AUTUMN OF '79
WHILE Yale and Princeton were battling to a draw in football the adjoining class of science, directed by Thomas A. Edison, was busy at Menlo Park, only a few miles away. On October 21, their work resulted in the first practical incandescent lamp.

Few realized what fifty years would mean to the electric lighting and football. The handful who watched Yale and Princeton then dug roots to train thousands of today. And the lamp that glowed for forty hours in Edison's lab laboratory made possible today's billions of candle power of electric light. To honor of the pioneer scientists of lighting progress, the nation this year observes Light's Golden Jubilee.

Much of this progress in lighting has been the achievement of college-trained men employed by General Electric.
