CHESTER, S. C., TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1908.

ADDRESS TO FARMERS.

President Harris Gives a View of Conditions and Advises Cotton Growers to Stay Steady in the Boat.

To Cotton Producers:
The great money-producing crop of the south—cotton—is now being harvested. The farmers should investigate conditions and use good judgment in selling this great money crop of the south.

By so doing many million dollars will be added to her wealth.
First, we will look into conditions. The supply of cotton is less today than it has been in twenty-five years. The merchants' shelves are scant of goods. The population of the world is increasing every day, and they live on cotton. Again, the output of manufactured goods has greatly increased this year from the fact that the crop was a sales success. This shortage will have to be made up, as the world needs the goods. As to the condition of the 1908 crop, we have heard nothing but the best. It is a record crop. Who is it that circulates these reports? In Europe, 3,000 miles away, states are freely predicting a crop of cotton this year of the same size, while many of the know-nothings on this side are sending out literature forecasting a crop of 14,000,000 bales.

With us now being flooded with bear dope by speculators and others who are trying to get down the price of cotton, we wish to advise you to be as wise as the fox in the cotton game. Do not let the speculators' demands for concessions from the manufacturer in the price of cotton be the spider in the holding, as possible in order to get in their supply as low as possible.

There are so many interested in a hammer down the price of cotton. There never was a greater time for the farmer to get the best price for his cotton than at the present time. It was never a better time for the farmer to be as well as he is at the present time.

Our annual meeting of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union, Inc., at the First Baptist Church, on the first and second days of the month, was very successful. The attendance was large, all the cotton-growing states were well represented by delegates.

The unanimous consent of the delegates was to keep the minimum price of cotton within the membership of the national cotton committee was met, with a delegate from each state, for the purpose of handling cotton.

President Barrett will call a meeting of the first of January, as by that time we will know the true condition of the market. Every cotton-producing state is represented and there we had the opportunity of getting a true report on the conditions of the growing crop. Not a single state reported anything but an average crop. Some stated 10 per cent, some 20 per cent, some 30 per cent, some 15 per cent.

It will be impossible for us to make accurate reports at this time. In the past, we had floods and water in the last of July, then dry weather. Rust and blight in some other parts we had never seen before.

able to maintain a profitable price? First, he must diversify his crops, and now is the time to begin his diversification. Some of the best crops are clover, vetch, rye and barley. You will need it, next, spring to feed your stock. Instead of buying, raise your horses, mules, cows, hogs and sheep.

Womanly Courtesy.

A good deal has been written and said about the failure of women to appreciate and recognize the kindness of men who surrender their own comfort for their accommodation in the streets. A polite "thank you" is a good deal more attention. Again and again we have seen men yield their places without a word to a woman who has the right of way on the face of the woman who has been favored. In fact, the expression on the face of the woman would sometimes indicate that she would do anything to avoid the man for which the law ought to provide suitable punishment. No wonder some men retain their place and look for a far more comfortable seat in the aisles. A polite "thank you" or some slight recognition of the courtesy of yielding a seat, would produce the same effect. The woman who would profit by the woman who is not all in this rude behavior, but the few who are in the habit of throwing their weight on their benefactors make it hard on the whole sex, and lower the dignity of womanhood. What if the man who gets up and gives place to a lady is not well dressed, is that any reason why she should not appreciate it? Courtesy is a beautiful grace and it is quite as attractive in a woman as it is in a man. School girls who travel about the time of the year ought to give this matter serious consideration, and would suggest to the faculties of colleges that they should do something to help the young women in their classes if they would, along with French and German and music and painting, teach the girls the all-important lesson of gratitude for favors, however small, is an unending sign of gentle breeding.—Clarity and Children.

How to Avoid Appendicitis.

Most victims of appendicitis are those who are habitually constipated. Dr. King's Fruit Syrup cures chronic constipation by stimulating the liver and bowels, and restores the normal action of the bowels. It is a laxative Fruit Syrup does not nauseate or grip and is sold in all drug stores. Take. Refuse substitutes. Lettner's Pharmacy.

Hester's Weekly Statement.

New Orleans, Sept. 18.—Secretary Hester's weekly cotton statement, issued at this time, shows that the 18 days of the new season it has been 278,800 bales, against 198,183 for the same seven days last year, and 257,375 for the same period in the 18 days of the new season it has been 257,375, against 200,983 last year, 471,567 year before last.

Foreign exports for the season have been 483,400 against 557,744 last year. The total takings of American mills, North, South and Canada, thus far for the season, have been 145,568, against 150,471 for the same period in 1907 and 115,142 last year, 113,756 year before last.

