PAST HISTORY.

It will be recalled that about four years ago the financing indebtedness of the City of Chester was close around fifty thousand dollars...

Some newspapers said some people are raising a great howl because some of the legislators are opposing a sale of various commodities in order to reduce the poor debt...

It is to be hoped that the people of South Carolina will some day get the reputation of their state government out of the hands of the "ring."

again. Maybe your business would pick up to keep Mr. Davidson out of the race.

More meat was consumed in the United States last year than in any previous year. A government bulletin notes that "coupled with the decrease in exports and somewhat higher prices to purchasers in 1922, these figures evidence a satisfactory state of the home market, due doubtless to the prosperous condition and increasing purchasing power of the people generally."

Save from the dealer's point of view, an increased consumption of other foods would mean that the nation was reverting to the over-protein diet of former days, with its inevitable health menace. But this is not evidenced either in market or health reports. Banner health statistics and generally good market reports indicate that the nation not only lived better but it better.

The only dark spot on the page is that little jigger about the "prices" somewhat higher. But a nation which has the money to go on the greatest meat gorge of its history in spite of rising prices can hardly be said to be the nation's victim of a market II. C. I.

Some newspapers said some people are raising a great howl because some of the legislators are opposing a sale of various commodities in order to reduce the poor debt...

COUNCIL MEETING.

Evident. That Councilmen Had Made Inspection of Mr. Mack's Meat. Check up on Activities of Health Officer—Meat Markets Say an Inspection and Dr. Bouldridge Says They Live Clean Spangy Council Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the City Council was held in the council-chamber last Tuesday evening. The first order of business was the report of the Chief of Police...

Prof. M. E. Brockman and Rev. A. Morgan appeared before council in the interest of the Chester Library and asked that council appropriate $500 toward the maintenance of the library for the current year.

Dr. F. M. Bouldridge was present and was asked by Alderman White as to the inspection of meat now being sold in Chester. Dr. Bouldridge stated that he had not been inspecting all of the meat since the services of a veterinarian had been discontinued...

FOUND DEAD.

Body of White Man Found Yesterday. Merrett near Southern Railway Tracks About Five Miles From Chester.

The body of a young white man was found near the tracks of the Southern Railway about three miles from Lewis' Turnout, yesterday morning by a crew of a Southern railroad train.

Sheriff Anderson and Coroner Gladden were notified and immediately went to the scene. The body of the man was found in a pool of water near the tracks. Two empty bottles which had contained carbolic acid were also found, and it was evident that the man had taken both bottles. His mouth and one hand also bore evidence that he drank the poison.

A small memorandum book found on his person, contained the following: "To whom it Finds: Have given up the game, I have been tramp-around for a month looking for work. I could not find any. Notify W. J. Yates, 214 Covington street, Florence, S. C. Yates."

The labels on the bottles showed that one of them had been purchased from Stonewall Pharmacy, Charlotte, N. C., and the other from the J. L. Phillips Drug Co., Rock Hill. The handwriting of the note was shown the average and would indicate that Yates was a man of some education. His body and clothing had indicated that he was not a regular hobo. With him he carried a bundle of clean shirts, collars and underclothing, which had recently been laundered in Charleston.

There was no bruise on the body of the man to indicate foul play or that he had been struck by a train, and from all evidence it is plain that he committed suicide.

Sheriff Anderson got in touch with the Chief of Police of Florence yesterday and informed him of the death and also the note found. Mr. E. A. Patton, local undertaker, had received instructions for shipping the body to relatives.

LEADER OF TERROR SQUAD CAPTURED FROM SHERIFF
Harry Garrett Leaps From Train and Flees into Darkness.

Oklahoma City, Okla., March 7.—Federal, county and city officers joined today in search of Oklahoma city and the surrounding country for Harry Garrett, alleged leader of the "Terror Squad" of the railroad shop strikers at Shawnee, who made a sensational escape from Sheriff Gryver C. Butler, last night by leaping from a passenger train on the outskirts of Oklahoma City.

