Piper joins anti-drug team
Local stars to work against drugs
by RANDY PHILLIPS
TJ staff writer

Prominent South Carolinians from across the nation are coming home to serve in Attorney General Travis Medlock's "Be Free to Succeed" team.

The purpose of the program is to work with the young people of the state that they don't need to be free of drugs to succeed.

Among such names as astronaut Charles Bolden, Jim Rice (Boston Red Sox), Steve Fuller (Chicago Bears), Alex English (Denver Nuggets), Todd Ellis (U.S.C.) and Cliff Ellis (Clemson) is Winthrop College President Martha Piper.

A purpose of the team is to find ways to inform the young people of South Carolina that drugs destroy lives, Ms. Piper said.

She said she doesn't believe that there is any major drug problems at Winthrop. "I put alcohol in the drug category. There is a lot of drinking on campus, but I don't thing that there is a problem."

The idea for the Team grew out of a commitment made this year by Attorney General Medlock to put the clout and resources of his office behind a comprehensive program to deal with the state drug problem.

Marsha Silver, assistant public information director for the attorney general's office, said.

She said a purpose of the team was to tell the young people that they don't need to use drugs to be successful.

An essential part of the program is the use of prominent South Carolinians with whom young people can identify and admire.

She said that members of the team will help spread the "Be Free to Succeed" message through television and radio public service announcements, special taped programs for the schools and through working directly with young people.

"We are getting a lot of feedback from students," Mrs. Silver said.

She said the goal of the team is to impress among the students that they don't need drugs. "We educate the students that they need help to ask."

If a student has a drug problem he can contact the attorney general's office at 803-734-3970.

SGA discusses 'elite' senate plan
by MARK WOOD
TJ managing editor

A proposed bill which would realign senate and give non-traditional students seats in student government was discussed Wednesday.

Day Senator Scott Truett presented his plan to make senate "more elite" after senate went into committee as a whole.

"I think we have a lot of dead weight hanging around. We're thinking about trying to make senate more elite," Truett said.

Truett mentioned the possibility of having some non-traditional students represented as well as international students.

"I think international students really need a member here," he said.

Truett said senate had too many members and said if the number was trimmed considerably, the entire body could function more efficiently and with more active participation.

Senate had to begin the meeting by suspending the rules because a quorum was not present. Twenty-two of the 25 members needed for a quorum were present at senate last week.

Dwight Dickerman, day senator and chairman of the student allocations committee agreed with Truett's proposal.

"I think it would help with the committees," Dickerman said. "I had 14 people in my committee at the beginning of the year."

Cristina Grabel, associate dean of student development, said that most other schools with larger enrollments had smaller senates.

Registration begins
by TINA EZELL
TJ staff writer

A few changes have been made in the registration process to alleviate some of the problems students have when registering for classes.

Registrar and Director of Institutional Research, Karen Jones, said that while Winthrop has a good system, there are still problems, like few sections for the demand and overloading of courses. She said some of the problems have been solved by adding new course designators, like Science (SCI) and Speech (SPE), but a big solution would be to hire more faculty.

"But, we just couldn't find the qualified people," Ms. Jones said.

Alfred Lyles, dean of the college of arts and sciences, said...

Mrs. Jones said that she feels that students are fairly content with the way things are now.

Clemson students are given their classes through a computerized system, but they are not allowed to pick the times of the classes the way Winthrop students do. If they have a class conflict, they give the schedule back to the computer to reassign classes.

Mrs. Jones said she thinks that Bulldog students like to be able to make their own choices. Overall, Mrs. Jones said she believes the process will be quick and painless.

I don't know how you can make that as easy as possible, she said, but added that she is working on making things less hectic.

Winthrop car tags on sale

by LISA STUART
TJ staff writer

Now Winthrop College students can show off their school spirit every time they get in their cars.

License plates with Tillman Hall featured in garnet with the windows colored gold have gone on sale.

