Study Of Psychology Very Helpful To All

If you are interested in people, you will be interested in the psychology courses at Winthrop College. These subjects prove interesting and help you in any field of work you choose to enter after graduation. Whether the student is planning to marry and raise a family, teach or work with people on any other job, courses in this department will be of value.

It is the aim of the department to provide students with a good general background for understanding human behavior and experiences. This understanding of self and others is developed by recognition of problems of individual development, of learning and adjustment, and of biological and social forces which shape the individual. Scientific inquiry is stressed, within the framework of high respect for the human individual and his potentialities.

Job opportunities for women are virtually unlimited today, and the Winthrop psychology department gives education toward many different fields.

Psychology itself is a young profession with the demand for well-trained psychologists far exceeding the supply. Careers in professional psychology may include positions in schools, colleges and mental health clinics, business, industry and business, and in government and the armed services.

Understanding of the ways in which people behave and the importance of the role that they play in society is studied in such courses as child and adult psychology, psychology of personality, and social, abnormal, applied and clinical psychology.

A course in psychological testing provides a survey of the field of psychological testing. Students receive practical experience by actually administering and interpreting tests to trained examinees. This course helps to prepare psychology students to provide a broad introduction to psychology to science in such fields as counseling and remedial education and experience.

Psychology The course is an experimental laboratory which is taken as an elective.

In the laboratory, experiments are performed by the students to illustrate and extend the major concepts and principles as presented in the classroom. These experiments are relatively simple and use methods of scientific study of behavior and psychological principles in development, learning, remembering, thinking and solving problems.

The psychology department sponsors a Psychology Club which has 25 members, a core section of Winthrop students. These girls are all psychology majors, but they are all interested in helping human behavior and experience.

Barbara Jones, a junior from Easton, is president of the club, Beverly Bellhouse of Fort Valley, Ga., Carol Campbell of Spartanburg, and Stephanie Doss of Rock Hill are vice president, treasurer, and secretary respectively.

The club's various committees include bulletin board, social and program committees.

The club's programs are planned to give the members a chance to develop a fuller understanding of themselves and others.

Dr. W. W. Keeling, world famous psychologist, visited the club recently and told of his million-dollar research project at Florida State University.

Plays, panels, and informal discussions with psychologists and social workers are included in the programs. The programs include a tour of the Winthrop Psychology Club house and a tour of the Winthrop Psychology Laboratory.

Winthrop's Psychology Club has as its goal the helping of students in the preparation for the field of psychology. The annual election of the officers is the responsibility of the Psychology Students Association.

Tom Gough, a junior psychology major, is president of both the state association and the Winthrop Psychology Club. Sociology major from Spartanburg, he is active in the student government of the college.

IMPROVE READING—These two students are using equipment for the reading laboratory designed to help students improve their reading periods. The equipment consists of visual filmstrips, which are projected by a special film projector. The content of the materials is recorded on a microphone and transmitted from the microphone to a radio receiver. When the microphone is turned on, the student is given a reading aid.

The reading aid is a regular comic with an electric motor through which film is run. Two small lights are placed on the student's desk to indicate when the film is running. When the student reads at the proper rate, the lights come on. The lights go out when the student reads too slowly or too fast.

Student Teachers Get Practical Training

By ANN BLACKMON

Do you've almost a full semester teaching to your credit, from the 10th week, you'll be signiﬁ cantly better prepared for your teaching experience in February or elsewhere. But how do you know?

Let's take inventory. In September you were anxious, emotionally balanced about the excitement of the new teaching experiences. It was so when you had taken a test, you felt so exhilarated.

And so you conscientiously familiarized yourself with the conditions of your teaching environment. You had your samples of pupils in the classroom to which you had been assigned, and made every lesson plan with care.

Yet in spite of your diligence, certain situations caught your awareness—odd circumstances affecting conditions that you failed to anticipate during your period of preparation, minus the children.

