TUESDAY, JANUARY 2

More than 50,000 American mechanics and manufacturers have called in person at the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in Washington during the past year, and Director Julius Klein says that inquiries about foreign trade possibilities are now coming in at the rate of 4,000 a day, as compared with 1,000 a day last year.

Here is proof of the interest taken in foreign trade by a nation that never used to give the subject much thought. Manufacturers and merchants are not only keen to get their goods abroad, but they are more alert in finding out the present condition of the foreign markets and the things they are in demand for those markets. It is no longer the old hit-or-miss system of prospecting in becoming acquainted with thousands of young business men being trained for it in this country, as they were in Germany before the war.

It is timely activity, too. The foreign market may not be very satisfactory now, but it is destined to be, if the great consuming nations once get on their feet again. If this country does its share to help along a general economic revival and if it is there with the goods when the starved markets are ready to buy, there will be no doubt of the result.

Those who have paid their taxes for 1922 have doubtless noticed that there is a reduction in the State levy of four mills. On the face of the matter this looks like a tax reduction, and in a way it is. However, a certain amount of tax money must be raised to pay the expenses of operating the State government and the property owners in the State must pay this expense in one way or another.

The General Assembly last session passed a law placing a tax of two cents per gallon on gasoline. This law added in reducing the tax levy but did it reduce the State taxes of the average citizen?

John Smith owns 100 acres of land returned at $5 per acre, or a total return of $500. The State levy was reduced four mills and when Smith paid his taxes he found that they had been reduced $2.40. That looks good, but on the other hand Smith used 300 gallons of gasoline during the year 1922 and on each gallon he paid a tax of two cents, making a total of $6 for the year, which in reality means that he paid $3.60 more tax in 1922 than he did in 1921.

The reduction in the State levy has been of more benefit to the various corporations of South Carolina than to any one else. The railroads of South Carolina have saved thousands of dollars during the past year on account of the reduction of the State tax levy, because they have large holdings and they do not run automobiles or trucks.

The five railroads in Chester county are assessed for a little over a million dollars. On this assessment in Chester county alone, the five railroads will save more than $4,000 in taxes. This amount must be paid by some one and when you thrash the matter down it is found that the reduction in railroad taxes is being paid by the average citizen of South Carolina.

While it is true that the State levy has been reduced the average citizen will find that he has actually paid more State taxes in 1922 than he did in 1921 before the State levy was reduced.

MOTOR REGULATION ABROAD.

Automobile regulation is no easy matter. If regulations for drivers are to be strictly enforced, the regulations must be sane and equitable.

A committee of the lower house in the French parliament has been wrestling with the problem. As usual, there was no dearth of suggestions. One inspired citizen proposed that police officers should be stationed liberally at corners and along highways, to record the numbers of machines which exceeded the speed limit. When the chairman of the legislative committee threw up his hands in vehement protest. He declared that automobilists are already being subjected to a police force in France where they have never been, and there find they are judicially abused, all because policemen, as well as the rest of us, cannot read numerals with accuracy when a machine flashes by.

What the new French law will provide seems yet undecided, but the chairman of the committee has disclosed the measures which he has in mind. Every applicant for an operator's license will, if he has "his way, be subjected to a physical examination, especially for eyesight, sound hearing, and a nervous system calculated to withstand all shocks. Finally, to meet the situation where chauffeurs are asked by their employers to exceed the speed limit, and the employer has obtained indemnity insurance, the employer will stand in the position of co-insurer with the insurance company which carries the indemnity, always standing personally liable for at least one-tenth of the damages done by his chauffeur.—The Nation's Business.

ONE GREAT NEED.

By H. Addington Bruce
There is reason for all of us—and particularly those of us in political office—to recall from time to time this passage out of the writings of the historian Bancroft:

"The world of mankind does not rest in fragments, nor can a country have an isolated existence. All men are brothers, and all are bound men for one another."

"All nations, too, are brothers and each is responsible for the fraternal humanity which puts the bar of exclusion on none. New principles of government should not assert themselves in one hemisphere without affecting the other."

And, as supplementary to this, the psychologist Peters' more recent observation:

"The more you look into the matter the more clearly you will find that a man can not be independent of his fellows, yet be strong. We are all interdependent, and the more we can eliminate all from the cooperation of his fellows, the more becomes as important as one of the lower animals."

"We do not and can not work alone. We are all bound up into one organic whole, which includes within its circumference all parts of the globe."

