throws would annihilate a regiment of men. These being theories needing only opportunity to be capable of practical de-monstration, the students of modern means of killing men are turning confidently to the high explosive as the war projectile of the future. INTERESTING EXPERIMENTS

Important experiments have been e by the board of ordnance to test the possibility of using high explosives in battle. In a recent re-port it is stated: "Experiments are now in progress under the auspices of this board with a view to discharging high, explosives from powder guns. The batteries of these guns that have been erected at Fort Hancock and Fort Scott, San Francisco, have shown that these guns are capable of throwing 100 p unds of nitro-gelatine a distance of 4,800 yards, 200 pounds 3,500 yards, and 500 pounds 12,000 yards with great accuracy. "The board, however, has not abandoned the expectation of some time being able to discharge aeriel torpedoes of great capacity. from powder guns, and experiments with that end in view will be continued."

with shells loaded with gu cotton it is statedy / "Believing that the action of these substances, fired from 12-inch steel mortars, with a 1,000 pound torpedo shell, holding large charges, would be even mor tusive than results obtained from posed to fire three rounds each from this mortan. The charge, of we gun cotton was 117 pounds, and the propelling charge forty-nine pounds of smokeless powder, the resulting nds per square inch, and estimated velocity 12,000 foot seconds." The awful effect of these projectiles can be imagi

Another problem with which the that wicked explosive, the torpedo weilt in the proved such a miserable disappointment to those who expected so much from it. Writing on this important subject, a well known naval officer says: "At present we are in face of that tremendous prob lem as to whether the torpedo is to rise to the position of governing type, as the ram did; and whether supposing opinion places it in that position once held by the ram, that will be its true and lasting position or whether it will rise to power only to fall again, as the ram did. It was at an early date proposed to build rams pure and simple to contend with, and so to supersede the -iron clad battleship. They were to have been small, swift, and but lighty armored—just sufficiently armored, In fact, to insure that a numerous and yet not effective fire could be employed against thsm by the battle ship. ion is wrong. "The point is that this is only one of the many questions vital to the future of naval war, yet we do not know anything about it in real-The immense progress that ity. has been made in increasing the propulsive power of the pound of coa destroyed sail power, and there is no reason to suppose that development has ceased. It has, by greatly add ing to the speed of the torpeco boat or vessel, greatly stren, hened the threat of that instrument of war, as against the battleship, and not im possibly may destroy the type. In tne torpedo itself, the improvement has been immense; it has a straight er, longer, and more certain trajec tory than it originally had, and travels at much greater speed. The ex periments now going on in applying the gyroscope to the rudder may possibly extend the effective range of the weapon to 1,000 yards. The destructive effect from a blow of the weapon has been continuously increased by enlarging the charge. On the other hand, the improvement or the anti-torpedo boat gun may real ly be a complete answer to the torpedo boat. The maximum auto matic 37-mm. gun has been brought up to a fire of 300 pounds per min-ute; and with smokeless powder, this terrible stream of fire is sure to be much more accurate and deadly than that of the Nordenfeldt gun configurate peenile suren()

The story of Cervera's attempt to escape is an interesting one and us, is told briefly by the commander of that the frigate Adodpho Centrores, a prisoner on board the converted vacht Vixen, taken off the Cristobal Colon. Chief Engineer Stanford E. Moses of the Vixen acted as interpreter for the correspondent of the Associated Press, the conversation being in the international language of the navy, French. Commi

Centrores told this interesting story "It is not true that the heavy fire of the American ships drove us out,

Beside the accident to the Reinna Mercedes we had no casualties. The dynamite shells of the Vesuvius did no damage except to terrorize people. A shell did not strike Smyth Cavo at all, but hit near the base (Sic.) We arrived in Santiago harbor on the 19th of May. We did not know that our whereabouts were a secret. We made no attempt to hide or cover up our plans. We simply took easy stages to get to We Cuba. It was frightfully hot in the harbor and we suffered greatly We made no attempt to get out and did not use our torpedo boats, as all our machinery was defective and we were trying to repair it. frequent bombardments by the American ships resulted in quite a los of life but did little other damage. the batteries were not harmed to any extent. It is not true that we dismounted our ship guns. The Reina Mercede's guns were all on the forts when Commodore Schley arrived. Gn Saturday, the 28th of May we got word that Schley had left Cienfuegos for Santiago and we started to go out. The news had come too late, as Schley had left a couple of his ships to act as decoys before Cienfuegos and in the mean time had come down here. On Sun-day morning, May 29th, we found Schley blockading our way. It was then Cervera's intention to come out and give battle, but General Linares and the citizens objected and we stayed." "What about the Hobson expedition ?" was asked.

