DEPARTMENT CLEARS UP MISUNDERSTANDING

By H. E. Bryant.
Washington, March 2.—Senator Simmons and Overman this afternoon conferred with the Secretary of state with regard to extradition of the negro Bullock from Canada. The facts developed, were that state department seems to have exaggerated its power of diplomacy for the return of the negro, and claims to have acted in perfect good faith in an earnest desire to cooperate with the state of North Carolina and to do what Governor Morrison desired.

The secretary explained that there was a very general misconception and misunderstanding of the procedure under all extradition treaties between nations. He says that in asking for a fugitive in Canada of another nation, this government does not make direct request of the Canadian government. On the other hand who swears out a warrant against the criminal and that a prima facie extradition paper to its consular in Canada must be made out before the Canadian extradition magistrate who passes upon the matter. The same procedure obtains when Canada requests the return of a fugitive who has fled from the United States to the government to which the fugitive has fled does not itself pass upon the question of whether or not oral testimony shall be received. The treaty provides that this question shall be within the discretion of the extradition magistrate, or presiding judge.

STUDY MENTAL HYGIENE

By H. Adlington Bruce.
The subject of mental hygiene has of late been a special theme for newspaper discussion in various cities, because of numerous meetings held under the auspices of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene. But it is to be feared that many people, owing to a widespread and sadly mistaken notion, have paid nothing like the heed to such discussion all should pay.

Mental hygiene, they have taken for granted, is of no personal concern to them. It is something that has to do with feeble-mindedness and insanity. They are neither feeble-minded nor insane, so why should they bother about it?

And, indeed, mental hygiene has very much to do with feeble-mindedness and insanity. But also it has to do with the health, happiness and efficiency of every human being, the mentally normal as well as the mentally disordered. This makes it of universal significance.

The world, as everybody knows, abounds in people who, without being mentally defective or aberrant, are not making the best way in business life they had hoped to make. Also it abounds in people who suffer in a marked degree from character peculiarities, so that they are perhaps excessively timid, perhaps excessively irritable, perhaps given to excessive worry.

All this causes them to lose a great deal that, they are instinctively aware, life should yield to them. It breeds in them discontent, restlessness, perhaps profound depression of mind.

And often—though this is something they may not appreciate with anything like the clearness of their appreciation of the unhappiness that besets them their discontent, restlessness, and depression are due to nothing more than ignorance of the laws of right thinking. They are paying a penalty in decreased efficiency and in misery of mind akin to the penalty of bodily ill health imposed for violations of the laws of right living.

Though, for that matter, bodily ill health is the way of functional nervous disorders may itself be due to nothing more than family thinking. So that there is ample reason all should learn just what the laws of right thinking are.

Study of mental hygiene would give the necessary knowledge. And give a few exponents of mental hygiene have been at Paris, through writing simple handbooks on the subject and through giving public lectures on it, to make such study available for all who would profit from it.

How to conquer worry, doubt, and indecision, how to become more courageous and self-reliant, how to develop emotional control in general, how to grow in will power, in reasoning power—these and like themes find a place in the subject-matter. Mental hygiene as "truly" as do such problems as the prevention and care of outright mental disease. If the latter are not of immediate personal concern to everybody the former most assuredly are.

Study mental hygiene, then, as an aid to greater well-being both of mind and of body. If uncertain as to the means whereby you best may study it, write to me in the care of this newspaper for a list of helpful books. I have prepared such a list, which I shall be glad to send to all who enclose a stamped and addressed envelope for my answer to their inquiries.

An artificial stone, marble-like and with a glazed surface, is being made in England. The stone is colored in various hues to suit the maker.

The preservative powers of borax was first discovered by a prospector in Yellowstone Park, it is said. He came across the body of a horse, which, although it had died long before, was perfectly whole and preserved and covered with a layer of fine dust, which proved to be borax. He took advantage of his discovery and sold his secret to a banking firm.

ATTITUDE OF POLICE TOWARD MEN ARRESTED UNDERGOES A CHANGE

Six Men Held in Taylor Murder Case to Be Subjected to Another Questioning, Says Announcement.
Los Angeles, Cal., March 2.—A sudden change in the attitude of the police toward the six men arrested Tuesday on information tending to connect them with the murder of William Desmond Taylor, film director, took place tonight.

After announcement today by Detective Sergeant Herman Olm, head of the homicide squad, that the police were convinced the men had no connection with the Taylor murder, the official statement was made tonight that the men would be subjected to another questioning.

What new information had reached the detectives was not made public, but it was stated that in connection with the additional questioning search would be continued for a seventh man, said to be a motion picture actor of some prominence.