Strongly am I tempted to say that the nations of the world are all parts of one human race, and that the cooperation of all nations and acceptance of the truth of statements such as these:

"Race prejudices are strong in the land, so are class animosities. People seem to think that the race to which they belong is inherently superior to all other races, and need have no concern as to those others, beyond adopting an attitude of condescension. Also, people talk—act—as though the particular social group in which they find themselves could safely disregard the rights and interests of other social groups."

We daily in Bolshevik Russia a direfully impressive proof of how serious such a notion is.

Bolshevik Russia is a land of war. And a land of war it will remain until the leaders of the proletariat recognize that no one social group can prosper without the free and willing cooperation of other social groups. Class must work with class, not oppose, much less endeavor to exterminate, the misery is certain for all.

It may, indeed, be alleged that under Communism by another class conveyed Russia into a proletarian realm. And assuredly preachment about class superiority should not be directed at the proletariat alone. The socialist-capitalist class likewise has something to learn with regard to interdependence of all human beings.

There is, too, the lesson to be learned of the interdependence of nations, as well as of social groups within in each nation. It is not a theoretical interdependence, but a practical, very vital one—as events during and since the World war have painfully demonstrated.

But when will statement the world ever acknowledge this and formulate their policies to make for international unity and solidarity rather than international strife and suffering? When will they recognize that only through international unity of action can the interests of their several nations be served?

That time, clearly, has not yet arrived.

Great Falls, S. C., Jan. 2, 1923.

Saturday afternoon at three o'clock, the local lodge of J. O. U. A. held a public meeting in the school auditorium for the purpose of setting forth the principles of the Order and presenting the Great Falls schools a Bible and Flag. Rev. W. J. Honeycutt made a short address of welcome, and the three outstanding principles of the Order, Virtue, Liberty and Patriotism, were ably presented by H. A. Tibbs, R. S. McNamee and J. E. Brown respectively. Hon. H. A. Hill, State Vice-Comptroller of Spartanburg presided over the Bible and flag, stating that the J. O. U. A. M. believed in the Bible, Americanism and patriotism being taught in the public schools. Prof. E. H. Hall, Superintendent, responded on behalf of the schools. The audience then retired to the school lawn where the handsome American flag was raised, and many cheers. Exercises were well attended and thoroughly appreciated.

GROWING ANTAGONISM TO FEDERAL TAX ON SECURITIES ISSUED BY THE STATES

There are some evidences of a reaction to common sense in the House of Representatives. Contrary to the belief that the proposal for a Constitutional Amendment to permit the States to issue securities for the purpose of the several states, a very marked antagonism has developed, particularly from the South.

The proposal to take away the privilege that municipalities, counties and small political units have to finance their immediate public requirements at comparatively low rates of interest never did have any standing among intelligent men who believe in the American system of government—a minimum of centralized government and a maximum, so to say, of local self-government. The effect of the project would have been to render more easy the borrowing of money by the Federal Government. It would have correspondingly paralyzed the money-raising ability of the states and their subdivisions. It is good public policy in those days to render it easier for Washington to spend money. It is good policy for the states to attend to more of their own public requirements and get out of the habit of appealing to Congress for funds. We think it can be established by the records that ultimately a county in the general run, gets back in service less from every dollar paid into the federal till than it does get back from the delinquent pay into their own county treasuries. We doubt very small communities waste any more money in public contracts than the United States wastes.

The question of economy, however, is not so important as is the preservation of independence in the several states. There has been "too much centralization" already, and it would gradually become complete were Congress able to dictate the terms on which school bonds for Jackson or some other county were to be raised. The idea that the small taxpayer is going to save money by putting a heavy tax on the bonds he himself is responsible for is too absurd for serious contemplation, and it is equally absurd to suppose that with control over all public borrowing in the hands of Congress, any measure of independence could be retained by smaller political entities.

It may be unfortunate that some men escape taxation, in part, by buying municipal bonds, but this condition is not without its benefits. It creates a good market for such bonds and this in turn "will permit the development of the nation progressively at a moderate cost of capital. Moreover, that capital flows quickly back into the industrial stream. There is such a thing as making the water in a river work twice, if the dams are far enough apart."

It is a matter for rejoicing that a very large body of men in the House of Representatives have declined to be fooled by the cry that the farmers demand this proposed Constitutional Amendment because it will help them. There is no convincing evidence that the farmers do demand it. The more the proposal is understood the less support it will have, particularly in those parts of the nation where sturdy individualism and a love of local freedom are still dominant characteristics.

