On the other hand, if you wish to use that tongue in biaspheming the name of God, in breaking the hame of God, in Dreaking the hearts of your fellowmen, in sowing seeds of vice and discord, in retard-ing the workings of those things that make for peace, you can doe. You can unbridle your tongue and let it spread its deadly poison, every-where. and still go unmolested by where, and still go unmolested by the law of man, just so you do not make your remerks too personal. But the law of God requires that the forgue be bidded. The blasphamer, the defamer, the peacharker—all who make an under use of the tongue, will be severely judged by God. The tongue belongs to God, and no man has the right to use it as he pleases to use it in a way that meets God's paproval. SOUTHERN MILLS

The South Produces not only the Cotton but Skillful Men to Work. It Up.

Some interest attaches to the views of the editor of the Macon, Os., Telegraph given telow:
"The New Orleans Picayune, discussing the great strike at Fell River, Mass., involving 25,000 workers, makes the point that the reduction of wages sought by em-ployers there has been necessitated ployers there has been necessitated by the competition of Southern mills. "This contention by the manufacturer," says the Picayune, "that Southern competition is a material cause of their officialists is a fact that is coming to be recognized." The Picayune further says that "the advantages enjoyed by the south for cotton manufacturers as the content of the participant of the south for cotton manufacturers. are too great to be overcome, [and the result will be that the time will come when it will have to be trans-ferred to the south. the Northern mills will find it to their interest to emigrate to the southern states, where they will be southern states, where they will be more than welcome, and where their skill will be always in de-mand. It is to be regretted that such a radical change is to be made in a great New England industry, but the laws of trade are inexorable. There is no escape from their operations, and it will be wise for the New England men to provide for the charge and accept the situation, so as to suffer as small a Toss as possible. Let them come here with capital and their experience,

The editor of the American Cot-ton Manufacturer of Charlotte, N. C., takes up the argument just

We object to this view of the matter for the reason that it does not fully comprehend the situation. The Picayune does not appear to be aware of the fact that the techological schools of Georgia, South Carolina and other southe states are turning out every year young southern born men, who show gen-ius in mechanical industry and are as ready to don overalls as they are to arry themselves in dress suitsto arry tnemselves in dress suits-young men who, of family lineage, are as proud to carry a tool kit through the thoroughfares as the suit case.
