An Honor System?

There does not exist at Winthrop college any institution which is comparable. None has ever been visualized with thoughtfulness, leaves one with a sense of completion. Would be to say: Winthrop college has no honor system. At the last Senate meeting, the stratagem to introduce an honor system at Winthrop three years ago, was discarded. Winthrop will be Winthrop, and always has been Winthrop. When Winthrop needs an honor system, and that the students want one.

In order to install a successful system here, research must be done. All honor systems at other colleges would have to be studied. It would have to be decided and weighed carefully. Would one exist for the entire college, or would have to be considered in order that good, working system could be installed.

religious education

VARIOUS COMMENTS ON THE CAMPUS regarding the basic idea of religious education. It has been brought to the current editor's attention that the students interested in the installing courses at Winthrop in religious education.

Winthrop is a State college, there may be some criticism from the outside if the College installed a required course in Bible or another phase of religion.

There is no reason why Winthrop should not have a department of religion and philosophy, but whether it is favorable to the students and the faculty is the question. There are arguments pro and con.

It would seem that with as many courses on religious education, a course in the study of the Bible would be a practical one to add for those interested in the subject.

The course who come attired appropriately feel that they have wasted some time and fashion when about half of the girls are not in harmony.

All the girls who come to the campus will be required to "dress" and look the part in order to be considered in campus activities.

The class of '65 will be free of all such restrictions.

The Honor system at Winthrop will be a college honor system, or it will be considered in order that good, working system could be installed.

students are aware of the fact that dressing for upper norms of Artistic and Liberary courses is compulsory.

Girls who come attired appropriately feel that they have wasted some time and fashion when about half of the girls are not in harmony.

If we are to be perfectly honest, we have to realize that the Bible seems, would be a valuable way to bring the students interested in the subject.

In England, science, or government, many girls are required to attend courses in the study of the Bible.

The class of '65, and the class now, will go through the light of the high point of the college—the glorying in the Bible.

Putting all the music and, of course, color inside and out, the light of the high point of the college— the glorying in the Bible.

And the lights went on, we felt a definite lift in the atmosphere of the hall, and the attention of the girls, and the ranks of the naval cadets in Jordan Hall, and the influence that the Bible has on Winthrop and Christianity and for Winthrop.

In fact, Winthrop in the State school, a required course in Bible study.

CASTLEBURY STATES SOCIAL FIELD OPEN FOR WOMEN

By LOUISE NEAL

"Social work is a wide-open field for women," declared Mrs. Castleberry, instructor in the sociology department and former social survey worker.

Mrs. Castleberry is convinced that surveying is open to women with adequate training and willing to spend the time necessary interviewing and collating data. "Surveying is a highly technical phase of social research work," she explained. In the process by which a survey worker obtains an accurate cross-section of a given population.

Desirable Qualities

The social research analyst should be interested in social welfare, and have a strong desire to help others. He also needs a good knowledge of psychology, sociology and the social sciences; and an MA degree in Social Science.

"Social work is a wide-open field," Mrs. Castleberry is convinced. "Then; they have only begun to realize the importance of surveys." Mrs. Castleberry received her MA degree in Social Science at Louisiana State University, and is now teaching at Winthrop. She was employed by the United States Department of Agriculture as a social survey worker for three years, and in the past it was based on trial and error procedure," she said as she emphasized the need for more trained people to carry on surveys in the new scientific manner.

Less Competition in Field

"There is not a great deal of competition here," Mrs. Castleberry continued. "There is not a great deal of competition here, since this is a fairly new field.

"There are several years as a survey worker for the government, and various private agencies, but sociologists predict that in the future there will be a great deal of competition for survey projects sponsored by business concerns. This type of surveying has gained the respect of their teachers. How- ever, the job of collection of survey data is not a great deal of competition in the social sciences." Mrs. Castleberry said as she emphasized the need for more trained people to carry on surveys in the new scientific manner.

Professional Outlook

"This type of surveying has taken on an added importance," Mrs. Castleberry said as she emphasized the need for more trained people to carry on surveys in the new scientific manner. "I have noticed many changes at Winthrop for the better since my arrival," remarked Miss Hannah Plowden, returned Baptist missionary from China and Hawaii and an alumna of the class of '17. "I was glad to hear that you had voted to keep uniform for a longer period of six years, the last four of which were given to Winthrop. Miss Plowden, returning to this country in 1934, served in China for a period of six years, the last four of which were given to Winthrop.

"In answer to whether she had met Miss Grace Wells and Miss Alice Boyce, both Winthrop alumnae, in Hawaii. "I also met Dr. Elizabeth Weist (Mrs. DeForest Brown), a former teacher at Winthrop, who was teaching in the University of Hawaii."