Along with Winthrop being represented, so are the eight other state-supported colleges in South Carolina.

Each tag will cost $32 and will expire Nov. 30. Renewal stickers will also cost $32.

The plates will only be made available in a numerical series, so supporters will not be able to personalize their tags with their choice of letters and numbers.

Also, state-owned vehicles cannot display the tags because the tags can be put on private passenger vehicles.

Tillman Hall was chosen because, besides the chapel, it is the best-known and oldest building on campus, according to Beth Banga, Winthrop media specialist.

Also, President Martha Piper said she's looking forward to putting a Winthrop license on her personal car.

Applications are available at either the cashier's office in Tillman or in Dinkins Student Union.

Simons's play to be shown
by KRS SYKES
TJ features editor
Winthrop College Theatre will present Neil Simon's "Brighton Beach Memoirs" April 22 to 25 at 8 p.m. in Johnson Hall.

The play, an autobiography of Simon's teen-age years, is about Eugene M. Jerome's discovery of girls, baseball and writing.

"Brighton Beach Memoirs" is the first of a trilogy written by Simon. "Biloxi Blues" and "Broadway Bound," which is currently playing on Broadway, complete the series.

The play setting is 1937 and the play mentions Hitler's threat to Europe and the family's struggle through the depression.

Dr. Les Reynolds, English and drama professor, will direct the play. Eugene M. Jerome, the main character, will be played by Mark McKinney, a junior at Northwestern High School.

Jerome's mother and father will be Winthrop junior Celie Runde from Tega Cay and philosophy department chair Dr. Bill Daniel, respectively.

Mike Palma, a Winthrop freshman drama major, will play Aunt Blanche Morton. Her daughters and Jerome's cousins will be freshmen Hallie Ruth Rose and Lisa Anne McGurk.

Even though "Brighton Beach Memoirs" was released last December, both Reynolds and Beasley hope that people will want to see the play.

"The stageplay is funnier," said Reynolds.

The stageplay does, however, require an extremely complex set including a second story with a bedroom and a full-course meal served during the play.

"It will be difficult, but quite a challenge," said Beasley, who designed the set.

In addition, Beasley said the play is stronger than the movie because there is a better understanding of the characters in the play.

Reynolds said the scripts for movies that have just been released are available on a limited basis. Winthrop Theatre was able to get the scripts because it does not compete with a major theatre or a touring company.

Tickets are $4 to the public and $3 with a Winthrop I.D. Reservations may be made by calling 323-4014.

Winthrop students may reserve free tickets by going to the Dinkins Student Union counter starting Monday, April 20. Students must reserve the tickets in person.

Finances hinder radio station
by LISA STUART
TJ staff writer
WCRO is a student-run radio station that plays top 40 hits from the 60s, 70s and 80s to the students of Winthrop College.

Broadcast nightly from 6 to 10:30 p.m. off the 640 AM dial Monday through Thursday, the station is a part of the audio-visual department at Winthrop.

WCRO has been on the air since March 27, 1961, according to Buddy Fields, staff advisor, and carries 5,045 albums dating back to 1963.

WCRO, the campus radio station, has gone through renovations of its control room for the teaching purposes of the audio-visual department.

"The control room is now more efficient and provides more realistic experience for the students," Fields said.

However, if you've been wondering why you can't pick up the station off campus, it's because the station uses a carrier current, not a tower, to broadcast.

The carrier current is wired through dorms and you can only pick it up through the electric sockets in your room.

In some buildings, however, the wiring system is loose and can't radiate enough to transmit. Some of these buildings include Richardson, Wofford and Thomson.

Some people have asked, why not go FM instead of AM? That way you'll get a stronger signal. The reason is that FM is too expensive; another is there are no available frequencies in the Rock Hill area.

According to Fields, in order to switch to FM, the station would have to spend $10,000 on finding an available frequency and then $80,000 to $100,000 to keep it on the air.

