Government Documents at Dacus Library

The Dacus Library Government Documents Department
Presents:
Greater access to US Government Documents

Your Government Documents Department was very busy this summer. We began an extensive Inventory Project in which all older Government documents are being added to the Dacus Online Catalog. Winthrop University has been a United States Federal Government Depository Library since 1896. So, when this project is finished, you will have access to 110 years of U.S. Government documents! While documents since 1994 are loaded into the catalog, many older records have not been entered. Through the years, we have identified target areas and have added their records to the catalog, but this has left gaps in the searchable collection. Our goal is to have a primary access point for all documents making the collection searchable and most items available for circulation. 3,000 records were added this summer. The project will continue until we have added all print documents followed by all microforms to the Dacus Online Catalog.

The documents listed below are only a sample of the interesting documents that were discovered this summer. They will be on display in the Government Documents Department of Dacus Library. Stop by and see what else is available to you.
