ANTHONY OF KANSAS

An Interesting Character of a Period That is Past

Col. Daniel Ross Anthony, who died at Leavenworth the other day in his eighty-seventh year, was a native of the old South. He was born in South Adams, Mass., a peaceful Puritan community in those days. Nothing in his youth and early manhood indicated the character that was in him. He worked in a cotton mill. He worked and "bleeked" in a flour mill and store. His teaching school. He went to Bleeding Kansas, as an agent of the New England Enfranchisement society, and was one of the founders of Lawrence, famous in Kansas history. He settled in the Sandow county in 1857. In the Civil war he was lieutenant colonel of a Kansas cavalry regiment. In his life he did characteristic things. He was stationed in a camp in Tennessee. Slaves were always escaping into the Federal lines. Without any authority, Anthony, temporarily commanding a brigade, issued violent orders: "The impudence and impertinence of the men and arms and rebels in the lines of any officer, whether an acting or delivering a fugitive to his master should be summarily and severely punished, according to the laws of this high court of justice. Any soldier ingling into Anthony's mind. His commanding officer returned and "ragged" but Anthony had his way. In 1861 Anthony joined the Leavenworth Conservative, which was subsequently combined with the Leavenworth Times, not hot Republican and one of the high caliber of the Leavenworth Times he provided plenty of war news for his own rival sheet. But before his brilliant journalism he has indulged in some spirited editorials. In 1854 he was a local Free-Soil speaker to an audience of "border ruffians" at Leavenworth. Some of these gentlemen shot him three times just as he was going out. He wasn't made of penetrable stuff. He shot back, hitting one opponent in the silver watch.

The Juvenile Musical Club Meets.

The appointed meeting of the M. C. was held with Miss Wren as the presiding officer. The program was present and enjoyed the program which was as follows: 1. "Mass's in the Cold, Cold Country," Miss Gladys Patrick. 2. "Heavenward," Miss Lizzie Hardin. 3. "Fifth Nocturne Miss Somerville Booth. 4. "Purity," Miss Gladys Patrick. 5. "A Dances," Miss Vivian Hand. 6. "Idol," Miss Lottie Klutz. 7. "A Gypsy Dance," Miss Lizzie Macaulay. 8. "Piano Solo," Miss Marie Cross. 9. "The Maiden's Prayer," Miss Josephine James. 10. "Black Hawk Waltz," Miss Fannie Spratt. 11. "Fighting Maidens," Miss Ann Pryor. Miss Ann Pryor won the prize, which was a beautiful little picture. In a contest of guessing names of noted composers whose pictures were shown, she was the victor. The prize was a sword, was awarded to Miss Fannie Spratt. After this refreshments were handed out and the evening passed very pleasantly. The next meeting will be held at the residence of Miss Josephine James.

Long Cabinet Service.

If Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan remain in the cabinet till the close of President Roosevelt's term they will hold the record on cabinet positions for three-quarters of a century. On March 1, 1905, when Roosevelt retires, Mr. Wilson will have been caring for the farmers for 12 years, while Mr. Hay will have been guiding the ship of state for just a little less than 10 years and six months. An investigator reports that the only other secretary who held office over a year were Secretary of the Treasury Arthur Gallatin, who accepted that office under Jefferson and Madison from 1801 to 1804, and Secretary of the Treasury Madison James Monroe, before the same post from 1816 to 1825, and William Wirt, who was attorney general under Monroe and Adams from 1817 to 1829.

How We Get a Cold.

A cold is sometimes contracted by the simple act of going out in an uncomfortable room, or by a draught and by falling to sleep under a blanket. It is also contracted by catching while sleeping too cold in the "deep sleep" stage. It is also contracted by the use of cold water, and by the use of cold water, and by the use of cold water. "HIKE TO THE PIKE"

What Miss Osburn Saw on the World's Fair - "Hike to the Pike" - Described in Most Entertaining Style.

