I want to work with bones and stuff

3:54 text— my advice requested

Is a 3.426 a good GPA?

5:43 text— she strives to prove mom wrong

Sending you Miranda-love! [picture of a clown]

9:21 text— to scare me and induce laughter

We found Mqndr scribbled on macaroni framed artifacts—piled upon each other in matching flannel whispering to me at Christmas that as a child she pitied the letter, abandoned and underused, bastardizing her name to create a home for the lonely Q

Bone sisters, more than blood, connected by vexatious vertebra stacked to support and strengthen.
As pinched disks creak and groan, she swats it away with warmth of a curved cushion curled around her neck—a humiliating tear smeared on her cheek, she forces the betraying body to smile, denying its power in false ocular floods.

She is my sister-in-spine, with shushed determination, and the loudest love I get.