After that the station would have to hire two full-time staff people, not Winthrop students, and have WCRO running every day for 52 weeks a year in order to keep their license.

WCRO shares its budget with the audio-visual department and, although Fields said FM would be the only possibility for full broadcasting, it would be too expensive. WCRO doesn't get money from local merchants for publicity; instead, it receives promotional gifts for contests.
Trays on tables are expensive

It may seem like a little thing, but leaving trays on the tables in Thomson Cafeteria can get costly. Up to $6,000 per semester, according to Essie Maghsoud of Epicure Food Services.

When a student leaves a tray, several things happen. First, it clutters up the cafeteria. Other students must eat around it and put up with the mess.

Secondly, hired help has to come after the student and pick up the tray and take it to the conveyor belt. Multiply this action many times and it takes time.

Time is money. “That cost is not really costing Epicure,” Maghsoud said. “It’s costing the students. That money has to come from somewhere and it is coming from the food program.”

Maghsoud said he did not know whether meal prices would rise next year. He said prices had not risen in the past two years.

This year a 21-meal plan cost $406 per semester, the 15-meal plan $373, and the 10-meal plan $332.

Considering the relatively small amount of time it takes for one to carry a tray approximately 100 feet, it is inexcusable for even one tray to be left on a table.

Students who eat in the cafeteria have a responsibility to take trays to the conveyor belt. If students don’t take them today, they will end up paying tomorrow.

I want my MTV

by LINDA DAY
TJ contributing editor

I’m really tired of both local and federal government interference. It’s time for these entities to stop “protesting” us from watching the art of compromise? Instead of pulling MTV and replacing it with VH-1, which has as many scantily clad women cavorting around the screen as MTV, why didn’t they offer a compromise.

Why didn’t they say, “O.K., we’ll give you a choice. You can receive either MTV or VH-1 or both in your home – the decision is yours.”

This would have accomplished two things. First of all, those of us who are too depraved or senseless to realize that MTV is bad for us could still watch it.

Secondly, it would have placed responsibility for the decision where it belongs, at home. If these religious groups don’t want their kids watching MTV, then they

Registration is ridiculous

by VAN NORTON
TJ contributing editor

Are registration is here once again. Registration is a test of a student’s sanity that comes once a semester.

Think about it. We pay money, lots of money, to stand in line for hours, missing classes and generally wasting a day all to be told eventually that the only possible schedule that will get for us the classes we need won’t work. Why? Because:

A. There is a problem with the computers.
B. The class is already full.
C. The class was canceled.

Speaking of computers, where did they get those things? It would be quicker to send your schedule by carrier pigeon than to wait while the computer tries to figure it out. Then once your schedule is apparently accepted, you get to wait by the printer for a copy . . . wait by the printer for a copy . . . wait by the printer for a copy.

You still haven’t gotten it? Maybe they can send it again. Don’t you hate after two hours of waiting in line, they punch the schedule, sigh, and tell you that one of the classes you wanted just filled up a minute ago. Missing the spot affects your life for four months.

You haven’t gotten it? It’s even worse considering you’ve been twiddling your thumbs for the last two hours waiting.

Of course, they won’t even let you in unless you’ve been academically advised. For most, being advised means some professor you don’t know advises you to put what courses you want to take on a sheet so he can sign it. Students don’t like mandatory advisement. Professors certainly have better things to do. Even with an approved course sheet, the schedule doesn’t work at registration, you can take whatever you want anyway.

Still, all in all, we don’t have it too bad. I mean, it could be worse . . . it could be raining.
Students defend ‘The Tatler’

Dear Editor:

This is in response to Lisa Bue’s article, “The Tatler In-sults Students Intelligenc,” which appeared in the March 23 edition. We, the editors of the 1987 Tatler, would like to express our displeasure concerning the comments of the Tatler’s future existence. What do students have to jog their memories? Granted we remember the major events of our college years but, the annual is more than lines of pictures on a page; it is a pictorial story which captures the events of the year. More creativity and skill goes into producing an annual than replacing the heads of people. The annual gives students an opportunity to demonstrate their writing, photography and designing talents and to have their work published. The tradition of an annual needs to be preserved for these reasons. The students of Winthrop College must take an active role in continuing this tradition.

