FRIDAY, MARCH 30.

The News is in receipt of the following letter from Mr. E. B. Watters, secretary of the Shawnee, Oklahoma, Board of Commerce:

Some day the city of Chester will want a new City Hall, and some day the county will want a new Court House.

When this time arrives the two branches of local government should combine and erect one building, on the site now occupied by the Court House.

The office of a county agent, a county demonstrator, a rest room for the women from our good county, and various other things could be taken care of in this building.

It appears to the News that it would be much more economical for the county and city governments to cooperate in the erection and maintenance of buildings.

Bull weevil emergence in North Louisiana this spring, it is expected, will be very much less than was experienced last year, and probably slightly less than in 1916 and 1921.

For the past nine years a regular annual examination has been made by this laboratory to determine the prospects of bull weevil emergence in the spring.

A few days ago The News was asked by a merchant of Chester to give a bid on a certain job of printing.

The News in taking the job at $15.00 expects to make a profit on the job. In fact The News does not pose as the cheapest printing house in the world.

It is evident that the out-of-town printer had bid the local merchant on a small printing job.

The $220.00 additional provided for in the Supply Bill is not to be drawn by Mr. Hardin but by the county.

It will be recalled that after adopting the County Director form of government in Chester county, the directors stopped printing a list of the expenditures.

It might be a good idea to use a part of the $220 to let the taxpayers know a few of the things they are entitled to know.

We understand that no provision was made for this report this year.

that kind of business. We try to make every job pay its own way. If you have your printing done by The News you will find that our prices are reasonable and that our service is excellent.

CHAIRMAN COUNTY BOARD REFUSED SALARY RAISE

County Delegation Gives Chairman of The Board a Raise—He refused to Accept Same—New Salary, When he Accepted the Position.

The County Delegation upon its own motion and without the consent of Mr. W. H. Hardin, Chairman of the County Board of Directors, raised his salary from $500.00 to $720.00 per annum.

HOW TO BUY SHOES.

Never before have shoes and stockings played such an important part in women's dress. We simply cannot wear the popular skirt with abnormally short feet. And it is often a problem how to provide the necessary pairs of attractive shoes on the same meagre budget. It means that we must put more care and deliberation into their purchase than ever before.

One thing is certain—cheap shoes are never an economy. You may think to save money by buying a cheaper pair in the beginning, but longer than four pairs of cheap, badly-shaped ones.

For ordinary street wear, soles of moderate thickness and soft flexible uppers are most satisfactory. Shoes with thin, delicate uppers and rough soles, and cannot stand heavy street wear and rainy weather. The present vogue of the low shoe is a good one, if the muscles of the ankle are thus exercised and strengthened, while it is desirable that the foot be maintained in its natural shape.

By well-made shoes of good leather and good shape, and be sure that they fit. You can get nearly twice as much wear, not to say comfort, out of a properly fitted shoe as one that does not conform to the shape of your foot. This is often means only the habit of going to a shoe shop, for in reliable stores the salesman is generally more willing to take the time and trouble to see that you are fitted accurately.

The person who wishes long service will not buy novelty shoes and expect hard wear from them. Such shoes are made to supply the fancy trade, and in general are not designed to be as long wearing as the regular standard shoe.

It is always an economy and not an extravagance to have more than one pair of shoes. By having two or three pairs and changing them frequently, giving each pair a rest, you will find that each pair will wear more than twice as long. Any shoe will last longer if given care. They should be put away at night clean, with "trees" in them to preserve the shape, and should be preserved the moment the heels begin to run down or the soles wear thin.

Inflation, Or Just Good Times?

