HOUSE APPROVES WAR DEBT PLAN

Signature of the President Assumed to Be Certain. England Will Deposit Bonds With This Government to Cover Indebtedness.

Washington, Feb. 22.—The British debt funding arrangement tonight was one step nearer completion, congressional approval of the act raising the recently negotiated settlement with Great Britain having been completed today. Only the signature of President Harding is required to permit the treasury to exchange partial settlement agreements. Congressional action was completed when the house accepted senate changes in the British settlement bill without modification.

As a result of the congressional approval, and with the signature of the President assumed to be certain, treasury officials began the drafting of the indentures, which are to be exchanged between the United States and Great Britain, and which will put into operation the program for refunding over 62 years the British war-time debt of $4,000,000,000.

The indentures will embody the terms accepted by the British government—present the methods of payment, all of which were tentatively agreed upon between the two debt funding committees in their recent negotiations. British financial bonds for the purpose of the refunding are to be deposited with the United States treasury.

Under Secretary Gilbert of the treasury was unable to state tonight the date on which the agreement will go into operation. A series of conferences is being held between officials of the treasury and A. How-Dutton, the British treasury representative, who remains here.

The ways and means committee's proposed tax on transfers of stocks, bonds, and other certificates of indebtedness as well as other legal papers, has been passed by the house, and is now awaiting action by the senate.

S. CAROLINA ASSEMBLY FACES STRENUOUS TASKS

Revenue Measures Will Confront Senate During Last Week of Session.

Columbia, S. C., Feb. 23.—With seven weeks of the first session of the 1923 general assembly gone, one more week than the constitutional forty days, the senate faces the prospect of facing revenue measures next week, the measure that have practically monopolized the attention of the house ways and means committee throughout the session, and the house itself for the last week. The first of the revenue measures to be considered by the senate will probably be the commodity tax bill—the so-called luxury tax.

The finance committee, which now has the bill in hand, has arranged for a public hearing on the measure in the senate chamber next Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. A number of hearings were held on this bill by the ways and means committee, and various interests opposed it.

As passed by the house, the bill provides for taxation of beer, soft drinks and tobacco products, and soft drink materials. Coffee, which was included in the measure as reported by the ways and means committee, was stricken out after a filibuster on the floor of the house.

The rates provided in the bill are: five cents a pound; cigars, weighing over three pounds a thousand, $5 a thousand; cigars, weighing less than three pounds a thousand, $4 a thousand; cigars, weighing less than one pound, $3 a thousand; cigars, weighing less than one-half pound, $2 a thousand; cigars, weighing less than one-quarter pound, $1 a thousand.

The house has yet to act upon the proposed tax on transfers of stocks, bonds, and other certificates of indebtedness as well as other legal papers, which has been passed by the house, and is now awaiting action by the senate.

POLITENESS.

Just sitting at a window overlooking a busy street. The traffic policeman has disappeared from his post. Automobiles are whirling by in every direction. Every chauffeur seems to know that the policeman is absent and all regard for the rules of the road is thrown to the winds.

Each chauffeur seems in a hurry to pass that particular corner. When the car in front of him slows down he toots his horn with exasperation. When he sees a car about to cross his path, he steps on the gas and tries to get ahead of it. The other driver does the same. The result is that they both come to a standstill six inches apart, and each abuses the other.

Now the traffic policeman returns and the stream of cars passes on in orderly fashion.

And it dawned upon me that one of the greatest obstructions of traffic and one of the greatest causes of accidents is not only the lack of a traffic policeman, but the lack of ordinary politeness. The drivers seem to have not the slightest regard for one another's feelings or desires or intentions. Each is intent only upon himself. It is only the fear of a fine or imprisonment that keeps them in order.

And, just as I was thinking of a busload of drivers of cars for their lack of courtesy, I began to wonder how much real politeness is found in other walks of life—in stores, on sidewalks, at crowded public gatherings, in factories, on railroads, etc., etc.

I came to the conclusion that it would not be fair to "pick on" automobile drivers.

All children of good families are taught politeness to others. True, they do not all learn it. But most of them do. Many teachers do not know how to teach.

All colleges and universities tend to inculcate politeness in their students. They do not always succeed, but, still, most college men and women are polite.

Politeness is the easiest thing in the world to learn and put into practice. And, if you remember that you never had an opportunity of securing a college education, you can, with very little effort, acquire the past one of the products of college life by getting into the habit of paying attention to the feelings and thoughts and desires of others than yourself.

By taking this little step you will show, at least, that you really wanted an education.

Politeness pays. If a truck driver were to pull up his lumbering juggernaut and hinder to a white line to pass on ahead of him, the driver of the "tin lizzie" would probably be flabbergasted; first. But a simple example would have an effect upon him. And, after a while, he would become polite, too.—Exchange.

THOSE NERVOUS ILLS.

By H. Addison Bruce

It is a sound principle which that eminent English neurologist, Dr. E. P. Buzzard, lays down when he declares, as he did in an address to a body of physicians:

"Among the weeds that have shaded the plant of mental hygiene, the strongest and most obnoxious is one that was sown in ignorance and that has been nourished on fear."

It refers to the fallacious belief deeply implanted in the public mind, that so-called functional nervous disorders, or "nerves," are not mental disorders. Surely the time has come to discard a verbal quibble that is unworthy of a scientific profession.

Of course, the reason this "verbal quibble" has not been discarded long since is a popular misdefinition of mental disorders in general with insanity in particular.

Doctors have hesitated to tell psychoneurotic patients that their aches and pains, their insomnias and dyspepsias are at bottom symptoms of mental error, because they are well aware that the patients might jump to the conclusion that the doctors thought them insane or on the highway to insanity. This would only make a bad matter worse—would, in fact, make the patients more psychoneurotic than ever.

Yet it might readily be made clear to them that by "mental trouble" was meant in their case merely a faulty mental habit, the correction of which was within their own power and was a prerequisite of obtaining relief from the symptoms.

Here the underlying cause usually is a conscious or subconscious "fixed idea" that sleep is impossible. So long as this fixed idea persists treatment of the insomnia by any means is sure to be unfruitful.

Clearly it will not do simply to tell the patient that he is "nervous," and to prescribe sedatives for him. There is needed a frank, if tactful explanation of the mental factor involved—an explanation which may of itself suffice to overcome the chronic sleeplessness.

So with other mentally caused conditions erroneously labelled "nervous disorders." Once patients and the public generally are educated to recognize their real origin, and to recognize it without falling into a credulous path, not only will treatment be more successful but there will be less and less necessity for treatment.

Physicians are of all people in the best position to undertake such education. In the interest both of curative and of preventive medicine they should undertake it.

Meat which you buy does not originate in the packing houses. Behind the packing houses and the stock yards are the millions of acres of land devoted to the raising of live stock and food for live stock.

How live stock reaches the market; how it is purchased; how it is handled in its transformation into meat; and how this highly perishable product gets into the hands of retailers in every city and village, make an interesting story.

The handling of by-products also furnishes some interesting facts. Hides, for example, are not bought by the ultimate consumer.

Glove is used by manufacturers of many articles. Wool is of little use to the wearer of clothes until it is worked up into merchantable articles.

Just how Swift & Company handles meats and their attendant by-products is told in the new