The arrest of the six and the possible arrest of the seventh man were the results of information given the police by Mrs. John Rupp, housekeeper for the men now in custody, that two of the men in her presence, had made threats against Taylor's life.

HINTON MAY OFFER FOR STATE OFFICE

Pickens County Man May Enter Race for State Treasurer This Summer.

Pickens, March 3.—Pickens county will likely furnish a candidate for state treasurer this year.

Olar T. Hinton, treasurer of Pickens county, has about decided to make the race for this office. Since it became known that he was considering making the race he has been offered the strongest kind of encouragement and support from this and surrounding counties and it is thought here that he would have more than an even chance to win.

Mr. Hinton would make an ideal state treasurer. He is thoroughly capable and a Christian gentleman of the highest type. He has twice been elected treasurer of Pickens county and is a son of J. Ashmore Hinton, former member of the state legislature from this county.

It is said that the color of birds can be changed within five generations by keeping them in a white room, with backgrounds of white and attended by persons attired in white.

EXCURSIONS IN THOUGHT.

If I Kill You, It's All Right, But If You Kill me, by Jove, It's Murder.

R. N. Allen, Teacher of Manual Training.

In daily life just what our point of view may be with reference to any particular thing depends very much upon how it may concern us. There is a world of truth in the old saying: "It depends a lot upon whose ox is gored." The famous cartoonist Leech in the London Punch this one of his characters say: "I kill you, it's all right, but if you kill me, by Jove it's murder." The grim humor of life lies right here: men and women act so ridiculously and so foolishly when it comes to a justification of their own thoughts and acts to themselves and to their associates. Of their own wisdom they never entertain the least doubt; but they are well aware that their neighbors are fools and idiots rather than themselves.

Sometimes one is tempted to conclude that the chief tendency of the human being is: to do the deed first and then to talk about it. Or to put it a bit differently, it seems that most people do most of the acts of their lives without being aware of the motives that actuate them. A little bit of investigation will soon convince the average person that the great majority of the reasons given for most of the acts of life are totally inadequate.

Any school teacher will tell you of after cases of boys and girls who commit certain misdemeanors, and who, when called upon to tell just why they did those things, could only twist and squint and reply "I don't know." Think of the hundreds of deaks cut and scratched by boys because of a blind, unreasoning impulse. Think of the hundreds of walls marked and scrawled upon because of the unquenchable tendency to self-justification of the pupils. Think of the hundred senseless quarrels, bickerings, annoyances, etc. that are so without reason that pupils can't give any reason at all as to why they do those things.

And the same principle applies to the mature adults. Men and women everywhere are not aware that any most powerful of all human tendencies is that of self-justification. Every one places esteem of self before the esteem of others, and this is as it should be; for self-preservation is based in the fact that one values his own self; more than he does other selves. If it were otherwise the race would soon perish.

But this self-esteem makes us at all times seek to preserve our self-respect. And this leads to self-justification. In all things we attempt to justify ourselves to ourselves. Our personal interests in a subtle way decide the nature and succession of our thoughts. In business, religion, politics, or in any sphere whatsoever, the natural thing for us to find reasons which justify opinions which we may have adopted at which we may have unconsciously formed. But the fact is that self-interest motivates most of our reasoning.

A very good illustration of self-justification is given by H. G. Wells in the story "New Machine."

Dr. Dick's Uncle Minter was an estimable manufacturer of household articles which were glazed with lead. Uncle Minter was very careful about the health of his workmen. Dick made a reference to the very apparent and harmful effects of lead poisoning. Mr. Wells goes on to give the argument of the very Christian and benevolent old gentleman about as follows:

"I suppose you must use lead in your glasses" said Dick. And the old man started off explaining. He began in a smooth voice that soon warmed to anger. "Firstly, there is practically no such thing as lead poisoning. Secondly, not every one was liable to lead poisoning, and it would be quite easy to pick out the susceptible types—as soon as they had laid out them to other work. Thirdly, the evil effects of lead poisoning were much exaggerated. Fifthly, the workmen simply would not learn the gravity of the danger, and would eat with unwashed hands, and incur all the risks, so that the fools deserve what they get. Sixthly, he and several associates of firm had organized a simple and generous insurance scheme against lead-poisoning risks."

Quite evidently the chief use of the reason is to find reasons. We do things and then justify them. We form prejudices and then defend them. Self-interest leads to self-justification which in turn leads to much social and individual foolishness and ridiculous injustice. Know thyself!

PREDICTS BIG CUT IN ARMY POSTS
Miami, Fla., March 3.—Slashing of from $60,000,000 to $60,000,000 from the war department's budget for the next fiscal year, as reported to be the plan of the house appropriation subcommittee un-prations subcommittee, will mean a decrease of at least one-third in the number of army forts, posts, flying fields and training camps of this country. Secretary of War Weeks said here today.