When grandeur calls and a daily round of the gorgeous surfeits the brain then "Hike to the Pike," as the song goes, and have your enthusiasm started into wakefulness by the daring feats undertaken there daily by intrepid performers, and witness fascinating illusions which carry you over frozen seas or lead you back to the beginning of time. "There you see the fat Turk, his oiled locks surmounted by a crimson fez, his flowing tresses held close about his ankles, his feet impaled and his hands held up in a laudably braided, red and gaudy jacket. There in your perambulations too meet copper-colored swags, rich in their variety of gaudy blankets, calicoes and beaded moccasins, conversing in laconic cut. There you pass a party whose attire is of the most European style. Now and then you meet a vivacious group whose speech, gestures and facial aspect bespeak the Paris boulevard. There you meet a group of girls by a party of up-to-date American girls led by a young man. You must not conclude that they are an interesting party from Utah for the man is not a fair haired, blue-eyed, young fellow as a World's Fair guide.

Alumni and Educators Expected to Attend in Large Numbers - A Great Occasion for Columbia.

The approaching centennial of the South Carolina college will be the greatest event in South Carolina for many a year. The occasion is of state importance and of national interest. The presence of representatives of the universities of all the southern states and of some of the northern institutions, will attract the attention of the entire academic world. South Carolina has the honor of being the State of the South Carolina, which will be the public eye as not before in decades. Considered from the lowest standpoint of education, the college will be invaluable in its development of the state, the capital city, and the college soon to be the university.

The Poor Man and the Church.

There seems to be a disposition on the part of many of the churches of this country to be "poor" in their welfare of the poor man in favor of the rich. It is unfortunate, but too true. Men and women of wealth and before coming to the church, they attend in great numbers of the houses of worship, that the poor workman is gradually becoming forced to the conclusion that he is out of his home, and that he is not wanted. After receiving a few of these returns, the heart of the poor man is broken. The house of God should be a place of refuge for all people, and the soul of the poor man should be cherished at all times as much as that of the rich man with his millions.

THE LANTERN.
PUBLISHED TUESDAYS AND FRIDAYS.
J. T. BIGHAM, - Editor and Prop.
 Entered at the Postoffice at Chester, S. C., as second-class mail matter.
FRIDAY, NOV. 26, 1904.

Investigation is said to have revealed that the business of Heath & Co., members of Philadelphia, was taken to the city.

When gamblers get your money it is useless to run after them, begging them to give it back. Let it go, and realize that you will never again meet with a man on his own track.

You ought to have said that it is reported that the elders, deacons and stewards got caught with the other gamblers. This remark was made in speaking of those who have lost on future in the future will never again meet with a man on his own track.

At the beginning of a meeting held by Dr. Fitch in the Baptist church at Dr. West recently, he stated that last July completed an evangelizing tour that he felt and himself had given to the ministry of the Baptist church. And though he is now three years and ten he wanted to continue in the work a little while longer on account of his love for it.

The Abbeville Mill wants a photograph of the enthusiastic delegate from South Carolina who, at the St. Louis convention, July 7, 1904, "caught the sign of his state from his staff, took up the steps and after transcribing the red and white flag, wildly, shook it at the Bryan and Hearst men, and then placed it flat against the blue banner as though he was raising the flag of his country to a masthead."

If any of our readers can supply the photograph or put the editor of the medium in communication with the "enthusiastic delegate" we have no doubt that a suitable reward will be forthcoming.

Archbishop John J. Glennon opened the St. Louis National Synod convention, July 27, 1904, with prayer. The newspapers of that date said that when he resumed his seat a number of approval ran through the convention, which in a few seconds descended into a roar of applause. If one will read the accounts of the St. Louis convention in the newspapers of that time the result of the election is not to be wondered at. The cheering of a speaker by a body of representative men was certainly out of what is customary and proper. There must have been some thing wrong about the "spiritual condition" of the delegates.

This is not so very bad, when it is considered that the delegates were more familiar with religious customs and didn't know what the applause ought to come in. In the absence of any better guide they followed the promptings of their "spiritual condition."

