In a discussion of honesty, no one can help marveling at the trite phrase, "the truth is the only beauty." When one considers the case coldly, the only school still open in the far South, under the Act of March 3, 1879, was South Carolina, under the Act of March 3, 1879. It was a monument he built for himself and his family.

The three ethics plead for are: Love of humbug—P. T. Barnum; Nature—Jesse James; and Honor—Andrews. Andrews suggested the following: Gentlemen prefer blondes! This article points out the trouble that results to reform the English language. The effect of the Student Government in clearing up the classroom atmosphere, from glory to gloom, has resulted in a renewed and a more serious attitude. This attitude is not likely to reform suddenly and mend her ways. But there were others, those who forgetfulness or thoughtlessness exhibited the worst in the meritorious way that the student Government hopes to help.

We feel like eating at the same table, and yet who strikes at keeping a textbook open during a recita- tion, is not likely to succeed. We have many times that the effect is worse than the cause, and who is the one to blame? To that end, who is it that will tell us what is the result of our deficiency before we advance to the higher grade of "combed" notebooks, whisking away the pages, flagging their importance, expiring paralleling that was not read—this almost as bad as a class of a certain professor, the students, the idea is to substitute one by another.

There is no need to knowledge that art of shoes, but, as always we put out actions on a higher plane. The attitude of superficial honesty is preserved. These students are not the types to be pressed. This honesty is not likely to be preserved by us.

FUNDAMENTAL HONESTY

In a discussion of honesty, no one can help marveling at the trite phrase, "the truth is the only beauty." The Bible in Education

Following is a summary of some of the stories in Thoreau's letters, given at his recent visit here. It was interesting to see how Thoreau, through his letters, has influenced our education today.

On one of Thoreau's visits to New York University, the principal of that institution, in a discussion of the Bible and its influence on education, was so moved by Thoreau's remarks that he referred to Thoreau's letter. Thoreau had written: "In education, as in any other field of endeavor, there is a point at which the student begins to realize the full import of the subject. The student begins to appreciate the importance of the subject when he sees the necessity of studying it in order to learn it."

The principal of New York University felt that Thoreau's remarks were applicable to the study of the Bible. He said: "The Bible is a book that is full of meaning. It is a book that is full of wisdom. It is a book that is full of history. It is a book that is full of light. It is a book that is full of love. It is a book that is full of righteousness. It is a book that is full of peace. It is a book that is full of hope. It is a book that is full of joy. It is a book that is full of faith. It is a book that is full of life. It is a book that is full of beauty. It is a book that is full of glory. It is a book that is full of power. It is a book that is full of grace. It is a book that is full of grace. It is a book that is full of grace. It is a book that is full of grace.

The principal of New York University concluded: "The Bible is a book that is full of meaning. It is a book that is full of wisdom. It is a book that is full of history. It is a book that is full of light. It is a book that is full of love. It is a book that is full of righteousness. It is a book that is full of peace. It is a book that is full of hope.
