Spallum from page one which expresses the activities of men and women which have been carried on this morning. I am sure that you will take as a good reason of your own for those things which are your own.

Since teaching is an intensely personal and community-agency function, you will probably be able to say, if you try to describe what you do, that you are working with the things which are associated with the children of the community, working with the things which are associated with the adult members of the community, without the children's help, or the adult members of the community's help, that you are working with the children's help, and with the adult members of the community's help.

I am sure that you will understand that, whether you talk about the children in your own work, or the adult members of the community in your own work, you are talking about the children in your own work, or the adult members of the community in your own work.

You will talk about the children in your own work, or the adult members of the community in your own work.

THE JOHNSONIAN

Behind the Scenes at the Music Box Revue

It was my turn, one-quarter of an hour before the beginning of the show. An impromptu dress rehearsal was in progress and all of the maids were being called upon to assist the chorus girls in putting on their costumes. I was expected to play the character of a flower girl, and I had to make sure that my outfit was correct. The costume consisted of a long, flowing dress with a large hat and a parasol. I had to make sure that I was ready to perform at any moment. The rehearsal was going well, and I was confident that I would be able to deliver a convincing performance. I was excited to be part of a show that was about to open, and I was looking forward to seeing the audience's reaction. The rehearsal ended, and I was able to relax for a few minutes before the curtain went up. Everything was just as I had expected, and I was ready to go on stage. I was grateful that I was able to perform, and I felt proud to be a part of a show that was about to open.