In noting the new dress of The Lantern, the Johnstown News comments to this paper and its editor which are sincerely appreciated. We know that our friend's expressions are always his honest convictions, and therefore much the more may be exaggerated. It is cheering to have assurance that a favorable opinion, and not the opposite, is entertained by a young man who, as a newspaper man, has had intimate knowledge of one's home life and business life, under the buffalings of impatient patrons - few of them have been in that position. The solution of vexatious problems, in struggles to maintain equilibrium in the face of delays, accidents and the qualifications of other staff members front one in a newspaper and printing business, through work day, holidays and pay day.

We regret by the way, that our friend indulged in any comparisons for The Lantern, with its insufficient and over-worked editorial force, can only hope to emulate the admirable semi-weeklies mentioned.

A Popular Error.
 Theodore H. Price, cotton bear, spent a few hours in Greenville the other day, and, of course, talked cotton. Mr. Price always talks cotton and he should know what cotton is for he has presented it from every standpoint imaginable. He should, in fact, know more about it than he does. In arguing the reasonableness of his contention that a tremendous crop has been made, Mr. Price said to a reporter that as North Carolina farmers can make cotton profitably at 7 1/2 cents, how much more profitable it must be in the southwest where the field per acre of their unfertilized lands, is double that of the South Atlantic states. He contends that the profit being great, much cotton was planted and a big crop produced. His guess as to a big crop was right, that is not the point we wish to have controverted. Mr. Price has fallen into a popular error in alleging the great productiveness of the southwestern lands. His statement as to the ratio of production is absolutely untrue. South Carolina produces as much - sometimes more - cotton as the acre to Texas. The new lands of Oklahoma are the most productive but do not exceed lands planted under intelligent supervision in South Carolina; the same is true of the Mississippi Delta. It is demonstrably true that cotton lands in this region that are "cultivated" are as good as the very best lands in the world's cotton belt. - The State.

The Dispensary Election.
 Senator Brice is very much pleased at the result of the dispensary election in Cherokee county but is really a little surprised that the overwhelming majority that was rolled up against the dispensary.

When the enemies of the Brice bill proposed their bill will tax on counties that should vote against it. In this series, the senator denounced the proposition as an effort to penalize morality, but also the Cherokee people have said that they will vote morally regardless of cost. Mr. Brice is delighted with their choice.

Speaking of the dispensary situation he said that they will vote against it yesterday. Mr. Brice said:

I am opposed to the sale of liquor under any circumstances. That is, I am not willing to endorse the traffic. I believe it is wrong, and as an individual I would not feel warranted in giving it my approval. There are those, however, who believe in it, and while I cannot bring myself to agree with them, I can concede that they have a right to their views - as much right to their views as I have to mine.

"I have become convinced that this dispensary business, especially the central institution in Columbia is not for the people of South Carolina are not responsible for the failure of the dispensary. They were never consulted about it and had no voice in it, the house does other things besides print the paper. - Ex.

Report of Cotton Ginned.
 Washington, Nov. 23. - The census bureau today issued a preliminary statement of the quantity of cotton ginned to Nov. 14, 1904, in 475 counties for which reports have been received to date, showing 18,963,325 bales ginned against 18,619 for the same period and number of counties in 1903, and 5,843,330 running bales for 1902 against 4,100,000 for 1901. These figures include 141,311 round bales for 1904 and 307,944 for 1903 and refer solely to the 475 counties. The number of counties from which ginning was reported last season is 512, and the entire number of active ginning reported up to Nov. 14, 1903, was 29,206, and the total cotton ginned 7,470,437 running bales.

A Horse as a Pressman.
 The story is told that members of a recent convention at Baldwin, Ga., were much impressed by the work of a horse at Baldwin, Ga., in distributing the Tattnall Journal. The animal, which grinds out the weekly editions of The Journal, is used by its owner, Editor John G. Folsom, for carrying and delivering the paper to subscribers. A large number of the visitors to the convention were guests of Editor Folsom, and watched the pressman at work. Some of the pressmen at work. Some of the pressmen at work. GOOD NEWS.

Many Chester Residents Have Heard It and Profited Thereby

"Good news travels fast" and thousands of hard laboring men in Chester are glad to learn that prompt relief is within their reach. Many lame, weak and aching back had no more, thanks to Dr. King's Kidney Pills. Our citizens are telling the good news of their experience with the Old Quaker Remedy.