Garrett has been hiding all day for several days and will be taken back to Shawnee to await trial on charges of the shooting of a man of degradation on railroad property and workers in and around Shawnee attributed by federal and state officers to the strikers' "terror squad."

Meetings of certain strikers at which were planned being burned railroad shops, the dynamiting of homes of men who took the strikers' place, assault and other acts of violence are alleged to have been held in Garrett's home. A reward of $250 was posted for Garrett's capture.

Garrett, according to the sheriff, had declared he was ready to make clean breast of his part in the outbreak, stating that he would accept the punishment meted out to do and how we were driven into it to the acts we committed."

BILLY SUNDAY SAYS:
"If you are saved, go out and get somebody who isn't saved."

A lot of people never unwrap religion except on Sunday.
If the multitudes could see themselves as God sees them, the devil wouldn't have a friend in the world.

A lot of preachers would like to see the multitudes saved but they are influenced by some Godforsaken official board.
Most women will go daffy over some old-long-haired ivory powder.

Men need the church more than the church needs men.
The main trouble with the church today is not in the pew but in the pulpit.

Christian faith is as necessary to the church as gas is to a tin lizzie.
What God wants today is deacons who can speak, not dance; stewards who can stew without musing up things and dignitaries who can dig.

Out of every five church members, three are liabilities to the institution.
What you see depends on your viewpoint.

A lot of people come to this tabernacle who never darken a church door.
God expects us to pray or be prayed for. He has commanded it. Pray not for the harvest, but for the harvesters.

The harvest is there. Go and get it. Pray, Pray, Pray!
Every church ought to be an asylum for the lost.

Some of you birds look like a cotton field after a boll weevil has gone through it.
Angels may claim they love God but they have a chance to prove it.

You might as well try to count the number of angels who succeed in trying to count the mercies of God.

DEMONSTRATION AGAINST KLUGH
Greenwood People Not Satisfied With Acquittal Verdict. Men in Automobile Pass Home and Fire Shots, but Klugh Had Remained Away.

Greenwood, S. C., March 6.—According to relatives of Henry C. Klugh, who was found not guilty of the murder of William Foster Anderson by an Abbeville county jury Tuesday night, a crowd passing the Klugh house on the Abbeville-Greenwood highway shortly after the verdict had been returned fired to the house and fired more than one hundred times near the house. Willis H. Harley, brother-in-law of Klugh, came to Greenwood between 12 and 1 o'clock Sunday morning and reported the alleged shooting to the sheriff.

Relatives of Anderson, the dead man, say that about twenty-five shots were fired in front of the home of J. Walter Anderson, his father, who he was murdered from ambush on the afternoon of February 6. Klugh was tried for the murder, but offered an alibi and was acquitted.

Feeling has grown high here and has not lessened since the Trial Groups gathered on the streets since Saturday night and many expressed resentment at the verdict of acquittal. No evidence of mob violence was shown, openly, however, and if a mob fired on the Klugh home, a relative claim it formed quietly and led Greenwood without any disorder.

Henry Klugh was not at home when the shots are alleged to have been fired at the house. He had been warned by his kin not to come home for fear of violence, and had remained in Abbeville. His brother, Joe Klugh, and Mrs. Joe Klugh were in the house at the time, but were not injured.

The Klugh house is about halfway between Greenwood and Abbeville and about a mile from the Anderson home, the scene of the murder. The acquittal of Klugh leaves a question of living. Anderson was arrested and placed in jail at Abbeville. The blood-stained clothing of one of the men slain was found in the home of one of the suspects.

The authorities believed the deputies had been slain and their bodies disposed of. A visit to the locality where the raid occurred revealed a destroyed still. A dozen persons living in the vicinity were arrested and placed in jail at Abbeville. The blood-stained clothing of one of the men slain was found in the home of one of the suspects.

ON A PERMANENT BASIS.