The federal government does not have to rob the states in order to get money. All it has to do is to establish a scientific sales tax. That is a kind of tax no rich man could escape.—Manufacturers' Record.

KEEPING YOUR HEALTH.

By Brice Belden, M. D.
There is an unnecessarily large number of people who never feel wholly well, not to speak of feeling full of exuberant vitality, as they should. Very often this feeling of being only half alive is due to easily removed causes.

Some of these cases are due to insufficient nourishment in other words, are instances of malnutrition, and the majority of them are well enough nourished. In the latter class of cases the physical inefficiency is usually due either to the burrowing effects of poisons taken into the body, or to poisons taken into the body, or to poisons generated within the body.

Those who eat more than they should waste energy in building up excessive fat deposits in the body and in eliminating and detaching surplus foodstuffs. This accounts for the people who, from the popular standpoint, carry the picture of health, but who are always fatigued; they are the ones who never get any sympathy, because they look so healthy.

The hearts of these people are have to carry too great a load, and after a while the heart muscle softens and the victim becomes short of breath and unquiet to unusual strains of any kind.

In particular it is the man who eats excessively of protein products, particularly meat, who is most likely to experience the fatiguing effects of intestinal auto-intoxication. This accounts for many a dull intellect and inefficient body, especially after the age of 40. For the older we grow the less active our eliminating and detoxicating mechanisms.

The excessive intake of such poisons as are contained in tobacco smoke is another common cause of the feeling of being only half alive.

Keeping bad hours and sleeping in rooms where one constantly re-breathes stagnant air are other common causes of debility and poor mental poise, which latter result is believed to form in many cases the foundation of troubles leading to divorce proceedings and other kinds of squabbles.

Synthetic camphor, made from the turpentine of the pine forests of the South, is expected to remove Japan's control of the supply. The new process does not require elaborate machinery and can be made in plant units, and is a by-product, which is the result of this synthetic treatment, has a commercial value almost equal to the cost of the original turpentine.

BOLL WEEVIL EXPERTS COMING

Government and Clemson College Experts Among Top Speakers To Be Heard At Chester, S. C. January 29.

It is announced from the headquarters of the Southern Soil Improvement Committee at Atlanta, Ga., that a boll weevil control meeting will be held at Chester, S. C., January 29, 10:30 A. M., to which all farmers and business men are invited.

The announcement states that a notable array of speakers are engaged for the campaign, which is to be conducted in several counties in South Carolina.

In the list of speakers is J. N. Harper, Director of the Soil Institute at Raleigh, N. C.; J. C. January 29, 10:30 A. M., to which all farmers and business men are invited.

Dr. A. F. Conradi, State Entomologist, Clemson College, who has met the boll weevil and successfully wiped it out on South Carolina soil, will be among the speakers.

Dr. M. E. Winters, Clemson College, will bring agricultural speaker and authority, will be among those to be heard.

Dr. A. E. Grantham of Richmond, Va., agriculturist of a leading fertilizer company, who directed nearly 300 boll weevil control tests throughout the South in 1921, will also be heard. His boll weevil tests are said to be the most comprehensive and conclusive ever conducted in the South.

Other speakers of note who will probably participate are: C. A. Cobb, Editor Southern Ruralist; R. J. H. DeLoach, a well known cotton authority. Those mentioned will comprise two groups of speakers who will be heard in several counties of the State. The notable array of authorities who are to be heard will doubtless attract large crowds.

Mr. H. Anderson, organist of the Presbyterian church, who has been visiting relatives at Wrens, S. C., for several days is expected to return tomorrow.

Rev. W. J. Chandler, of Dillon, S. C. has accepted the call to become pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Monroe. Rev. Mr. Chandler is a graduate of Davidson College and of the Columbia Theological Seminary and will be a strong addition to the religious forces of Monroe. For the past several years he has served the Presbyterian church at Dillon. The decision to accept the call to the Monroe church was made after he had been favorably impressed in a recent visit to the city. While here he filled the pulpit of the Presbyterian church and delivered a strong sermon. Rev. Mr. Chandler and family will come to Monroe this week.—Monroe Enquirer.

HOW UNION FARMER BEATS THE WEEVIL

Riley of Buffalo, With Nine Share Croppers, Follows Experts' Program.