Sincerely,
Chris Hartman, editor
Missy Coleman, assistant editor and “the Tatler” Staff

I am writing in response to the article, “The Tatler insults students intelligence.” We were insulted, but not by “The Tatler.”

The article that appeared March 23 in The Johnsonian insulted many students who believe that the yearbook is special. The people in “The Tatler” are more than “photos on a page.” They are friends, roommates, and people you spend your college years with. While I am sure that The Johnsonian could be improved with more money, doing in the yearbook is not the way to get it. As for the argument the “The Tatler’s” awards are no big deal, line up TJ’s awards and see how impressed you are.

In closing I would like to say that I for one am not insulted by the yearbook. Afterall in 20 years who will be thumbing through old copies of The John-sonian?

Sincerely
Ray Steadman

Winthrop should promote “safe sex”

April is here again. Fools and lovers are coming out as the weather gets nice. The old hormones are flowing, and sex is in the air. This can be a problem. Unwanted pregnancy, social disease, and acne all have roots in sex.

But there is hope! Presented here are some alternatives that could be considered to help these problems on campus.

One program would be legalizing prostitution on campus. The administration could set up both a male and female escort service for the satisfaction of student body urges. This would serve many useful purposes. First, it would relieve sexual tension and stress of students in a controlled environment. Second, an escort service would also help restrict social disease since the ladies and gentlemen of the evening could be tested regularly to insure good health. Finally, it would generate additional money for the college and help keep tuition costs down. New physical education courses could even be added to the curriculum.

Freshmen would be introduced to the service on a free trial basis their first time on campus. Aside from the obvious recruiting advantages, it would give a whole new meaning to “Freshman O.”

If prostitution is too progressive for taste, how about vasectomy. All male freshman would be implanted at freshmen orientation so as to be made temporarily sterile. They would remain that way until graduation or marriage, which ever came first. Not only would this virtually eliminate unwanted pregnancy, it would also encourage dating on campus as opposed to seeing guys who don’t attend Winthrop. Admittedly, male enrollment might drop, but it would be worth the additional security.

A final solution would be stoning. Any students caught with a sexual disease, unwanted pregnancy, or a guy responsible for the pregnancy will get stoned in the biblical sense. A group would get together and throw stones at the offender/victim until he was dead. While fairly drastic, it would discourage free sex on campus, and there would be no repeat offenders.

Death tends to be a fairly permanent condition. This method does not really address relieving sexual tensions, but enjoys the full support of the radical right.

With any of these methods, sexual problems at Winthrop would plummet. Before taking any of these suggestions seriously and/or coming after me with large sticks, please reread the first word in the first two sentences, after that, you’re on your own.

MANAGEMENT STYLES

Don’t have to purchase cable services. For those who do wish to have cable, they could choose to have VH-1 installed rather than MTV.

My point is that as a parent, no matter what your religious preferences, you cannot eliminate all of the imperfections from the world your child lives in. The best you can do is to remove the most offensive material from your home.

True, this still leaves the rest of the world at large. But unless you plan to cloister your children in the mountains of Tibet, they are going to come in contact with sex and violence every day.

It’s in the newspapers constantly. Those bastions of religious lifestyle, Jim and Tammy Bakker have been in the news for more than a week now. The candid statements about Tammy’s drug addiction and Jim’s extra marital encounter have been splashed headlines almost daily.

If you turn on the television in the afternoon you get the soaps with people hopping from bed to bed and stepping on a few toes while at it.