You had to learn by yourself how to win, why. Pupils vary in the effectiveness of emotional climate and what significance a day of the week may have—Monday, Tuesday, Friday, with week and anticipation.

You began to take into account the effect on your pupils of the Poindexter effect, the mood of the students just before a holiday. There were other anything you could not speak of, the time little Joe said, "I hate you" the impact of marks upon your pupils and teachers. You suffered the difﬁculties of the moment surrounded by experienced supervisors, no matter how unlikeness and labeling they were. You were sometimes overwhelmed by the amazing amount of paperwork required, by the split rule in class, played every day as a teacher at South Street and a student in the dorm.

But you've learned. You realize now that the lesson in your playground is a small part, however essential, of teaching. You've found a steady voice a most effective teaching aid. You understand that the more you know about the personality, the background, and sensitivities of each pupil, the better you can teach. You've learned that planning activities with your class makes possible varying experiences unique in value and that keeping the classrooms attractive and harmonious pays dividends in happiness.

In fact you've learned so much you no longer depend solely on your own effort for success. You've woven parents of your pupils into the classroom, and you know that planning activities with your class makes possible varying experiences unique in value and that keeping the classrooms attractive and harmonious pays dividends in happiness.

Emphasis Is Placed On Study of Math

Speckles and the Intersocietal Ballroom Middles have, over the last 20 years, resulted in un-precedented emphasis on the study of mathematics and other natural sciences. It is a prerequisite to many career in industry, engineering, scientiﬁc research, and other technical sciences. A certain amount of math is now considered valuable background for all education personnel.

Women have shown themselves to be capable of successfully pursuing such careers. Recent Winthrop graduates in mathematics now hold positions in the Federal Security Agency in Washington, in the jet research center of the United States and in high schools throughout the nation.

Fifteen courses in mathematics are available for the Winthrop students who are preparing to teach mathematics or to use mathematics in those special-interest predilections.

Many students other than mathematics majors take courses in this department. Computer majors are required to take two semesters of business mathematics. A one-semester course in the principles and applications of elementary arithmetic is offered for students majoring in elementary education.

Courses may also be taken to fulﬁll science requirements toward obtaining certain degrees. A mathematics course consists of 30 semester hours of course work.

SINGING SESSION—Senior music major Emily Patrick of Rock Hill prepares her class for the day's singing lesson. Students receive practical experience in the classroom during their senior year. The student teaching clinincs several years' study in education.

IT'S LIKE THIS—Poindexter Pear of Anderson, a senior elementary education major, makes her point before this class of students at Winthrop Training School. The school which serves as a laboratory for future teachers, includes all grades from kindergarten through high school.

SPEED TEST—These students are gearing up for a typing speed test under the watchful eye of Patricia Cooper of Anderson, a senior business major at Winthrop. Most of Winthrop's practical exercises are assigned to Winthrop Training School but others reach in Rock Hill High and to other schools throughout the state.

History Study Enlightens Students

In an effort to help students understand the world in which they live, the study of history and government prepares them for critical fields of activity. They may become teachers of history and the social studies or they may gain essential background information for various types of government, diplomacy, journalism, law or research.

Some courses in United States history, minor in history or use it as a field from which to choose electives. The American Colonies, the Federal Period, the War of 1812, the States and Reconstruction, the Renaissance, the History of the South, the Westward Movement, and the History of South Carolina.

The general courses in history are designed primarily for commerce majors. Students may also take these courses as a variety of advanced courses. Advanced history deals with the early civilizations with special emphasis on Greece and Rome. Medieval history emphasizes the cultural development in Europe during the middle ages.

A one-hour course in contemporary history presents an analysis of the intellectual, economic and political developments in the world today. Courses are offered also in the history of Europe 1789-1945, Latin America, and the Far East.

There are currently four semester courses in United States history an advanced one-semester course is offered in each of the following: The American Colonies, the Federal Period, the War of 1812, the States and Reconstruction, Recent United States History, the History of the South, the Westward Movement, and the History of South Carolina.

