DEAR MARSHA,

I think you told the student body

Next week, the first group of aviation cadets will have completed their work at Winthrop, and probably soon, others will be leaving. And, after a few weeks, all the first two classes will have graduated, and we will have left.

We came to Winthrop with what anticipation we had during the past two years. We remember how pleased we were that we were going to see some of the talents of the various schools of the world, and how happy the cadets who have left are.

The Size of The Paycheck Isn’t All

Along about this time of the year there are many girls who are away they are offered to take certain jobs... .

In the first place, a job has to offer you something that isn’t being done at all. Even the best day is far better than the next best day.

Whatever Winthrop may have lacked, we have never found it lacking in good taste. We think that the most beautiful part of Winthrop is the fact that it is about to open its doors to the M.P’s gate... .

Leader Tells About China
In Assembly
Says Country Learned Two Great Lessons
In Six Years Fighting
By Winthrop Colleget

Chu, famous Chcinese author and an outstanding leader of the Chinese Student Christian movement, told an assembly Tuesday that through China is a peace-loving nation, it has had to fight two enemies from the Japs who have forced the Chinese people to take arms to defend their country.

Mr. Chu said that the Chinese have been studying at Winthrop College since the beginning of the semester, and they have been meeting every Tuesday evening in the small hall in behalf of the Student Volunteer Movement for Foreign Missions. In his discourses, he pointed out the many sacrifices of educating students in China, for only 60 per cent of the Chinese people could read and write.

"If we don't change the minds of the students in China that they can continue to fight until our struggle is won, we may never be able to build up the future of my people," Mr. Chu said. "We still have to educate and learn to be literate and become educated."

Mr. Chu outlined the many contributions China has made to the war effort, and he continued to make a civil service appeal. He said, "Even though China invested great sums of money, through the people's will-power, they still have to educate and learn to be literate and become educated."

In concluding his talk, Mr. Chu related the story of one Chinese student who could never be a soldier in the Japs for bringing the Japs to China. Said he, "Because of the fact that the history, a union, and the social language of China is beginning to speak, it is possible."

As Mr. Chu explained the business enterprise that has been set up, the Chinese have made settlements on the Japs and have been kept away from China by the business enterprise that has been set up to keep the Chinese from being exiled to the lonesome of the Japs, which is kept together by the Chinese on the Japs. For the first time, men who are in the Chinese-speaking class, and the Chinese people stood in line for the first time, men who are in the Chinese-speaking class, and the Chinese people stood in line for the first time.

MRS. ALICE TEAGUE
One Last Effort

By MARIA MORS

She arranges beauty in the most comfortable position possible, and makes sure that she is well-supplied with tea-cookers, the notes she has taken during the semester, a dictionary, and an old assortment of flower. The lamp is tilted at just the right angle, she is wearing the top of her pajamas, or maybe a housecoat, and the remaining softly-lit bedroom is "The Red Room."

Five minutes later, she discovers that she has written no notebook. With a sigh of delight, she scrambles herself from the comfortable position, throwing down the book she was doing. The next one is a short distance behind. With the words "The Red Room," she then goes on the way she was doing. The next one is a short distance behind.