Turn on the news at 6 p.m. and you see gratuitous violence in every twisted variety imaginable. Stay tuned for prime-time and you find the same tawdry sex and random violence as any other time of the day.

As you can see, there is no way to isolate a child from these things; it’s everywhere you turn.

To these religious people who are trying to make their worlds better I say, “More power to you.” But, leave my world and my personal choices alone. I promise not to corrupt your kids if you promise not to limit my freedom of choice.

Let’s get these people out of their ivory towers and back down to planet earth. One suggestion I have is to petition the cable company for their right to choose between MTV and VH-1. We pay for it; we should be able to choose.

Ya know, tolerance is a great thing. Maybe more people should try it.
Preachers get own ball team

Let me present you to Holy City Angels, the evangelical professional baseball team.

This year's edition of the Angels should be an exciting one, simply because we don't know what to expect. Last year, the entire team sat out the season, holding out for more money. Just when it looked like that might be resolved, the strike hit. The primary issue was greater television revenues.

And now let me present... The Angels!

First Base - Pat "Prez" Robertson. Pat is adept at fielding things cleanly, and helps run the show on the field, as deftly as a politician.

Second Base - Jimmy "Pepper Pot" Bakker. Jimmy is one of the post-Special Events players on the Angels. He is famed for his big bucks contract, which has plenty of incentive clauses. Jimmy's feisty little player—one that you can never count out of the game.

Shortstop - Tammy Faye "Eye Black" Bakker. Recovering from pneumonia, Tammy Faye will once again be out there calling all the shots. She is an intense competitor, and makes a great combination with Jimmy. Her and Jimmy's motto is "the game doesn't start 'til the fat lady sings."

Third Base - Jimmy Swaggart. Swaggart is an old standby. He packs a mean punch with the bat, and hits stinging grounders. Though often viewed as a hot dog, he gets the job done. Though often viewed as a hot dog, he gets the job done.

Center Field - Jerry Falwell. Jerry arrived to the Angels in a trade with the Virginia Spirits. He covers a lot of ground and always seems to be everywhere. He came into his own lately, as he just received a healthy raise. He expected to assume a leadership position in his expanded role.

Right Field - Paul Ankerberg. Paul makes the most of his meager talents, and makes an occasional blast from what is usually an obscure position. Runners have grown wary of Paul's mighty arm.

Starting Pitcher - Oral Roberts. Oral throws a lot of "junk" pitches. He keeps people off balance with his funky delivery. Though often viewed as a hot dog, he gets the job done.

The catcher: "We all have to receive this stuff. No wonder Gate prices have gone up to keep pace with outrageous player costs. Season tickets are now on sale for the low, low price of your life savings.

April named 'special' month

The Winthrop College intramurals department has designated April as "Special Events Month." A "swim lifting contest, the "Mt. Winthrop" bodybuilding contest and the second annual "Big Splash" are among the planned events.

The "Big Splash" will feature water sports events such as a wet T-shirt relay, swimming and intertube races, a Belly-flop contest, a tug-of-war tournament, and more. All students are encouraged to participate. For more information, call the intramural office at 323-2140.

Other events scheduled include a weight lifting contest, which will be held in Peabody gym, April 14, at 8 p.m. An arm-wrestling contest will take place in Peabody gym, April 22 at 8 p.m.

The "Mt. Winthrop" bodybuilding contest will be held in Peabody gym, April 28 at 8 p.m. A $1 admission will be charged for the contest. Drummond also urged students to participate in the "swim/jog to stay fit" program, which ends at the end of this month.

Drummond also said that the women's "slimmastics" program continues to meet every Monday and Wednesday on the Wolford Basement. He encouraged all women interested to participate. For more information call the intramural office at 323-2140.

Baseball continues to roll

The Winthrop men's baseball team continues to play well this season as they have built their record up to 18-0.