The general courses in United States history are designed to aid students in gaining a realistic, working understanding of national, international and foreign governments and international organizations.

In the general course in American government, emphasis is placed on the structure and functioning of the federal government. Attention is given, also, to contemporary events and personalities.

The organization and operation of state and federal governments are studied in the course on state and local governments. The South Carolina state and local governments are studied particularly.

Another course deals primarily with American political parties.

Courses are also offered in public administration and American foreign relations.

Governments outside the federal system are studied in two other courses.

Contemporary Foreign Governments places special emphasis on the major world powers and their governments.

The course in International Political Organizations is concerned with the United Nations, the Pan American Union, and other international political organizations.

Winthrop Students Publish Tatler, Journal

PUBLICATION CONFERENCE—A lot of work goes into the publication of the Tatler and it takes a lot of talent and planning in turn and the process again will be repeated so many time for each issue. A long time to come. Taking your publication problems into the hands of Mr. Tom Francis of The Progressive Company, Susan House of Sams, sonorous editor, and Robert Thompson of Columbia, editor.

EDITOR IN CHIEF—Stepping into editor in chief of the Tatler for 1949 is Senn Thompson, a senior business major at Winthrop, who has been an active member of the journalistic staff for two years. He is the first student to hold the position, and he is expected to be a leader in the field of journalism.

This issue of the Tatler is brought to you by the student publications committee, which is responsible for the publication of the journal. The committee consists of students from all classes and levels of scholarship, and they are dedicated to producing a quality publication that reflects the interests and concerns of the student body.

The Tatler is published bi-monthly and is available for free to all students at Winthrop University. The publication covers a wide range of topics, including campus news, sports, entertainment, and features on local and national events. The Tatler is an important source of information and entertainment for the student body, and it is relied upon by students, faculty, and staff alike.

The Tatler is also available online, and students are encouraged to follow the publication on social media to stay up-to-date on the latest news and events. The Tatler is a truly unique and valuable resource for the Winthrop University community, and it is a testament to the dedication and hard work of the student publications committee.
March 8 is an eagerly awaited date as the Western College campus. That day members of the junior class will stage the 1960 production of Junior Follies. In a high-spirited Western tradition, members of the junior class on all out to stage this production to the fullest degree. As a result, the program will be a complete surprise to the audience.

The theme of Follies is to raise money for the annual junior-senior dance but, working long and hard over Follies has been a great instigator for the junior class. The theme of the show is a complete surprise to the audience.

Students At WC Are Self-Governing

It has been said that the rise of self-government by women students put on the academic program and development of college life is one of the largest uncertainties in educational history of higher education.

Self-government provides the opportunity for students to develop their own ideas and to express themselves. It is a democratic process that allows students to have a voice in the decision-making process of their educational institution.

The Student Government Association (SGA) is the main body of student self-government at the college level. It is an elected body that represents the students and works with the administration to address their concerns.

The SGA has several branches, including the Executive Board, Senate, and Judicial Board. The Executive Board is responsible for the overall operation of the SGA and the Senate represents the student body. The Judicial Board ensures that SGA operations comply with the college's policies and laws.

The SGA also provides opportunities for students to engage in leadership roles, such as the Student Body President and the Student Body Vice President. These positions are elected by the student body and provide a platform for students to develop their leadership skills.

In conclusion, self-government is an essential part of college life. It allows students to participate in the decision-making process, develop leadership skills, and ensure that their voices are heard. The SGA is a crucial component of self-government and provides opportunities for students to engage in their college community.
Like Man, It Was One Crazy Scene

It was a very wet, raw. It was also cold and freezing. This is the kind one might describe the 108 upperclassmen at Summerville High School as they made their way to the stadium.

The snow and sleet made them difficult to see, but a few feet away they could be seen walking back to their cars. The students were covered in snow and ice, but they kept moving, their spirits high.

Despite the weather, they were determined to have a good time. They had planned this for weeks, and they were not about to let a little snow and ice get in their way.