"Well, we were very much sur orised and at the first alarm believ rival of the great American fleet, did not believe it wise to go out and try to fight it. He urged that the best policy for the fleet was to hold the harbor against the enemy and be ready by an inflading fire over the hill tops to drive back the invading army. At first the people in Santiago believed this wise, but provisions ran short, dispatch after urday last a conference was held on the officers of the fleet were present, Admiral Cervera announced his intention of going out and it was decided to try it that night. The west end of the blockading station was chosen because it was thought that the Brooklyn, being light in protection, would be the easiest to sink and as she was fast would be best out of the way.'

Then one of the other officers add od. "We never thought that the Brooklyn's battery was so terrible or that she would attempt to fight all of us. She was a frighful sight when all her guns were going."

Southern Valor. H. Bryan in Atlanta Constitution

When the old Confederates mee in Atlanta next month there will be tears of joy shed over the victories that Southern blood is achieving in the present conflict between this country and Spain. It is a pardon able pride that causes the 'blood in Southern veins to leap faster along when the wires flash fresh from the field of battle the story of some new and daring exploit executed by a son of the South. We of the South have always known the valor of our people, as well as their loyalty to the American eagle; but we have been living so long beneath the mis-representation of Northern and and Eastern political mountebanks, that the world, especially Spain, has come to look upon us as a band of rebels who were waiting only for an opportune time to strike a death low at the stars and stripes.

When those huge wire cables which linked Cuba to the outside world were to be cut it was a South ern boy who led the schooner up to and beneath the fire of guns of Ci-North Carolina who fell, When Cervera with his fleet had anchored tions. in the harbor of Santiago and AJmiral Sampson wanted the cork put into the neck of the bottle, it was a Southern boy who planned the work and executed it beneath the most deadly fire that has yet issued from Spanish guns. Sometimes people get the idea that on account of the English language having so many borrowed words in it that is just a "conglomeration" of diverse elements, but this idea is very erroneous. There is no language that is more essentially its own than English. Its con struction and arrangement is peculiar. Its grammar is English. All words that were borrowed in the early-stages of its growth were anglicised before they were appropriated. Our every day words, the words of our homes, is English. They are the most forcible and most beautiful words in our lan guage, or in any other language.

Is it right for South Carolina to sell liquor to ber sons that they may drink and become drunkards?

The Blight of the Cup.

Speaking of the blighting effect of the wine-cup on gifted natures, a writer in a popular journal said, a few years ago :

There is a form of intemperance which cannot be described in the police report by those horrible words, 'A simple drunk.' The police do not see it, or, if they do, they and killed the dog as if by a blow call a carriage and carry it home, upon the head. It was a blow in If does not wear ragged clothes and the head. reel along the highway. King's palaces conceal it; venerable colleges cast over it the austere mantle gray antiquity; distinguished clubs give it scope and privacy It blights the very flower of our race, and few ever know the worm in the bud that does the mischief.

"We love to decorate our vices with fine names."

"When a great genius deterior in its prime, and fails just when naturally it would shine its brightest and do its best, we do not like to attribute the premature ob scuration to a cause so common place as the indulgence of a morbid appetite for strong drink. W would gladly decorate it with a finer name. 1A scene in London was describ-ed to me awhile ago by a late val-ued contributor to this periodical. It occurred about 3 o'clock in the morning at a dinner party-party of some of the brightest spirits of our time. The king of the feast was the first of living writers in his kind of literature, and his name is honored now wherever the English language is read, and far beyond its He was a man in the prime of his years, but in the wane of his powers, for he marred his admirable talents, he dulled his fine sens , he obscured the light within m by gluttony and winebibbing. ""I am cursed with an appetite, he would say. 'When I leave the dinner table it is with a feeling that would like to begin and do it all over again."

"He sat upright at the table at three o'clock in the morning, for he a peculiarity of constitution which, as he said, made his legs drunk long before his head was touched. He was still talking gaily, if not brilliantly, though he could ot move from his chair. His carrage was announced. It was his own carriage, for he was then at the summit of his prosperity. His two mer servants, who knew well what they had to do, for they had had much practice in doing it, came up stairs into the the dining-room with his hat and shawl.

"They drew back his chair, put on his hat, lifted his giant form in their arms and carried him down carriage door. His America friend followed, dumb with astonish-Astounded as he was, he could not help remarking the familiar dexterity with which the servants performed their work. with which the two

"There, on the sidewalk, the brilliant and famous author, the pride of his county, fell upon the neck of his friend, hugged, kissed, and blubbered over him and refused to get into the carriage. After a while, however, partly by humor-ng hun, partly by force, the men inted and pushed him on. On eaching his home a similar scene urred, and the day had begun to before the two servants suc eded in getting him up stars to a own room. "A few months after he died sud-may of a disease caused and hour-such a man, so well gifted and well-disposed to use his gifts for the public good should pass away in his prime was a melancholy event, indeed; but it was not the worst consequence of his bad, habits. They marred and lowered all of his, writings, even his best, and his former power. The reason of this is now well known. Several men of science have pursued courses of experiment with a view to ascertain the precise work of alcholic drinks in the human system. There was an English Dr. Percy who injected two ounces and a half of alcohol in the stomach of a dog. The animal dropped dead, whereupon the doctor instantly removed the brain, and distilled from it a very large proportion of the alcohol which he had administered. "The alcohol, as the doctor remarked, had rushed to the brain

General "Joe" Wheeler.