There are some people who do not want to take notice of the fact that the present and prospective business situation is too good to be true and who are inclined to insist that the signs point to another period of "inflation." In the latter talk financial authorities are not inclined to take much notice of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, as an example, features the subject in its current review. The trust conditions, making analysis of the question as to whether we are in a period of that sort of thing, or merely in a period of expansion. It says that expansion of production and trade has reached a stage which tends to focus attention upon the probable duration of the present movement and especially upon its relation to bank credit. On the one hand, present warnings are heard that "inflation" is incipient or well advanced, with disastrous consequences impending, and, on the other, are repeated expressions of the opinion that the buses of the present activity are sound and that a period of expansion is sustained and prosperity has begun.

The term inflation, says the Guaranty Trust, whether used in one or another of its many meanings, almost invariably connotes an un-sound condition, with prices too high or with bank credit unduly expanded. The extreme view that every rise of prices or expansion of bank loans is inflation is scarcely tenable if the term is to have any useful meaning. Complete stability in prices cannot be expected, and a rise at one time may be as clearly necessary as a decline at another. A rise in commodity prices, accordingly, is not, in itself, evidence of inflation in any reasonable sense, and the same is true of an increase in bank loans.

A rate of increase in prices of bank loans which is accompanied by less than a corresponding growth in the volume of production and trade represents what is usually regarded as inflation. Judged by this test, neither the advance in prices nor the expansion of bank credit in the present movement has been sufficient to create, or even necessarily to threaten, a condition of inflation. Moreover, the real important question in this connection is not whether inflation, whatever meaning it may be given, is a feature of the present economic situation in this country. What matters is the balance between the factors in the situation which promise upward pressure and those which suggest downward conditions. It is a marked difference between conditions today and those in the period of 1919-20, which was largely a matter of business in recent months has been financed hitherto with comparatively little increase in bank loans and interest rates are still relatively low. During the early months of the revival, liquidation of old loans continued to exceed new borrowings, and until July of last year, loans and discounts of the Federal Reserve banks and of reporting member banks declined. And since that time increases in these loans and discounts have been moderate.

Loans and discounts of commercial banks have increased in greater degree than the discounts of the Reserve banks. Statements of about 500 member banks of the Federal Reserve System which report weekly reflect this growth.

While the large reserves of gold held by the Federal Reserve banks represent a potential basis for enormous expansion of credit, so long as the gold is not used for this purpose, it does not necessarily do so. Recognition that the gold now held in this country represents an abnormal concentration of the people's stock of the metal will naturally modify any tendency to utilize the reserves as freely as they might be if the distribution of goods were normal.—Charlotte Observer.

Do you think of these unwritten items on your electriclight bill

Beauty and atmosphere from lighted lamps are a potent influence in drawing the family together, and even the young people pay tribute to it. Daughter Alice frankly said the other day that one reason why she and her friends took place so often at her house was that "they thought the lamps—here was so pretty." Well—if that's all one needs to keep the children at home, the cost is all out of proportion! Certainly, the home was transformed with electric light as surely as though a painter's hand had touched each part of it. Perhaps, after all, rather than buying the new living room furniture this spring, it would be more economical and just as satisfying to buy two or three new lamps instead!

The South Needs More Cows.

Clemson College—The South needs more cows. Cows to break the monotony of countless acres of "one crop" in summer and months of "nothing to do" in winter. Cows to furnish a plentiful home supply of milk and butter instead of the scanty supply that is now shipped in from thousands of fields of corn stalks now going to waste. Cows to feed the cotton and grain farmers the most progressive and profitable work.

So says W. J. Keegan, dairy specialist, who thinks that the dairy cow holds a rightful place in the agriculture of every country. Livestock farmers are generally speaking the most progressive farmers. These men live on their own farms, raise crops in rotation and in general follow the very highest type of farming. On every dairy farm we find a regular factory working the year around getting the "greatest value" out of the farm's crops and furnishing an income every week of the year. We find congenial homes, intelligent, debt-free people, steady employment, the best methods of farming, the largest crops, and the greatest steady income on investments as found on the well regulated dairy farm.

The dairy cow has made many hill farms into comfortable country homes surrounded with legumes and prosperity. The old crop is all right, to sell one month in the year, but a cream cow can be sold every week of the year.