J. H. Riley of Buffalo, with nine share croppers, made 90 bales averaging over 500 pounds on 110 acres. He began in October, 1921, preparing his land, clearing all terraces and fence corners, burning all trash, even to surrounding woods. He planted Cleveland big boll seed early and freely, using 400 pounds $2.00 wheel planting and 200 pounds of nitrate of soda after chipping out. He used the "Point method" in his sowing formation. Later using the "dusting" method. On one tenant's crop, where the dust stuck, three bushels, he made 12 bales on 10 acres. Frequent and light cultivation.

Most, if not all, of this cotton was "set" before July 25-31, as at this time damp and rainy weather set in and the dust was not effective until the dry weather of early September.

He expects to try cotton, eight and ten to the row, once more and to have finished picking early in October, but already has much plowing finished, handicapped by unusually dry weather.

Incidentally, Mr. Riley is known as the "potato king" of Union county. For years he has been very successful in growing sweet potatoes for the local market. Some of his tenants this year old enough potatoes to pay their entire farm accounts. His Lookout Mountain-trip potato seed are always in demand.

This year he has made enough corn for two years' use on his farm.

Mr. Riley's only short crop is his "meat crop." This is the only thing that he says he can not make his negoties work according to his law, which is, "Do as I say or move." His tenants are just about the happiest in this section and are well willing to obey him, for no one can give them the excellent treatment that he does just they know it.

Premier Bonar Law outlining his anti-coalition policy during the great parliamentary contest said, "The argument put forward that in view of the pressure and danger from Labor, it was necessary to keep up even the name of a Coalition government, is a profound mistake. If we had succeeded in setting up, on the one hand, one party representing every-thing opposed to Labor, and on the other, Labor alone, you could have done nothing which would have added more to the force of Labor, and you would have made it certain that as an alternative government must come, the next government would have been a Labor government."

A NEW LAW NEEDED

When a merchant fails in business the government of the State in which the failure takes place should be in a position to take charge of the bankrupt at once. Said bankrupt should be thoroughly investigated by the commission appointed by the State. In case the failure was brought about by causes over which the commission has no control, then the public at large should have no control, the other hand if the commission in question finds that the methods employed by the bankrupt were rank with rascality and fraud, then the public at large should know all about it. When a merchant can go into a community and buy thousands and thousands of dollars worth of goods on a credit and sell them out at prices above value below the actual cost of production, to go where the side walks never freeze over for their walking hand in hand nowadays? It certainly looks that way to me. I have been told that there are ex-ecutives scattered around in the great cities of this country who know perfectly the art of settling up on the quiet the affairs of little and big bankrupts alike. These experts along with their patrons should be looked after like any other bunch of bootleggers. The man who cry down the investigation of evil are likely to prove to be partners in crime.

True Charity is Give and Take.

The proposal that the United States vote a gift of $70,000,000 to the impoverished and suffering Germans and Austrians is, in itself, a good sign. No man in his senses expects to spend his life hating former enemies, no matter how vile they may have been, and the American people have got to live in a little world with the Germans and the Austrians. Starvation and suffering are contagious—no nation in Europe can die of disease without imperiling the health and prosperity of Americans. Poverty in Europe is probably the main cause of whatever poverty is to be found in the United States at this time.

To lend a hand to the Germans and Austrians might serve well as a contribution to that good feeling which encourages and accelerates, if it do not set going, commercial cooperation. A donation to former enemies might be good business, it might fetch two dollars in return for one expended and it might be wise though it were unaccompanied by a friendly smile.

Would it be expedient in the quickest and easiest way to bolster tottering and delirious nations and civilizations? Seventy millions of dollars would go far in feeding them—if the sum were limited to that sum scarcely a child in Germany or Austria checked in growth for want of nourishment would increase to normal stature by reason of the gift.

This Republic can not substantially assist other nations by tossing them crumbs from its stores—no more than a man relieves pauperism by dropping a dime in a beggar's tin cup. So long as Americans frame laws based on the principle that their trade and commerce is sufficient for themselves, that they can stay rich and get richer by going it alone, strangers in distress will not be benefited greatly by small charities.

If Americans genuinely wish to help the Germans and Austrians, they can best do so by allowing the Germans and Austrians to help Americans in turn. Much more is to be hoped from give and take than from giving with a goodbye kiss to the spending dollar.

