The World Moves On and Up

Horse's Little Planet

Not many know that a planet is formed behind every horse's tail. So here we go with a small, but older one.

For instance, at a certain point of its orbit, the planet crosses the plane of the equator of the horse. At this instant, the horse's tail may be seen to cast a shadow on the earth.

The shadow often extends for a considerable distance, and may be observed for several minutes.
