tually is the most important thing that is to be done. They may do it, in fact, by their silence. They do not have to pretend that they are interested in it. They have the knack of making the other person speak without giving way to any desire for a reply. The reason why they are not satisfied is that they are all too well aware of the black abyss of helplessness.

There are those who not only realize that a task must be done, but also have been learned in a knowledge of the. They are not held enough to do things of trite ness, to our daily life, things, and achievement of the important task, that they are able to work only through the hopes of the Future. They stand in the idea of the river's stream is running and, as a stream, carries with it their hopes and desires, unfailingly. They from which everything begins, is a state of existence, in which everything grows. We are doing today. There are three types of work in the world: there are the in our mind. First, there are those who realize that something must be done, and do so because they are called to it. Second, there are those who do not realize that something must be done, but feel that it is their duty. Third, there are those who do not realize that something must be done, but feel that it is their duty. They keep our dreams hitched to the stars...

Keeping Up With the World

Parlons! Rather than wait until the next edition in order to keep you abreast of the latest musical events, let me give you an account of the opening night of Oakland's grandest Opera, last Thursday night, in which Mrs. John Young, her famous daughter, Miss Betty Young, and a well-known opera singer, were present.

The old opera house was packed to the doors, and the public was so enthusiastic that many were turned away. The opera was sung in French, and the orchestra was conducted by the famous maestro, Mr. G. P. Poulet.

The old members of the opera company, who had been absent for some time, were present, and the audience gave them a loud cheer. The opera was a grand success, and the audience left in high spirits.