A few miles away, the high school was just as busy. Students were gathering in the commons, drinking hot cocoa and eating cookies.

Meanwhile, at Summerville High School, the students were preparing for the big game. They had been looking forward to this for months, and they were determined to make it a night to remember.

The stadium was packed, and the excitement was palpable. The students were cheering and singing, waiting for the game to start.

And when it did, they were not disappointed. The game was intense, and the students were cheering loudly, their voices echoing across the stadium.

In the end, their team came out on top. The students were ecstatic, and they celebrated with hugs and high-fives.

As they walked back to their cars, they were already planning for next year. They knew that they had accomplished something special, and they were proud of themselves.

The snow and ice may have been a hindrance, but it couldn't keep these students down. They had made the most of the situation, and they were ready to do it again next year.
THE OLD GRIND—Catching up with their studies after a long weekend is the problem facing these students. Each room in the six student residence halls is equipped with a double desk in order that students may study in comfort.

TIME FOR A SNACK—Who can resist an evening with friends? Eating a small snack while playing ping-pong makes this a high point in their day. These girls request a meal at the residence hall with alistia for students.

SHARPENING THEIR WITS—There is nothing like a round of bridge to sharpen one's mind. This is a pastime that everyone enjoys at the residence hall. The bridge players can complete a game in just an hour or two.

THAT IMPORTANT CALL—The dormitory is supplied with a telephone at every dormitory and the phone is in the Administration Building.

A LITTLE SKEWER—Miss Wilma Reed and Miss Mary Ann Smith shoo away the bugs. The Residence Hall is well equipped with two adult smoke detectors available to the students. The residence halls are under the supervision of the dormitory.
W.R.A. Programs Provide Fun For All

The W.R.A. (Woman's Residence Association) is a social and recreational organization at Wake Forest College. The programs and activities offered by the W.R.A. are designed to meet the recreational needs and interests of the student body. The organization offers a variety of activities, including sports, parties, and social events.

One of the main events organized by the W.R.A. is the W.R.A. Dance, which is held on weekends. The dance is open to all students and is a popular event among the student body. The W.R.A. also organizes other events such as movie nights, theater trips, and picnics.

The W.R.A. has a long history of providing fun and entertainment for the student body, and it continues to be a popular organization on campus. Whether you are a member of the W.R.A. or just a student at Wake Forest, there is something for everyone in the programs and activities offered by the association.

ASSOCIATION MEETS SPIRITUAL NEEDS HERE

The Winthrop Christian Association, one of the big three campus organizations, attempts to understand and meet the spiritual needs of every student at Winthrop. This is accomplished through a broad and comprehensive program of activities designed to benefit every individual.

Mrs. Robert C. Pettis, executive secretary, and other elected members compose the Christian Association cabinet. This cabinet is the pivot upon which the activities rotate and extend to the entire student body.

The Winthrop Christian Association is responsible for the devotional programs given throughout the year. This includes the Monday night service conducted throughout the school year, and other devotional programs are conducted through group activity during the three-day program.

The school year begins on the campus of Winthrop Christian Association. Many prominent ministers have taken part in these devotional services sponsored by the Winthrop Christian Association. Many students and faculty have given before lunch Monday to participate in these devotional services.

Fred V. Pong, pastor of Shonando Presbyterian Church of Columbus, Ga., performed his usual degree from Davidson College and the M. A. degree from Duke University. He conducted the devotional program and the Wednesday evening intercollegiate seminar where he received his Bachelor of Divinity, and diploma in Theology degree.

The program got underway with a student assembly at which Dr. Pong spoke on "The Awful Feeling of Being Alone." In his address, Dr. Pong challenged the students to face the honors of excellence.

"A man's basic intention is to be with other people, the deepest experiences of life are melody," the minister pointed out.

Dr. Pong urged the young women not to be satisfied with some mediocrity but to have to come out for a degree of excellence.

"The call to excellence is the call to aloneness," Dr. Pong stated.

