FRIDAY SEPTEMBER 22.

THE WHEAT CROP.

According to reports it is estimated that this year's wheat crop will amount to about 611,000,000 bushels. The people of the United States consume about 650,000,000 bushels a year. It is also stated that there is a reserve of 100,000,000 bushels in this country from last year's crop. This will make a total of 711,000,000 bushels for this year's consumption. However, American brokers have contracted to export 300,000,000 bushels of this year's crop.

Assuming that the above figures are correct it means that this country will be short 319,000,000 bushels of wheat this year and just where the price of flour is going is a matter of speculation.

THE MAIL ORDER HOUSE.

At this season of the year the South is flooded with catalogues from mail order houses. These catalogues are well gotten up, the matter appearing in them is prepared by expert advertising men, some of whom receive as much as ten thousand dollars a year as salary.

Thousands of dollars annually leave this section for goods which can be had at home. This practice, can be stopped if the home merchants will only advertise their goods. This advertising should be properly prepared— you cannot do it in a "haphazard way."

A merchant cannot expect the buying public to know just what he has to sell unless he takes the trouble to tell them. In old times the business came to the merchant. In these times the merchant must go after his business.

COTTON.

Along with better organization, increased prosperity and a growing tendency to business methods, the farmers in the South have been evidencing a disposition to abandon the wasteful and careless manner of handling their cotton crops. The old system of dumping the baled cotton on the ground around the barn or in the yards is now scarcely in evidence at all. The building of warehouses is largely responsible for this, but the open eye of the farmer is mainly back of it. The farmer has learned that a poor grade of cotton means loss of money and that a poor grade is principally the result of his own carelessness or his failure in handling his crop. He is now taking as good care of his cotton as a merchant takes of his goods. The Department of Agriculture has been giving the farmer much encouragement in the cultivation of more careful habits in the treatment of his staple and it is now advising him, by citing examples, that it is his duty to take care of his cotton. The Department has just issued a printed list of suggestions for the farmers in the handling of the present crop in which the importance of securing a good grade is emphasized. The higher prices are ruling the more important becomes the item of grade. The Department calls attention to the fact that in 1911 the average price of middling was 9.15; that in 1912 it was 12.20; in 1913 it was 13.49; in 1914, 7.94 and in 1915 it was 11.92. Cotton is now selling around 16 cents. The matter of negligence in securing good grades has cost the South millions of dollars in the past and at this time of high prices the good grade is counting more than ever. Picking cotton before it is matured is one cause for the bad grade. Having it ginned green is another. The Department advises the farmer to induce the ginner to give his cotton a slow run through the machine even if it costs a little more. With advice to keep baled cotton off the ground under cover and safe from the weather, to have the lint picked clear of leaves and trash the farmers are familiar. The Department also urges the equal importance of protecting cotton seed from careless handling and from the deteriorating effects of the weather, and with seed now close to the dollar mark they are listening.—Charlotte Observer.

QUEER REASONING

I notice in many newspapers editorial statements to the effect that Manning's election ended factionalism. Poor, blind simpletons; I wonder if these editors think that Manning's election changed human nature. I wonder if they think that sixty-five thousand of the best citizens of the South are blind simpletons.

Blessites - the moment Manning was elected, the South in general, let the negro on a basis of equality simply because the North liked it? Do the Irish love England simply because England is Master? Election will never kill that thing called Blessitism. When Blessie dies another will rise to lead the discontented. The name of the "ism" may change, but the spirit behind it will be the same. And while that spirit of discontent, that rebellion, under social ostracism, that blind groping for a better chance, in the world, continues to exist in thousands of South Carolina citizens, there will be a fraction composed of men who are fairly well satisfied with things as they are.

I am told that many of the Blessites are in the criminal class. I do not doubt it. But I am sure that there are not sixty-five thousand criminals in North Carolina.

The majority of the men who cling to that vague thing called Blessitism are men who are poor and uneducated. In some measure their poverty and ignorance is their own fault, for a man is to an extent what he makes himself. But their poverty and their lack of education is due in larger measure to conditions over which they have no control. So long as these conditions exist, these men will be discontented. So long as they are discontented they will grope blindly for a remedy, and will become easy prey to any demagogue who offers them relief.—Fountain Inn Tribune.

DREAMLAND TODAY.

