Winthrop's Beloved President

With heart, filled with love and endearment, for one beloved and esteemed President, Winthrop College dedicated itself to pay him honor. For one last time Winthrop said, "We are but a little child, and we have found a father in David Bancroft Johnson, our President." His name will be a name to be remembered for all time. He fell in the year of 1827. The college, which was founded at that time, is a monument to the memory of the man who gave his life for the education of his fellow men. The college is a monument to the spirit of unselfishness which characterized his life. It is a monument to the love which he had for his fellow men. The college is a monument to the memory of a great man who gave his life for the betterment of the world.

Winthrop College Mourns Loss of Its Beloved President and Founder

After Forty-Two Years of Service, David Bancroft Johnson is Laid to Rest on Campus—Many Return to Pay Homage at the Service

Dr. Bancroft Johnson, beloved founder and president of Winthrop College, passed away on Thursday, December 26, after a long illness. His death marked the end of an era in the history of the college, which he had guided with wisdom and foresight for over four decades.

Among the gifts was a beautiful portrait of the college president, painted by Mr. Barron Steele, then a student at the college. The painting was presented to Dr. Johnson as a token of appreciation for his many years of service to the institution.

Dr. Kinard brought to the service a very moving Psalms, the last verse of which he recited with great feeling. The service concluded with the singing of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," under the direction of Mrs. Mary Wardlaw, dean of Winthrop College.

The funeral was very largely attended by friends and students of the college, and the service was presided over by Dr. Kinard, the college president, who spoke of the late president as a man of great character and ability. The service was concluded with the singing of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," under the direction of Mrs. Mary Wardlaw, dean of Winthrop College.

President Johnson leaves behind a school that is rich in worldly goods and in the spirit of service, a school that is the result of his unselfish devotion to the cause of education.

Biographical Sketch of Winthrop's Master Builder: Life Devoted to Unselfish Service

Dr. Johnson, upon whom was conferred the degrees of A. B., A. M., and J.D., was born in an environment that in many ways resembled that of his own home. He was the son of a poor teacher, and his early years were spent in poverty and hardship.

In 1861, when he was fifteen years old, he entered Winthrop College, where he studied for four years. He was graduated with the highest honors, and his talent for teaching was soon recognized.

After graduation, he entered the army as a private soldier, and was soon promoted to the rank of captain. He served with distinction in the Civil War, and was twice wounded.

After the war, he returned to his studies, and entered the College of Law in Columbia, where he obtained the degree of LL.B. in 1867.

He was then called to the bar, and practiced law for twenty years in South Carolina. He was a member of the legislative body, and served as a member of the United States Senate.

In 1887, he was elected president of Winthrop College, and served in that capacity for forty-two years. During his presidency, he developed the institution into a great State college, and made it the envy of our neighbors.

In his later years, he was a member of the United States Senate, and served as a commissioner of education for the United States.

Dr. Johnson died on December 26, 1915, after a long illness. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Wardlaw, and by their daughter, Miss Ethel Bancroft Johnson.

President Johnson leaves behind a school that is rich in worldly goods and in the spirit of service, a school that is the result of his unselfish devotion to the cause of education.
In loving memory of him who was our beloved president and benefactor, and we, his devoted daughters, do hereby issue this The Johnstonian, which proudly bears his name, with the greatest respect and deepest sorrow for our departed "Dede." His memory, vivid in the minds of those who loved him, will forever dwell in our hearts.

Universal Appreciation of David Bancroft Johnson

VOLUME VI NUMBER 13

JANUARY 12, 1929

Dr. Johnson was a child of necessity. When H. R. Johnson arrived in the college town of the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, there was a need for a public teacher of education. The town was then a small mining settlement, with a population of several hundred people. Dr. Johnson began his teaching career in a log cabin on the outskirts of the town, where he taught reading, writing, and arithmetic to the children of the miners. He continued to teach in this log cabin for many years, until the town grew and the school system was improved.

Dr. Johnson was a man of great vision and determination. He knew that education was the key to progress, and he worked tirelessly to improve the educational opportunities for the people of the Upper Peninsula. He established a system of public schools, and he fought to make sure that every child had access to a quality education. He was a true visionary, and his work laid the foundation for the educational system that we have today.

The death of Dr. Johnson will leave a vacancy that will be difficult to fill. He was a true leader, and his legacy will continue to inspire us to strive for excellence in education. We will miss him greatly, but we will never forget his contributions to our community. His memory will live on, and his work will continue to shape the future of education in the Upper Peninsula.

Winthrop College Honors David Bancroft Johnson, Its Founder

Dr. Bancroft Johnson, President of Winthrop College, is a native South Carolinian. He is the only son of Dr. James K. and Mrs. A. F. Johnson of Newberry. He was graduated from Winthrop College in 1883. Dr. Johnson's grandfather, James K. Johnson, was one of the most prominent in the antebellum public life of South Carolina.

As a young man, Dr. Johnson taught school, and then entered the University of South Carolina, of which he was a trustee from 1900 to 1930. He also taught at the State Teachers College at Spartanburg, and began his long and distinguished career as President of Winthrop College in 1894.

Dr. Johnson is a man of immense energy and a generous spirit. He has been, through the years, a benefactor to his beloved alma mater. He has been a generous contributor to the building fund, and has given to the college buildings and equipment, and to the library.

The blend of science and art is to be found in his life—much science, and very little art. His eyes are always on the practical side. The practical side, however, is the side that comprises the whole.

Dr. Johnson has a natural gift for public speaking. His addresses are always timely and well timed. They are given with great force and with bright ideas. They are always full of vital force, always full of life.

Dr. Bancroft Johnson, President of Winthrop College, is a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He is a life member of the American Historical Association, and a member of the American Civil War Society, the South Carolina Historical Association, and the South Carolina Bar Association.

We can see him now walking sometimes he has done his work, and the sun is shining on him.

As Dr. Bancroft Johnson, President of Winthrop College, has always been noted for his kindness and generosity to his students, and his interest in the welfare of the college, we can see him now walking, and the sun is shining on him.

The President is a man of great charm and authority. He is a man of great distinction and dignity. He is a man of great hospitality and generosity.

We can see him now walking, and the sun is shining on him.