Including stocks left over at ports the total for the season is 1,333,333, against 1,288,888 for the same period in 1907.

Reserving Favors.

We can't help but think that Mr. Bryan will have done Mr. Hearst a favor at some time or other, judging from the fact that Mr. Hearst is fighting him.—Anderson Mail.

Your remarks are probably true. The more we know of the people the harder they fight you politically in a rule. Especially in this time of peace and individual favor.—New-York Herald and News.

Orphan Work-day.

There is a family of 25 orphan children at the Epworth Orphanage, Columbia, S. C. Methodist. There are 250 orphans at the Central Maximum, Greenwood, S. C. Baptist. There are 250 orphans at the Thornwell Orphanage, Clinton, S. C. Presbyterian. There are 50 orphans at the Church Home, Charleston, S. C. Episcopal. The Lutheran Church Home is at Salem, Va. The Hebrew Home is at Atlanta, Ga. The Roman Catholic Homes are in Charleston, S. C.

The support and care of all these various denominational institutions, with their large body of fatherless children, is a sufficient appeal to every heart. Some years ago it was suggested by Rev. Howard Crosby of Atlanta, Ga., that on the first Saturday of every month, all those who have children set apart those days for gathering funds to relieve the needs of the fatherless. On that Saturday, let everybody, old and young, rich and poor, devote the day to the orphans, each man sending his gift to the Orphanage he loves best, or placing his gift toward one of the Georgia science worked well. For several years an effort has been made to raise an equal interest in South Carolina. The object was first to do so, but it was not done. It was also taken up in every community some zealous brother might take upon the matter and push it. The day is now being observed in many places. This proposition is not in the interest of any one orphanage; it is intended for each one to give to the orphans of his own choice. Give Saturday's wages to the orphans. Gather the proceeds on the Sabbath and forward to the institution of your choice. It will be sure to do the right thing. If drafts and checks are made out to the name of the institution itself and provisions supplied to the same. We have no doubt that when an individual community makes special request of the railway authorities, flour and rice and molasses or any other product will be sent free of charge.

Notice that this is simply a statement. Urgent appeals are not necessary. The object is to help the institutions are unable to get it, without the backing of the people. At this season all their treasures are greatly depleted. Do not overlook the day.

J. C. Goodwin, of Reidsville, N. C., says: "Buckley's Africa Salve is a sure-enough knocker for all kinds of one-come-on leg last summer but that I can't knock it. It is a sure-enough knocker. Not even a scar remaining." Guaranteed for piles, sores, burns, etc. At The Chester Drug Co. and T. S. Lettner.

Dun's Weekly Statement.

New York, Sept. 18.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade tomorrow will say: "Gradual improvement in the commercial situation is encouraging, although the volume of trade has not expanded in proportion to the growth of confidence. Resumption of work at the steel mills is the best evidence of progress, the number of unemployed steadily though slowly diminishing. Scarcity of water is still a serious factor in the cotton industry. Several returns for last week exhibited figures or no loss as compared with similar figures for 1907, notably oil shipments, cotton output, and bank exchange at some points.

"Steel mills have more business in sight. A rolling factor of value is the increased demand by the railroads for both rolling stock and equipment. "Restricted operations at cotton mills during the past nine months have been practically discontinued in the hands of producers and the statistical position is also healthy as to jobbers and retailers, but some congresses are in the primary market, unable to secure prompt delivery whenever needed, and uncertainty as to prices discourages contracts covering the business. Consequently, trade is quiet in all departments and the general increase in output of mills is limited to business in sight. "Imports from China have not materialized in any business."

CRIMSON CLOVER.

For Sale by John Frazer, Chester, S. C.

Its Use for Feed and a Soil Improver—Question as to Its Killing Stock.

Some time since I saw an article in the "Progressive Farmer" condemning crimson clover as a food for stock. It was very much impressed with what I read, as I have grown this plant for more than ten years, and have not only grown, but have fed it green. In fact, during all stages of its growth and I have never had an animal sick from the effects of eating it.

I have of it having killed a valuable horse or two. Professor Massie of the A. & M. College of North Carolina advises the farmer to use it only in the winter months, and also suggests, with just about as much reason in it, would be that, because green sorghum sometimes kills cows, should feed it only in winter.

I have a neighbor who recently lost nine head of cows from eating only a few mouthfuls of green sorghum. They had been in the field just at the time that the sorghum was full of fructose acid, and in less than ten minutes all nine of them were dead. I have seen the same and get that man is still feeding sorghum.

