The Johnsonian Queen May Visit College

Martha Calloway, queen of the 1961 Southern College of Women, was in attendance at Winthrop College to be the guest at a tea given by the Winthrop Junior Women's Club.

Winthrop College in Greenville, South Carolina, is one of the oldest institutions of higher learning in the state. The college was founded in 1835 and is considered one of the most prestigious in the region.

The Johnsonian is a newspaper published by the students of Winthrop College. It covers a wide range of topics, including campus events, student life, and local news.

For more information about Winthrop College and the Johnsonian, please visit their official website or contact the college directly.

Rambling With the Features...

Keeping Up With Little Changes

This week we are going to enjoy some little changes in the routine of the newspaper. We have had a rather dull winter, but the signs are good that spring is not far away. We have some changes to make in our paper to bring it up to date with the times. We hope you will enjoy the new features we are adding to the newspaper.

One of the changes we are making is the addition of a new section called "The Life of a Student". This section will focus on the experiences and challenges of being a student, and will feature interviews with students from different backgrounds and perspectives.

Another change we are making is the addition of a new column called "The View from the Top". This column will feature articles written by faculty members about their experiences and insights into the world of higher education.

We hope you will enjoy these new features and that they will bring a little bit of variety to your reading experience.

Youth's Reputation

The following is the report of an able young American on the work of the college mission in the East, prepared by W. Greg. It was addressed principally to our readers, but the editorial Board of The Johnsonian concluded that its subject was so important that it should be made public.
