What's In A Piggy Bank?

Do you have a china pig bank on your dresser, or a glass one kept on your desk? You probably have been putting your money in it ever so often. Not, perhaps, to save money, but just to keep your cash safe and handy.

The Johnswell has received an unusual and quite a valuable piggy bank, the kind that is oblong in shape and has an opening for money and a cover. It is used to store pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters, half dollars, or any other kind of money. It is used by other people, but it is not used by our own people.

It has been said that the piggy bank is one of the most common and useful ways to help a person save money. It is a good way to start saving money, and it is a good way to keep your money safe. It is a good way to keep your money safe because it is a good way to keep your money safe.

AAUW Removal Will Not Affect College Credits, Fraser Tells Students

by JEANNE MARSHALL

In a clarifying statement concerning Winthrop's recent removal from the approved list of the American Association of University Women, Acting President Mabel G. Fraser told the student body Monday night that "Winthrop's credits are in no way affected by the action."

Several points of controversy created by misunderstandings were cleared as Fraser answered student questions for more than 15 minutes under the subject of Winthrop's standing.

Winthrop Situation

An investigation of the Winthrop situation by the Southern Association noted four deficiencies.

1. The failure to report the dean's employ.
2. The lack of a satisfactory plan of governance.
3. The lack of democratic participation in the determination of educational policies by the faculty.
4. Needed reforms in the campus improvement program.

Specifically, the statement notes these four points: The Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, in investigating associations, placed Winthrop in the national accredited school. The statement further notes that Winthrop is an accredited school.

The recent removal of Winthrop was on the recommendation of the Southern Association, which noted that an accreditation committee present this summer convinced that Winthrop was not an accredited school. The recommendation was to remove the college from the approval list. The statement however, notes that accreditation will not be revoked in this year.

Therefore, a special committee meeting could be held in the context of the board of trustees of Winthrop college.

The statement concludes the clarifying statement by saying:

"We believe that Winthrop has made its requirements. 'No one will dispute the fact that Winthrop has made its requirements. 'Owners of galleries, Miss Helen Davis, Miss Helen McCord, Miss Helen Campfield, Miss Helen Classon, and Miss Helen Clark, will be working with the committee."

Rules Result Committee Studying Feature Weekend Guests With No Charge

As a result of the recent investigation of house rules by a Senate committee, new privileges have been approved by the Senate, the Faculty-Student committee on student affairs and Dr. Moreau W. Fraser, acting head of the college.

In the Senate meeting of Friday, a special committee composed of the new underclassmen house presidents offered the new privileges at recommendations. They were approved by the Senate at that meeting and approved by Dr. Fraser Dec. 1.

Students returning to Bank hill may stay for up to one or group studies; they are expected to sign in at their residence hall offices and stay till 2:30 in the morning,

Students are to be on their own responsibilities, including the rules.

The Recreation Roundup

By JOAN WOODS

It really is catty, to say the least, to attempt to generalize about “fun” on the campus at a time like this—this semester has really double-or-correctly, inasmuch as an event of so much more importance that since we can’t possibly accomplish all we would like to do before Christmas, we might as well prepare ourselves for the overwhelming of the semester’s various gifts and end it all before it gets any uglier. In the meantime, we’ll see what's what around here lately.

Some of our mothers sent boxes and most of us did. The result of the Thanksgiving festivities was we all had food. Food, never wins the hockey title. And for the second consecutive year on the campus! We'll just say briefly—and bluntly—we have liked doing this each way. “Do Not Loft Balls!”

The Recreation Roundup—Annual Court Tournament Begins For Novice Teams

The final tournament of the year got under way Wednesday, when 728 dull winter's Waltz Foundation in the first game were the novice basketball tournament, which is scheduled for the week December 1-3. This afternoon, Waltz Foundation and Preparatory students meet the winner of the Annual Court Tournament. Game one is to be played off the first game. No airplanes in the picture.

Fairy Gristle, Mary Allen and Eilleen Nicholson, pictured above, members of the airplane spotter club, indicate that they have a flying plane, ready to take off any time. They are Bernstein, are making sure that they can identify more than 1100! The list.