When an important decision is to be made, he urged, the decision rests with you and God," he said.

"God's religion is not an association but a commitment and dedication of history, family and friends.

Good love is to be alone in this experience; rather he asks each man to go through the experience in single life, then come into the company of others.

"The decision, 'God does not separate you from human kind. You are not together with Him.'" Dr. Pong said.

"Mr. C. W. Watterson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Spartanburg, was the visiting minister for Religious Emphasis Week Feb. 5-12.

Dr. Watterson participated in various programs as a guest scholar. He was the speaker for the Opening Worship and Discourse, in addition to the address for the College Church at First Presbyterian Church of Spartanburg.

"Dr. Pettis stated, "The religious emphasis comes when one learns God's way to comprehend and decide of his kindness, family and friends.

Good love is to be alone in this experience; rather he asks each man to go through the experience in single life, then come into the company of others.

Competition Decides Class Spirit

There is one night a year at Winthrop when saving class spirit really pays off. That spirit pays off in the form of a showing seen by the class who performs the best at the annual Class Night competition at the South Carolina College for Women.

It takes spirit, pay and ingenuity to come out on top at Class Night. Specifically, it is a test of song, skills and cheer to prove which class has the most school spirit.

Under the present system, a theme is selected for the classes to use in planning their programs. After the theme is announced the class coordinators get busy with creative minds to prove the strength of the class and the spirit.

During the two weeks leading up to Class Night, each class plans a pitch with creative voices and songs to determine the winner.

The coordination for Class Night, theatrical presentation, pitch, and music all play a part in the success of each class who strives to win the coveted trophy.

This year’s theme was “We Fight for Our School.” The theme is the theme of the day for the entire Winthrop universe. The theme was chosen to emphasize the strength of Winthrop and the importance of school spirit.

The Miss Hi Misses of North Carolina

There are several nominating committees who work hard to select the candidates for the Miss Hi Misses of North Carolina. The candidates are chosen based on their skills, knowledge, and character.

At the competition, the candidates perform a song and dance routine, answering questions from judges. The winners are announced at the end of the event, and they receive a trophy and cash prize as recognition for their hard work and dedication.

The winners are chosen based on their performance, personality, and overall appeal to the judges. The competition is a highly anticipated event for all the participants, and they work hard to prepare for it.

OUR COUNTRY COUSINS—A real fancy instrumental group presented some real high class entertainment for visiting Miss Hi Misses last year. Com- ing straight to Winthrop Dean Broad- way were, left to right: Shirley Hees- den of Ninety-Six, Carol Finney of Dillon, Ann Turner of Cross An- ther, and Paule Fawell of South Hill. The group was featured at a Saturday night party for the visitors sponsored by The Johnsonian.

BIG PARTY—The 24 Miss Hi Misses of 1959 who were able to attend Miss Hi Miss Weekend last year at Win- throp College were entertained at a series of parties sponsored by various organizations. One of the parties was sponsored by the Carolina College for Women. This par- ty which Ann Blackman of Health Springs, former editor of The John- sonian, served punch followed a spe- cial program presented for visiting Miss Hi Misses by the Winthrop Theatre. This year the Winthrop Theatre will present "Streetcar Named Desire" for Miss Hi Miss Weekend.

Special Weekend Will Honor Outstanding Senior Girls

Outstanding North and South Carolina high school senior girls, honored in this edition of The Johnsonian, will be special guests of Winthrop College March 25-27. The program is scheduled especially for these young women who will represent their schools at Miss Hi Miss Weekend.

Winthrop College seniors and students were able to accept Winthrop College's invitation for the weekend. The 1959 Miss Hi Miss Weekend will follow the same pattern as last year's program.

Student leaders for the big weekend will be members of the staff of The Johnsonian who will be assisted by former Miss Hi Misses who are now enrolled as students at Winthrop. Upon arrival at Winthrop, the guests register with the Miss Hi Miss committee in the Administration Building and are taken by Winthrop students in one of the few student residence halls where they will be housed during the weekend.