At the time the cooperative movement was started, the Observer recognized the fact that an accomplishment of the ends desired would be a matter of great difficulty and of perseverance to the utmost. The farmer always wants to "be shown" and the lodging of financial conviction in his mind on a big proposition of the kind is a matter that requires time, persistence and demonstration. But all along, this paper was thoroughly convinced that co-operative marketing pointed the way to the salvation of the agricultural communities. With each conquest of the difficulties in the way and with steady approach to an assured success, the Observer has taken unbounded satisfaction in the new generation of farmers who are being brought into the organization in the way and with the greatest of ease. There is much yet to be done before the system is perfected, but it has reached the stage when doubts as to its permanency are removed. Recently this paper has made note of the observations of a special writer sent through the cotton belt by The Christian Science Monitor, published in Boston, for the purpose of securing first-hand information on the progress of the movement and the prospects ahead of it. With conclusion of the work, that paper gives editorial opinion, that the facts admitted to the progress made in co-operative marketing, that the system is now fixed as one of the country's commercial institutions. It has been revealed that, already every State in the cotton belt has its marketing association, with the exception of Tennessee and Louisiana, and in both of these the work of organization is under way. Although the oldest of these associations has yet to reach its second birthday, and the majority of them have only been operating with the 1922 crop, nevertheless combined, these associations will handle approximately 1,000,000 bales, or one-tenth of America's yield of cotton. The value of the cotton that will be sold through co-operative marketing up to the first of June is approximately $125,000,000. The organizers of the movement for the co-operative marketing of cotton have had many obstacles to overcome. Ignorance and prejudice among the farmers had to be met with savvy and unimpeachable arguments. Bitter and not always fruitful attacks were leveled at them by interests which were apprehensive that the introduction of this new system would impair their own hands, in which they had large capital investments. Bankers had to be satisfied as to the safety of their security before they could be induced to lend money on cotton held co-operatively. It was inevitable that mistakes would be made in launching new enterprises of this sort, and they had the effect of shaking the faith of some of the farmer members, temporarily, at least. In spite of everything, however, the system of co-operative marketing as applied to cotton, has come through thus far with flying colors. It marks an economic step in the handling of farm products that is practically certain to sweep onward, until it is as firmly established in American agriculture as the corporate system introduced, after 40 years, in American industry. Certainly, as the Monitor suggests, the cotton-growers of America are to be congratulated upon the success that has attended their efforts to improve their economic conditions through the method of co-operative marketing. "While it is undoubtedly true," comments that paper, "that the excellent prices that have been obtained for the last two crops, have been due in part to a yield that has been somewhat below the normal of the world demand, yet the co-operative associations have, in nearly every instance topped the average selling price of cotton in the world markets. Merchandising has been conducted both efficiently and economically, despite the fact that complete democracy exists in the selection of the boards of directors who govern the affairs of the associations. The farmer members of these associations have been benefited by the process of orderly marketing, but they have also gained very considerably, by reason of the fact that their cotton is accurately graded, before it is sold."—Charlotte Observer.

PUTTING THEM BACK

ON THE RAILS
Within the span of the past six months the railroads of the United States have moved far toward accomplishing one of the most constructive programs under taken within a generation. They have been putting their house in order against the coming of a bustle day. The railroads emerged from the shipmen's strike with equipment in a state of disrepair seldom equalled in their long history. They went to work with costs off, they employed as many thousands of extra mechanics as they could find space to accommodate in their shops. They spent hundreds of millions of dollars of money in repairing their broken, crippled, disabled and inadequate rolling stock and motive power they have produced a plant in better condition today than it has been in for years. They accomplished this gigantic task in the backwash of a rising tide of traffic that has been surpassed but once in all the years of American railroading. The volume of traffic, by its weight, will flow with tremendous force, far greater than the average, as the work of repair goes on.

The repair record discloses an interesting thing. It shows that those railroads known to be managed by top-liner presidents and operating officials lead all the others in the business of repairing their order equipment. This sidlight would seem to indicate that the man of broad vision who can look into both yesterday, and tomorrow and fashion the one to avoid the other's errors is far better qualified to hold down a railroad presidency than the shifty and short-sighted brother who can't.—The Nation's Business.
