Our Chance

The JOHNSONIAN staff in its weekly issue of May 2, 1948, presented a feature called "What We Live By" in which the editors announced their determination to "earn our money with good will and honest endeavor." The feature was aimed at promoting the idea of hard work and personal responsibility in college life.

The following is an excerpt from the feature:

"The Johnsonian wants to deserve a reputation for being an outstanding publication and we feel that this can be done through hard work, dedication, and responsible behavior. We believe that the Johnsonian can be a model for other college publications and that it can set a standard for excellence in journalism.

"We are committed to delivering accurate and timely news, and we strive to provide a platform for students to express their opinions and voice their concerns. We believe that the Johnsonian can be a valuable resource for students and the campus community.

"We are grateful for the support and encouragement we have received from the Johnsonian staff and faculty, and we look forward to continuing to produce a quality publication that reflects the values and standards we hold dear."
Only four more days until weary Winthrop students pack on a fast track towards "Home Sweet Home" for a whirlwind week of spring fun. Along with a brand new season, there's a new crop of love stories to be written. Love, it seems, blooms as well of spring fun. Of People

Gloria Barrow, senior from Charleston, wears a diamond from George Goodchild, third class cook in the Mary Eleanor, Bette Mable, a junior at Winthrop, is planning an afternoon tea at the future brother's home. Among the guests will be her twin sister, Sue Barrow. "Mary Eleanor," the name she uses as a nickname, "loves tea," said her sister. Not long ago, two Mary Elaines were employed in secretarial work. Their supervisor is Mrs. M. E. Darby, mother of Miss Bette Mable. "We work on a similar schedule," Mrs. Darby said for O. B. G. S. of the USA.

Of Things

"Guide" explained that there was a prevailing color scheme of yellow as decoration, the hall tables featured a large level of yellow, and candles were made in charge of the tea.

"NO ONE IMMUNE"

College professors sometimes overlook the importance of carrying insurance protection on their possessions. Are your personal belongings insured against loss from fire, theft or liability? College professors, and no one else, are not immune from law-suits if they should be so unfortunate as to have an automobile accident. Litigation costs money. Liability insurance is not expensive when the risks involved is considered!