Supper in the Dining Hall is the first sche- duled event for Miss Hi Miss Weekend. The honored guests will be seated in a special section of the Dining Hall with Winthrop students serving as hostesses.

One of the highlights of the weekend is scheduled for Friday evening. The division of dramatic art at Win- throp has planned a special program just for the Miss Hi Misses. The Winthrop Theatre has a similar produc- tion scheduled to coincide with Miss Hi Miss Weekend this year Mr. William J. Long, director of the Theatre, will present "Streetcar Named Desire" for the guests.

During the play, members of the Winthrop Theatre will have an informal coffee hour in Johnson Hall in order to have an opportunity to meet and talk with the guests of the college.

Miss Hi Hi Miss Weekend. First on the agenda will be a short assembly in Johnson Hall in which Miss Hi Hi will hear short talks by college officials and student body leaders in- cluding President Davis and the president of the Student Government Association.

After the assembly the high school guests will be conducted on a tour of the campus and they will be especially interested in the departments of the col- lege which are of most interest to them.

During the tour, the guests will bring the guests to Mrs. Anne Smith. She will be on hand to pass out Cokes and goodies.

Thegathering afterward will be at the How- ger House located on the College Farm. Directing the fun will be members of the Winthrop Recreation Association who have arranged for a pic-nic at the Howger House.

The most interesting day of Miss Hi Hi Miss Weekend will be Saturday night. The Miss Hi Misses will attend the College Auditorium for a special concert in the College Auditorium at Winthrop College which will be followed by another party in their honor in the Howger House. Supper will be served at the Miss Hi Misses will attend the church service at the Winthrop College. The program will be followed by another party in the honor of the guests.

Founded in 1883, Winthrop College became a state- supported institution for young women in 1903. The name was originally Winthrop Training School for Teachers. In 1891 it became the South Carolina Institute and School for Women. The name was changed again in 1903 to Winthrop Normal and Indus- trial Institute and School for Women. The name was changed again in 1923 to Winthrop Normal and Industrial Institute and School for Women. The name was adopted in 1925.

Rat Caps Cause Many A Woe Among Winthrop Freshmen

"There was never a time when it didn't rain. It's a woe!"

The close of the Miss Hi Misses of North Carolina was a trying experience for many Winthrop students. The annual event, which is eagerly anticipated by the student body, was marred by adverse weather conditions that led to delays and disruptions.

Despite the challenges, the pageant proceeded as planned. Performances were held in the college's main auditorium, where a large crowd had gathered to watch the festivities.

The evening began with the introduction of the contestants, who were dressed in stylish gowns and carried bouquets of flowers. The audience was treated to a variety of talents, including singing, dancing, and dramatic recitations.

However, as the night wore on, the weather started to turn sour. Rain began to pour down, making the outdoor portion of the event almost impossible to proceed. The contestants were forced to seek shelter, and the event was cut short.

Despite the wet weather, the students continued to enjoy themselves. Many were seen dancing and singing in the rain, and others took the opportunity to sit and chat with friends.

In the end, the Miss Hi Misses of North Carolina was a memorable event, but it was marred by the unpredictable weather. Students are already looking forward to next year's event, hoping for a better outcome.

WC Placement Bureau Aids Students, Grads

When Winthrop graduates prepare to enter the business world, they are aided and encouraged by the WC Placement Bureau, which Dr. Wilbur D. Livingston is the director and Miss Anne King, the placement secretary.

The Placement Bureau is one of the few centralized bureaus in the state and has 100 per cent registration of graduates. All companies that wish to register with the Bureau may contact it and receive the same placement help as the graduating class.

Up to now Winthrop graduates have been impressed with the Placement Bureau's services, and the Bureau has grown from a small service to a full-fledged operation. The Placement Bureau is one of the few bureaus that can get graduates on their own, and can secure positions for the best candidates.