In discussing the proposal, Secretary Weeks said it would be impossible to have a force of only 100,000 men to property man these forts, camps and fields, even with a sufficient number of men "to drill a squad."

He said there are 250 forts, posts, flying fields and camps in the country proper, and forty outside of the country, and that to reduce the army by 22,000 men and 1,000 officers, as reported to be the plan, will make it a mathematical impossibility to keep all the forts, posts, camps and fields in operation. Likewise, he pointed out that if the proposal is adopted, it will mean that those flying fields which are nearer to large ports and forts will be the ones to be abandoned.

The secretary declared that representatives and senators would vote for a big army reduction and then all their influence to have particular forts, or posts, or camps or fields, as the case may be, which are in their districts, retained.

"The member of congress who votes to make the cut beyond what we think it ought to be should not complain if the department finds it necessary to abandon a fort, or post, or field, or camp which happens to be in his district," said the secretary.

He declared he "has had his say" and would appear again before appropriate subcommittee unless specifically requested so to do.

"It is not my army, it belongs to the people, and if they want to make the cut, they have the right to do so," was his comment.

Mr. W. J. FAYSONX, the hypnotist who comes to the Chester Opera House on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, is no stranger in Chester. Mr. Faysonx came to Chester several years ago and attracted quite a bit of attention while in our city. At that time he was about twenty years of age and had only been in this business a short while. Today he is conceded to be one of the finest hypnotists in the country. Mr. Faysonx has a number of relatives in Chester and is a native of Gastonia. Next Thursday afternoon at three o'clock he is scheduled to make a sensational drive through the streets of Chester.

Charles Young Men, women, over 17, desiring government positions $125 monthly, write for free list of positions now open. Raymond Terry, (Former Civil Service examiner), 940 Continental Bldg., Washington, D. C. 7-10-14.

A reporter for The News was talking to a young farmer of the county the latter part of last week and was told by this young man that he had sold about $200 worth of turkeys in Chester recently. This would indicate that there are other money crops besides that of cotton. Of course, every one cannot raise and sell turkeys but there are hundreds of things that a man on the farm can do other than raise cotton. The farmers in certain counties in Georgia, through their associations, are now marketing chickens by the cartloads; they are selling eggs by the thousands; and, in hope six and seven chickens at a time.

The young people of the town enjoyed a dance which was given in the Moose Club rooms last Friday night. Several visitors were present for the occasion.

Those in charge of the American Legion play, "The Fortune Hunter," have now perfected all arrangements for putting on the play and have set Friday night, March 24th, as the date to put the play on at the Chester Opera House. The play is one of the best and a large crowd will be expected to witness it. As is generally known the talent is local and consists of the best in Chester. It will be recalled that Mr. W. W. Webber came to Chester to put the play on for the Legion; but for some yet unknown reason, left a week before the schedule date and has not been heard of by any one around here since. Those at the head of the proposition were not to be defeated by the action of Mr. Webber and, since his departure they have made arrangements with the producers of the play as to the copyrights, etc., and will go right ahead! As a matter of fact the play will be put over much better than it would have been had it been held on the original date, since those who have parts in the play have been practicing continually and now have their parts down to perfection. "The Fortune Hunter," is by Winchel Smith, which is in itself sufficient guarantee.

For Rent—A few rooms. Good opportunity for any one desiring rooms for light housekeeping. Mrs. E. G. Harris, 108 Smith Street 7-10.

Of interest to many people is the fact that Gaston B. Means of Concord, N. C., whose name was much before the people in the case of the killing of Mrs. Maude King, is now on the government pay roll, connected with the Department of Justice, as an assistant to William J. Burns, director of the bureau of investigation, his salary being $5,000 per year. It will be recalled that it was stated that Means was a former secret agent of the Imperial German government.

According to the report of the board of public welfare in Columbia, Chester county can boast of having the fifth best jail in South Carolina. Newberry county boasts of having the best jail in the state, with Greenville coming next. Chester county has a score of 95 out of a possible 1,000. Clarendon county scores lowest in the state.

Deputy Sheriff Howze went to Columbia Saturday and brought Sam McCullough, colored, back to Chester for trial at the Spring term of court. McCullough, it will be recalled is charged with having shot Sheriff Anderson several months ago as he was entering a house, in which the officers had reason to believe a still was being operated. McCullough was taken to Columbia shortly after the shooting and was brought back for one trial. He was convicted on the count and sent to Columbia to serve his time, which is now out, and it is for shooting Sheriff Anderson that he will now be tried.