Since last report the Eagles have won three games. On March 26 they beat USC-Aiken 11-0 out at Eagle field. The Eagles agreed to call the game in the seventh inning to accommodate NAIA rules that when a team reaches a 10-0 or worse lead the game is stopped.

On March 27th and 28th, the Eagles won a pair of games over Radford.

The Eagles won the first day 13-1, and the second day 8-0 to move to 3-0 in the Big South Conference standings.

The Eagles other conference victory was also over Radford 10-3 on March 15th.

Five pitchers have won decisions this season for the Eagles.

Rob Tumlo is 5-0 with a 2.69 ERA in five appearances.

Mark Hetrick is 4-0 with an .37 ERA in four appearances.

Tad Powers has recorded a 4-0 record with a 1.93 ERA and a team leading 30 strike outs in six appearances.

George Arnold has appeared in four games. Arnold is 3-0 with a 2.61 ERA.

Dave Murray has one decision this season and posts a 1-0 record. The Eagle pitching staff has given up only 22 runs this season, an average of 1.7 a game.

The Winthrop offense has given the pitching staff excellent support this season.

The Eagles have scored a whopping 233 runs so far this season for an average of 13 runs per game. The men have won each game by an average of 11 runs.

Ten players are batting over .300 and the Winthrop pitchers are batting .500 as a group.

Drew Hummel leads the team with a .543 batting average. Hummel has 38 hits, seven home runs and a team-leading 32 runs batted in this season in 70 at bats.

Scott Goins is right behind Hummel, batting .532. Goins leads the team with 42 hits. In 79 at bats, he has five home runs and 25 RBIs.

The team batting average is .409 and they have only 63 strike outs. No player has more than eight strike outs this season.

Winthrop pigeons in survival struggle

by ERIC FEARN
TJ sports writer

A dark cloud sits on the horizon of Winthrop College. A sense of foreboding is in the air. Something serious is threatening the health of students as well as the Winthrop College buildings. They are known simply as pigeons.

At first glance, these little creatures appear to be harmless. However, to see the bird’s true evil intentions, you must look deeper. You may think the most harmful thing these birds do is drop warm, smelly pellets as they roost in the buildings. It’s been reported that pigeon excrement ruins the cement in old buildings, and can cause health problems.

The physical plant has stepped in to replace Public Safety as the force in keeping pigeons away from the school’s buildings. After long thought and extensive soul searching, I have thought of a way to make this drama between humans and pigeons a little more exciting.

The Merriam-Webster Dictionary defines the word pigeon as “any of numerous stout-bodied short-legged birds with smooth, thick plumage.” The phrase “stout-bodies” suggests certain athletic qualities of the birds. If this is true, then let’s make it a contest pitting man against bird.

The rules of this game would be relatively wide open. However, we must have some rules because of the advantage in size and intelligence that man has over the pigeons.

We will begin with the length of the competition. The competition will begin April six and last a month until May six, the end of the spring semester.

During this time no persons other than the workers of the physical plant will be allowed to enter the buildings. To be fair, only the pigeons may harass the workers; everyone else must leave them alone. This rule is vital because both sides will need all their strength for the final conflict.

There will be a special system installed for the removal of marked pigeons and plant workers. The participants marked by pigeons excrement or paint-pellet guns used by the workers can no longer participate as an active, warring member.

When struck by a paint pellet, a pigeon must agree to sit out the conflict. The same rule applies to workers marked by pigeon excrement. Through this system, pigeon excrement will be spent in other ways and not dumped in such large quantities on the buildings. All pigeon-infested schools.

I know I speak for all Winthrop students when I say that this fearsome pigeon menace must be stopped. I am sure we all back the humans against this vicious, frightening little bird.

After all, pigeons are destroying our buildings, endangering our health. The only answer is to drive them off campus completely. If the pigeons win, they stay. If the pigeons lose, they are banished forever from Winthrop grounds.

Well, on April 6th let the games begin, and may the best man... er... creature win.
