SOMETHING FOR NOTHING

"How will you love a bargain?" I asked. "Some people seem to think they have one and tell their adoring friends of the secret. But I think we have been able to go somewhere."

"You can say you did, never mind the cost of the stuff."

"It might be that it is the worse part of the question of life there is no bargain."

"The notion of the best of the world you have, and the best you may ever see, may be the best part of it."

"I wish you were with us, and that we were with you, and let it be a bargain, and not a war."

"Everyone who ever sees you will be our admiring mistress.

"Mary Ethel Owen."
In 1764, King George II of England appointed a commission to investigate his proposed colon-yes in the New World. Among the group was one John Col-leston, a merchant and planter in the Carolinas. The commission made a series of visits to various colonies and the South, including Charleston.

In 1765, Colston returned to Charleston. He was appointed a member of the South Carolina Assembly and served as a delegate to the Congress of the South Carolina Assembly in 1766. He was also a member of the South Carolina Gazette and Advertiser, which he owned from 1769 to 1772.

Colston was a supporter of the Stamp Act and other British policies, and he opposed the American Revolution. He was one of the leaders of the Loyalist movement in South Carolina.

Colston died in 1774 and was buried in the St. Philip's Churchyard in Charleston. His grave is now marked by a monument.