The American Republic, as it presently stands, is a present guided and governed, in its territory, by a few men, not too much from Europe; it is actually trembling lest Europeans pay them their debts with stuff that American producers wish to sell to American consumers at heavy prices.

Why not confess the truth? The pouring out upon our shores of some hundreds of millions, not to say billions, worth of gloves, purses, furs, woolen goods, machinery and thousands other commodities, to be distributed at low prices among the masses of the American people, might embarrass the American millionaires whose skills make things, in 1918, scarce or Smith saved and refused to buy a bond of a hundred dollars and its proceeds went to the Allies—but the American congress does not consent that Ally or enemy country sell Smith or Jones a suit of clothes for $20. So long as we exact gold for payment of European debts and maintain the tariff wall against the coming in of goods, our manufacturers will be safe—and will be disposed to indulge in snug chiefly to perishing children.—Selected.

THE BENEFITS OF SLEEP.

By Eric Belden, M. D.

Through sleep we get rid of many toxic products. Consequently, regular sleep not only conduces to the daily feeling of well being, but also increases our prospects for a post-pregnant vitality undoubtedly favored by deficient sleep, as well as neurasthenia, and even insanity—provided there is any marked tendency to the last named condition.

During sleep the products of fatigue which have accumulated during the day are removed by the blood from the brain and eliminated largely by the kidneys. This fact has been well established by famous authorities like Obersterner, Binz and Bonchard.

If we sleep well and soundly we arise in the morning feeling fresh because of the elimination of toxic products.

The physiologist Bunge reminds us that a man can live for a month without food, but only a few days without sleep. Fishes him.

Sleep may be attributed to a condition of auto-intoxication. If induced by fatigue poisons and then in turn makes it possible for the body to rid itself of these poisons.

Most authorities appear to be agreed that during sleep there is a lessened amount of blood in the brain. This is why excitement prevents sleep, or hard thinking for then there is a greater flow of blood to the brain. This was proved in an interesting manner by Mosso who balanced a man on a scale and showed that the head and would become depressed when the man was made to think or was subjected to excitement.

This knowledge helps in the treatment of insomnia. In order to sleep the brain must be at complete rest. The head must also be cool.

A GOOD SHOWING.

Home Demonstration Workers Make Splendid Showing in "Poetry."

Poetry work in South Carolina has never had a brighter future. The increase in production and the improvement in breeding has never been greater in any one year than in 1922. Under the supervision of the Home Demonstration Department, 39 Women's Clubs with 608 members, 30 Community and 3 County Foultry Associations with a membership of 629 men and women, and 56 Boys' and Girls' Clubs with 639 members, have had instruction and individual help in poultry raising. The number of pure-bred fowls raised last year was 29,878 as compared with 11,716 this year. The total value of poultry products sold and used at home amounts to $135,586.26.

Reports from the county agents show that more than 984 meetings have been held with Boys' and Girls' clubs and equally as many with adults. Much marketing of poultry has been done by the agents, and all found ready sale on the South Carolina markets. Of the $69,800.48 brought from the poultry sold, a great part of it found sale through the help and industry of the Home Demonstration Agents.

Several large poultry farms have been established this year. One is keeping this winter 8000 layers, and a number have as many as 1000 hens. Numbers of large incubators have been installed and turkey chicks by the thousands will be turned out next spring.

No state is better suited for the production of poultry than South Carolina and with a little more time, our farmers and breeders will keep pace with the best of poultry producing states.

From an account of what Judge Card, Connecticut, had to say about the quality of the Beds at the Charleston Rhode Island Show at Chesterfield, he writes: South Carolina R. I. Beds of single comb variety are on par with any exhibit ever seen in an Eastern Show, including the largest city and hub of the universe. As a Northern and Eastern Judge who has handled the world's best, I am dealing without prejudice or mental reservation that this grand class of Beds at Chesterfield was far superior to any exhibit I have judged this season, and would compare favorably with the best winter shows North, East and West.

Create A Demand

If every person in Chester county would confine their expenditures to the absolute necessities of life, many mercantile establishments would have to close their doors.

The amount of business done in a community depends upon the demand of the people. Thousands of dollars are being spent throughout the country giving publicity to various articles, with the view of creating a demand.

Merchants should advertise their business thereby creating a demand for the various articles they sell.

Esquimo pies are a luxury, yet the manufacturers made millions by advertising and creating a demand.

The less advertising merchants do the less demand they have for their goods.