Here is an example worth reading: "W. Wallace, of Lawrence, general broker, of Laurens St., residing on Carlington St., extended says: 'Ivan's Kidney Pills benefited me more than any other remedy I ever used. I suffered from backache for months at a time so severe at times as to almost break my back. A sharp pain would strike me right across the back and back on a while that would make me almost yell right out. The kidney secretions were very dark in color, all of sediment and very annoying from their too frequent attacks, particularly at night. I tried a number of remedies but without relief until I got a box of Ivan's Kidney Pills. On taking them I experienced a change for the better almost immediately. My backache soon left me, the kidney's became normal and regular so I could go to bed and sleep all night and in the morning feeling rested and refreshed.'

JEFF DAVID'S CASE RECALLED.

Was Recalled Eight Times and Went down the Scaffold Once—Law as to "After Discovered Evidence." Governor Heyward's action yesterday in granting a respite to Aaron Williams was based upon the construction of law as given by the supreme court of South Carolina in the case of Jeff David. This is one of the most celebrated cases in history, and although it occurred nearly 30 years ago the facts are familiar to many people.

It was in this case that the principle of "after discovered evidence" was established, and the convicted person, no matter how long after the crime, has the right to demand a new trial upon "after discovered evidence." Yet the evidence, no matter how strong, which was neglected at trial, but evidence which was not available after due diligence had been exercised by the accused and his legal representatives. Judge W. C. Bang, now of this city, represented Jeff David, who for three years lived in the shadow of the gallows, who eight times was respited, one while the noose was around his neck, and whose case was passed upon by four governors, the supreme court, four circuit judges, and was prosecuted vigorously by two solicitors with press and public clamoring for his execution.

A horrible double murder was committed on a farm located at Indigo Springs, near Conover, Christmas eve, 1877. Two aged white people, George Franklin and his sister, Drucilla, were killed. This incident being known to the public, they had been branded by a murderer or murderers who used a dogwood club. The deceased had been at supper when they were set upon. They had been murdered for the money known to be in the house, for the old people were miserly and had about $6,000 in the bank. Jeff David, a slave, lived about 160 yards from the scene of the crime. He tended the farm for George Franklin.

The evidence was strong grounds for suspicion, four arrests were made. Jeff David, his wife, his son and son-in-law. They were tried at the next term of court at Abbeville. Judge Benet, then a young member of the bar at Abbeville, was assigned by the court to Judge T. J. Mackey, to the defense of the prisoners.

The trial resulted in the conviction of Jeff David and the acquittal of the other three accused. The motion for a new trial was made and refused, and Jeff David was sentenced to be hanged. The evening after the sentence was pronounced one of the two leading states witnesses came with a recommendation to the governor which he requested Mr. Benet to sign. The paper represented that this white man and another witness were entitled to the reward which the governor had offered for the conviction of the murderers of the Franklins. This recommendation had been signed by Judge Mackey and Solicitor S. C. Cochran and by the jurors.

Mr. Benet had not been aware that a reward had been offered, but the witnesses referred to had been there had been two rewards—one by the governor and the other by the family of the deceased. The evidence of the trial had been so strong and apparently sufficient that it had convinced even Mr. Benet that Jeff David was guilty, but his knowledge of the character of the witnesses, and the fact that the recommendation was such that he knew that they would readily perjure themselves for a reward. He therefore declined to sign the recommendation and returned to the State's witness that, if he had known that a reward had been offered, Jeff David would not have been arrested and he would now see to it that the condemned man would not be hanged.

As soon as court adjourned Mr. Benet went to the scene of the murder and examined several reputable citizens, some of whom were of the highest character. They had been present at the scene of the murder, the morning of discovery, but had not been examined as witnesses, as the poor negroes could give the counsel no help in procuring witnesses. The negroes had no witnesses to offer. They avowed their innocence, but as all had been accused, they had no outside-by-whom to prove an alibi.