Winthrop Selected For Career Study

Winthrop College has been selected as one of 30 educational institutions in the South to participate in a two-year study of college career counseling.

The purpose is to provide general estimates of the potential demand for graduate and professional study in the Southern region to obtain information regarding selected characteristics of students who plan to enter graduate or professional study, and to provide information regarding the relative importance of factors influencing their plans, and to supply participating institutions with information regarding career plans of the degree of excellence they require.

The study is being conducted by Southern Regional Education Board.

MAY QUEEN—Elected by her classmates to serve as the May Queen at May Day exercises at Winthrop College is Virginia Addison of Joanna. The attractive Virginia is a junior economics major at Winthrop. The Miss Winethrop contest is sponsored each year by the Winthrop Student Association to raise money for the International Student Scholarship Fund.

Winthrop History Shows Growth, Progress

It began with one man's dream. It was nurtured by many men and women of vision. Today Winthrop shows the living legacy of all South Carolinians.

From a borrowed stable to a campus of 60 acres and 23 buildings—a $50,000 Peabody grant to an annual state appropriation of $1,280,000.

From the first 16 graduates to an aloof majority of more than 22,000, from a single course of study on 17 subjects to baccalaureate offerings of 57 majors in 19 departments.

Progress and growth are related for these facts, but they did not come easily. Winthrop was born in the mind of David Bancroft Johnston, his lifeblood was a small brick church, originally built as the stable of a great estate, on the grounds of the Columbia Presbyterian Theological Seminary.

Its birth date was Nov. 15, 1845, when 17 young women, soon followed by five men, enrolled for the first year.

As superintendent of the Columbia city school, David Bancroft Johnston had obtained in his mind the need for a school for women in the province.

With energy and enthusiasm, he took the precept of a training school for young women, giving the enthusiasm and support of others in education, he secured financial aid and obtained quotas for the school.

The school was named Winthrop Training School for Teachers in honor of Robert C. Winthrop of Boston, who, as chairman of the Peabody board, was largely responsible for a grant of $1,000 to establish the school.

Two teachers were employed and five students enrolled, each to be paid $30 per month.

The first class of 17 students was the nucleus of the first small school in South Carolina that provided baccalaureate education for women.

Winthrop's place The South Carolina College for Women, with its $10 million physical plant, was provided in the grounds of the Columbia Theological Seminary in this Chapel which was used by the Seminary students before the school was founded.

The church was bought by Dr. David Bancroft Johnston in 1836, and in 1838 Winthrop's founder was elected to the presidency of the college.

Dr. Johnston died in 1852, and in 1853 the college was transferred to the trustees of the college.

The Little Chapel, dedicated to the memory of Dr. Johnston, was completed in 1855.

Winthrop History Shows Growth, Progress

WINHROP COLLEGE

Winthrop continued her service to the young women of South Carolina under the administration of her two presidents.

New buildings were erected, among them the music auditorium and conservatory of music, and the home economics building.

Throughout all of the years of administration by her two presidents, Winthrop maintained a high academic standard consistently increasing the educational opportunities for her students.

Student numbers grew both in men and women teacher education.

In 1914, the school changed its name to Winthrop College, in honor of Charles D. Winthrop, a banker, who was the first president of the college.

Winthrop continued to grow, both physically and educationally, and in influence in the state. The school changed again in 1923, this time to Winthrop College, the South Carolina College for Women, and such has remained today.

On the 50th anniversary of the college's founding was opened by the laying of the cornerstone for a new building.

The college was renamed Winthrop College in honor of David Bancroft Johnston, who was the first president of Winthrop College, and who was the grandson of Dr. Johnston.

In 1906, the college was renamed Winthrop College again, in honor of Charles D. Winthrop, who was the second president of the college.

Winthrop College was chartered by the state of South Carolina in 1845, and in 1853 it was incorporated as a corporation.

The college is one of the oldest in the state, and is one of the few private institutions of higher education in the state.

The college has a long and distinguished history, and it is a source of pride to the people of South Carolina.