I am not trying to score Professor Massie; but I think that he should have been a little more careful in advising whether or not crimson clover had been cured, as really dried clover for feed, and I am somewhat surprised to find his article in the article I have just mentioned; for I remember having several years ago that Terry of Tennessee, one of the best writers of his day, and who was a great believer in crimson clover stated that he had fed clover hay to ten head of work stock during the entire winter of his life, and stands today as well as ever. If any, grain feed, and they were always in good condition.

As to the value of crimson clover for feeding purpose, it ranks with the cowpeas and vetch, and stands ahead of any other legume I have ever tried unless it is the soy bean, which is close kin to the pea. Before using clover feed I had read of its having killed horses, but since then I have sold it, only to the live men, and the only objection that I have heard of since that time is that it is too soft. It is well to look before you leap; therefore I would say to try it in small quantities at first. It was very unwise when I first began to feed it, but now ten years ago, and that unreason has long since passed away, and now I feel just without clover for my stock.

Stock are very fond of green clover, and if you are afraid to feed it, you can make it answer a three-fold purpose: (1) By using it as a cover crop to keep your lands from washing during the winter; (2) by letting it store up nitrogen; (3) by feeding it as a green food.

If you wish to improve your fields without using any crimson clover, sowing it in your cotton fields any time between the middle of September and the middle of October. Of course, the earlier the better, as indicated the earlier you can sow. In some portions of North Carolina and farther north the farmers sow it as late as the middle of November. It is not particularly this far south, as the sun would kill the young plants.

Lands that are infested with nut grass can be sown in cowpeas in the spring, the earlier the better. If the grass is a cutaway harrow over the field and sow to clover, using a drag or a smooth-bottomed roller, the clover will better way it will be to plow this soil, seed to oats, using from one-half to three-quarter bushels per acre, harrow down well, then use one peck of clover and reharrow. If a roller can be gotten use it after harrowing.

This will pack the soil around the seed and will have the effect of killing the nut grass. When spring comes the nut grass will have a show and you will have an excellent crop of hay, which, if more early cut, will be a good clover. It will grow this crop with corn or cotton.

Clover kills a firm seed bed, and it is only necessary to sow the seed, one peck to the acre, and harrow well with a heel sower or any little Joe harrow, or any implement which will stir the soil about one inch and cover the seed. If the seeds are barely covered, they will come up all right, and in wet seasons, I have secured a stand by simply sowing on top of the ground, and if it would not advise any one to follow this method.

I would advise any farmer who contemplates sowing clover this fall to sow only a few acres at first, for all soils will not grow clover the first year. Red soils or clay loams usually grow clover without having to be inoculated, and sandy soil with good red clay subsoil comes next to the clay loams. Deep, sandy soils have to be inoculated, except in very rare cases. If you want to cut clover, you fertilize it. You can save $4 per acre by growing clover and by using only potash and acid phosphate. On the succeeding crops, and on red land you will need but little potash. Buying

Cow Delayed Speaking. Princeton, Ind., Sept. 10.—The opening Democratic rally in Princeton yesterday evening was delayed half an hour by a cow swallowing the fly net of the horse of County Chairman Ballard, who was to escort Thomas Marshall, candidate for governor, to the opera house.

Ballard had the net on the ground, as he hitched up, and when he turned to get it the cow was leisurely swallowing the last of it. The county chairman grabbed the end and after 30 minutes of kicking and pounding and jerking, he pulled the entire net clear out of the cow, and then proceeded to lift the speaker to the stage.

The W. O. W. Meeting.

The public meeting of Cedar Camp No. 5, W. O. W., at the court house Friday evening was fully as delightful as had been expected. There was a large crowd present, both of the members of the camp and their friends, and there was a fine spirit that pervaded the gathering and made everyone feel that brotherhood is, indeed, a cardinal principle of the hosts of the evening.

After a short business meeting at the lodge room the members repaired to the court house, where they were joined by their guests. Mr. W. H. Newbold, consul commander, presided, and introduced the different speakers.

Mr. W. T. Slaughter, of Hickory Grove, spoke first. Mr. Slaughter told in a practical way of what the order has accomplished in the way of furnishing cheap and reliable insurance and quoted some figures to show how the order is increasing its membership and spreading its influence upon the public mind.

Mr. Slaughter's talk was practical, earnest and convincing.

Mr. J. B. Butler came next, he spoke of how the grace, for money and power has degraded the best impulses in many of us and how the organization of orders with love and brotherhood as their motto. Col. Butler's talk was highly enjoyed.

Mr. H. E. Finley and Mr. Max G. Bryant, of Rock Hill, also spoke, their speeches being along the same lines as the other two.

Just after Col. Butler's speech a halt was called, and refreshments, consisting of delicious cream and cake and lemonade, were served by a bevy of ladies.