Mr. Benet learned enough from those neighbors of the Franklins to satisfy himself that Jeff David had been convicted on perjured testimony and they readily furnished him with affidavits of "after discovered evidence" tending to show that fact. He came to Columbia and laid the case before Gov. Heyward, then James Connor, attorney general, Gov. Hampton at once granted the respite asked for.

One great trouble in the way at that time was that there were no court stenographers. There was therefore no official report of the testimony in the case and a new trial on "after discovered evidence" could not properly be made before any judge but the one who had tried the case. This involved the delay of nearly three years during which time the prisoner was respited eight times. His case came under consideration before four governors, Hampton, Simpson, Jetter, Hagood. Indeed, on one tragic occasion, he was on the scaffold with the noose around his neck before the respite of the governor was produced. Gov. Hampton saved the negro's life on two occasions.

When he came home from Washington to spend the Christmas holidays. The governor then in office had declined to act favorably in the petition for another respite and the Hampton made a personal appeal for the pardon. Threats of lynching were freely made and many of the newspapers of the state strongly condemned the course of the executive and the governor's counsel. One of them indeed advised that it was necessary that some one should be hanged for the murder of the Franklins and they might as well begin with a governor as a lawyer.

At last in course of rotation of court Judge Mackey came back to hold the court of general sessions in Abbeville. Mr. Benet made a motion for a new trial on "after discovered evidence" embodied on the affidavits, confidently expecting that the motion would be granted. To his surprise Judge Mackey refused the motion, but in doing so said that he was profoundly impressed with the weight of the evidence which the affidavits contained and that if that evidence had been submitted to the jury at the trial it might have brought about a different verdict. But that he deemed that it was now too late and that the court had not the power to grant the motion. His order refusing the motion contained those reasons for refusing. From this order prisoner's counsel appealed to the supreme court and that court held that Judge Mackey was in error in holding that he had not the power. This was signed by Chief Justice Simpson and Associate Justices McCowan and Melver.

This decision of the supreme court in Jeff David's case established the sound principle that there is no time limit in a criminal case to cut off the right of moving for a new trial on "after discovered evidence."

After the decision was rendered, Mr. Benet renewed the motion for a new trial at the next term of the court of general sessions in Abbeville before Judge Hudson. The motion was made upon the affidavits upon Judge Mackey's reasons and upon the supreme court's decision reversing Judge Mackey. Judge Hudson at once granted the motion.

At the succeeding term of court Jeff David was brought from the State penitentiary where he had been for two years for safe keeping. He was tried a second time for the murder of the Franklins before Judge Fraser. After a long, interesting and exciting trial, he was triumphantly acquitted, the jury being unanimous in their verdict of "not guilty" upon first retiring to the jury room. Col. Jas. L. Orr was the solicitor at this trial.

Judge Benet had night told of many striking features of the evidence in this case. The murderer of George Franklin was never arrested, but Judge Benet says there are many people who have a good idea who it is, and Jeff David was absolutely innocent.

The reason why it was necessary to have so many respites is that Mr. Benet would get the governor to respite the condemned man to a date following the approaching term of court. This was done from one court to another until Judge Mackey came to Abbeville, three years having elapsed. Had Judge Mackey died Jeff David would have been hanged, right there, no matter how innocent and no other judge would know the evidence at the first trial.

The negro's description of the negro's suffering the day the noose was around his neck is a mystery. When it was seen that the negro would make no confession, the respite was produced.

Disastrous Wrecks. Carelessness is responsible for many a railway wreck and the same causes the making of human wrecks of suffering from Throat and Lung troubles. But since the advent of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, even the worst cases can be cured, and the world now sees to it that the condemned man would not be hanged.

The celebrated divine referred to before said: "How a man with no surplus of estate but still with enough money to pay the premiums on a life insurance policy, can refuse to do it, and then look his children in the face, is a mystery to me." And there are few men who cannot afford to carry some life insurance in the Equitable. For example, during younger years, $20 a year will pay for $1,000, and $100 a year for $5,000 of assurance which participates in profits, and gives optional settlements to the assured himself at the end of 15 or 20 years.