One of the many funny scenes in the famous stage adaptation of Edgar Schuyler's celebrated stage success "Rolling Stones" shows Dave Fulton and Buck Ryder wrestling with a wine bottle. These two "rolling stones" have surreptitiously entered the kitchen of Mrs. Braughton's boarding house and have discovered the wine bottle on the table. They proceed to have a little war dance of

MARKET

We notice from our exchanges from various sections of the State that in every town there is more or less complaint as to the prices paid for cotton. Each town seems to gloat upon the next town paying a better price for cotton than the home town.

There has already been more or less complaint in Chester as well as other places and yesterday morning we thought we would look into several markets in various sections of South Carolina and compare them with the Chester market giving the readers of this paper the information just as we found it, be it for or against Chester. Our investigation revealed the fact that the Chester cotton market last Wednesday was the highest in South Carolina. Below we give the prices paid at different towns in different sections of the State.

L. & C. BARGE A FAILURE.

The barge which the Lancaster & Catawba River recently placed in the York river between Lancaster and Fort Lawn, was tried out last Tuesday but proved to be a failure.

After working all day those engaged in the project to get one through the river but this came to near going into the stream we understand they have abandoned the idea of using the barge.

What arrangements the management will make has not yet been made known but it is presumed that arrangements will be made with the Southern Railway to detour through Lancaster into Lancaster, until a structure can be erected over the river.

On next Thursday a number of the best of the fair will be made over the county for the purpose of making a booster trip arranged by the Bureau of Agricultural Affairs of the Chamber of Commerce to advocate the Chester County Fair and to explain to the people of the county the various departments of the premium list which has just been issued. Plans are being completed by the representatives of the bureau to visit every township of the county and in several of the townships a number of meetings will be held. The people of the townships are being asked to help in arranging these meetings so that every detail of the premium list which has just been issued. Plans are being completed by the representatives of the bureau to visit every township of the county and in several of the townships a number of meetings will be held. The people of the townships are being asked to help in arranging these meetings so that every detail of the premium list which has just been issued. Plans are being completed by the representatives of the bureau to visit every township of the county and in several of the townships a number of meetings will be held. The people of the townships are being asked to help in arranging these meetings so that every detail of the premium list which has just been issued.

The premium list for this year's county fair, the amount of dollars in premiums, it being the idea of the fair management to present a list to the people of the county that would be complete in every way. The list has already been mailed to a large number of the people of the county and those which have not been mailed will be mailed tomorrow.

This list contains premiums for agricultural products, cattle, swine, sheep, poultry, for the house show, the races and for the exhibits of the canning, home demonstration and bread clubs and for the school exhibits. A large number of inquiries have already been received from parties who desire to enter their exhibits but do not entirely understand the method of entry, etc., and as the time is getting short these meetings have been arranged to expiate matters.

On this trip Fair souvenirs will be carried for the people at the meetings as well as copies of the premium book.

One of the features of the exhibits of the fair will be the Merchants and Manufacturers exhibits which will occupy part of the space in the large exhibition tent. This tent will cover almost 20,000 square feet of ground and will be the largest tent ever erected in this vicinity. A rough idea of the size of this tent can be secured when it is realized that it covers almost one half a city block. It will be erected several days in advance of the opening day of the fair so that the merchants and manufacturers as well as the members of the home demonstration clubs may have an opportunity of building their booths.

A large silver loving cup will be awarded the merchant or manufacturer who makes the best display of his wares and the best display will be awarded to the home demonstration club of the county which will secure a handsome premium. The Merchants and Manufacturers exhibits will be in charge of a special committee from the Mercantile Bureau of the Chamber and reservations of space can now be secured.

While two of the best free attractions ever provided by a county fair, one of them having been the big attraction at state fairs, has been secured for the entertainment of the visitors, an added attraction has been secured for the night of the fair, Friday—Thursday October 19. This is a magnificent fireworks display feat.

To be held each day of the fair Sensational Smithson, the man who has made them all "ask for several years" how does he do it, and the Sturtevant family, five of the best acrobats before the American audience today will entertain the fair visitors. Sensational Smithson has a real thriller and at night has the added feature of fire-dancing. The Sturtevant family will give twenty minutes of acrobatic and gymnastic stunts while Felix and "Curly Head," two small children with the tropics are the closest and the laugh producers.

An Aviation has legs extended to the members of Governor Manning's staff to accompany Governor Manning when he comes here on the second day of the fair—Wednesday October 18. Other speakers are being sought for the Farmers congress on that day and from present indications the Congress will be the largest gathering of farmers ever held in the county.