The first communications receiv ed by Gen, Shafter from in front of Santiago were signed "Wheeler." They came 'from General "Joe" Wheeler, in command of the advance guard of the American troops As stories of heroes are the order of the day, that of this hero is appropriate.

Gen Wheeler was one of the ardent advocates in congress of freedom of Cuba. He spoke with earnestness in the debates, and whenever opportunity offered he voted in accordance with his senti-Seeing that war was inments. evitable, he offered his services to the government even before war was declared. His, indeed, was the first applicant placed on file. A graduate of West Point, distinguished for his valor shown in the army of the Confederacy, he had knowl edge and experience for field service which he knew would profit his government, and although he had reached an age enfitting him to rest he asked for an assignment which would send him at once to the front.

The president gladly complied ith the veteran's wishes, and with clapped the deserved two stars on his shoulders. General Wheeler was off at once. He was in camp at Chickamauga the following week getting his command in shape. was among the first to proceed to th Florida coast, and was chosen then to go with the first expedition to Cuba. He was among the first ashore in Cuba, and was placed by General Shafter in command of the dvance guard. So that the splendid dash of the American troops which, to the admiration of the countrymen and to the amazement of their enemies, has carried them almost at a bound to within plain ight of Santiago, has been directed in part by this plucky representative of the true American spirit.

General Wheeler is sixty-two years old. Two moths ago he was Was serving in the house from the 8th Alabama district, and had not drawn a sworn in battle for thirty-three years. In a day he pass d from the council to the camp, and is now in the front rank in the thick of way again. It is stuff like this to which the world pays tribute everywhere Alabama is reaping a liberal share of glory, but no more than she is deserving .- Washington Star.

The Latter Day Jerusalem.

When I landed at Yafa, I first be gan to open my eyes in regard to the Holy Land. This is a seaport town, and it is dirty and filthy and over-run with beggars who have their "mit" out on every corner. In the middle of winter, when a a light snow was falling, the Arabs vearing cheap, cotton would stand around and shiver Everybody shived for that matter for I never saw a store or fireplace in the town. Excuse me from go-ing to Jerusalem again for pleasure. I was disgusted with the place on account of its fifthy streets and foul noisome odors .- "Story of a Ra Iumed Traveler." 18 98 000

RICHES IN TRIFLES. ome Big Fortunes That Have Come From Little Inventions.

It has become almost an axiom with the majority that larges for-tunes are to be raised from simple inventions than from difficult and expensive inventions that involve a great outlay of money to manufac-This is to a certain extent ture. true, A certain' American patent for fastening kid gloves has yielded a fortune of several hundred thou sand dollars for its fortunate owner, and the inventor of a collar clasp enjoys $20,000 royalty a year as the reward for his endeavor. A new kind of sleeve button has made $10,000 in five years for its paten tee, and the simple twisting of safe ty pins in such a way that there is no possible danger of the point sticking in the child promises to enthe point rich its owner beyond any of his dreams of wealth. A man one day turned a piece of wire so as to hold a cork more securely in a bottle and forthwith somebody saw a brilliant idea and patentented the modern wire stopper-holder, which is not used annually on several million bottles. The accidental bending, of a hairpin by a woman to prevent it from sliding out of her hair so easily, produced a fortune for her husnd, who immediately saw the pos sibilities of a crinkled hairpin for women.

Instances could be multiplied in definitely of large fortunes being made from small inventions, bu fortunately for those idventors whi make a life-study of intricate, prob lems of mechanics and disdain to waste their talents upon trivial. popular articles of the day there. Is often also ample reward held in store for the products that take years to produce and which revolu tionize existing methods of industry and mechanics.

Edison has reaped honors and riches of a princely character from his discoveries; McCormick has re alized in his reapers the fortunes of a millionaire; the Corliss engine brought bonors and decorations to its inventor and enabled him amass a great fortune in a few years; Professor Bell found in his telephone not only the consummation of his early hopes and ambitions, but a substantial pecuniary reward; harveyized steel armor has become synonymous with the in ventor's name, and it brings an an nual income of huge proportions to its discoverer; Elias Howe, the in ventor of the sewing machine, real ized over $2,000,000 from his in ventions, and Nikola Tesla, though still young, and rich in promises, finds an abundance of money in his vork .- George Ethelbert Walsh, in Cassier's Magazine.
