SELLING HOGS AND POTATOES

Co-operative Shippers Bring Me to Farmers in Down State Counties.

Gilman College, March 29. Reports from county agents for February show that farmers are now learning to realize money from hogs and other products of diversified farming. Stories such as those given below from Orangeburg, Clarendon, and Colleton are coming from many other counties, and they show that despite the cotton boll weevil "there is life in the old land yet."

L. S. Wolfe, Orangeburg.—During February seven cartons of hogs were shipped, this making thirty-six cars having been shipped from the county since Dec. 1. A little over two-thirds of these were handled personally through the agent and practically all the others were sold to buyers who came to the county through the efforts of the agent. Because the agent has been instrumental in selling 238 feeder shotts and several hundred hogs have gone out of the county in small lots.

W. R. Gray, Clarendon.—During this month I have been instrumental in shipping from the county one lot of hogs and six cars of sweet potatoes. This is practically our beginning in selling these crops. Three of the cars of potatoes were banked stock and three were cured. We obtained a good price for these. There was practically no local market for any price. Nothing that has ever been done in my work has caused as much interest and favorable comments as the marketing of these hogs and potatoes. Our people are beginning to think that since we can sell other things, they may in some measure be made to take the place of cotton.

H. M. Kinsey, Colleton.—During February I marketed four cars of hogs, and two cars of banked sweet potatoes, and delivered one car of wire fence bought co-operatively. An average saving of $500.00 in tax was saved on the hogs for the farmers, and $400.00 was saved on the wire fence.

LARGE AREA IN LOWER CALIFORNIA SOON TO BE COME A "LITTLE LIBERIA"

With the launching of a movement at Los Angeles, Cal., to transplant 200 of the best negro farmers in the south to a big tract of excellent agricultural land in lower California, the colored man's dream of estate seems in a fair way to be realized.

Organized by a group of ten prominent negro business men of Los Angeles the Lower California Mexican Land and Development Company is undertaking to establish below the border a "Little Liberia" of 21,850 acres of farm land in two adjoining tracts which lie 37 miles 68 miles south of San Diego. The lands lie along-side the main highway near the Mexican coast, and are five miles inland from the Pacific ocean.

Because of their close proximity to the sea the lands in question are well adapted to cotton culture, but have proved to be desirable what grounds. Crops of wheat have been grown there by the company since 1918 and there is every indication that the soil is well adapted to all well there. Theore the grain will do well there. Theodore Troy, president of the development company, states that excellent well water is obtainable at a depth of 20 feet, and that the supply of water for irrigation purposes is apparently inexhaustible.

The lands lie at an average elevation of 1,500 feet, along a range of mountains. Geologists think that there are excellent petroleum possibilities there. In the hills adjacent to the colony are rivers with high waterfalls that offer splendid opportunities for hydro-electric power development. It has been estimated that there are enough timber lands to build a colony of 20,000, and that the colony lands to create a supply of lumber that would build a city of 500,000 inhabitants.

Agricultural experts have estimated that the lands say that 70 per cent of the area is susceptible of irrigation at a small cost. There are numerous hot and cold mineral springs in the neighborhood, and conditions climatically are regarded as unusually favorable.

The lands are being sold to settlers on the basis of a small down payment and the balance in long time payments. There are houses and buildings on a few of the plots but in most cases settlers will need to build themselves log houses.

According to the present plans lands are to be cut up into parcels of 40 acres and multiples thereof. The lands are well adapted to stock raising, potato culture, small grains, corn, alfalfa and apiculture; it is said. Melons do especially well here, and the San Diego market is conveniently near.

"Little Liberia" has just been launched, and three families of colored people have taken up residence there.

ONE THOUSAND AND SIXTY SALUTED BY GUNS OF NEW YORK FORTS.

New York, March 29.—The last battalion of soldiers dead to be brought home from the fields of World War I, all were saluted by the guns of Forts Hamilton and Wadsworth when the army transport Cambria passed through the Narrows this afternoon with her precious cargo. Flags of escorting craft flew at half mast and were dipped in salute to the fallen warriors.

Forty-five thousand of those who made the supreme sacrifice overseas in the service of the United States have now been brought back to their homeland, and only about 100 remain to be sent to England and France. All of the others who fell in battle or died while on the lines will continue to rest in the soil of the country where they died.

Commemorative ceremonies for those who died in uniform will be conducted here today in Brooklyn, where the Cambria docked today. General Pershing is to lead a parade organized by war veterans.

The procession will be high national military officers, groups of senators and congressmen, Mayor Hyman and leaders in civil life.

EXCURSIONS IN THOUGHT.

In The Whole Ever Greater Than The Sum Of Its Parts? Yes, Sometimes!

R. N. Allen, Teacher Of Manual Training.

One of the fundamental axioms of Geometry is that the whole can not at any time be greater than the sum of its parts. How, it is asked, can any circle be greater than the sum of the 360 degrees which go to make up its entirety? How can a whole apple which has been cut into four parts be greater than the sum of the four parts when added together? We feel dominantly and positively sure that the whole can be eight-tenths of an apple pie that we surely have not ALL of the pie!

Axioms are wonderful devices which man has in some way stamped upon in his foundations thru life and which he has found very handy in his efforts at reasoning. How many problems have been solved by the simple remembrance of the axiom that a straight line is the shortest distance between two points! No doubt, Bill, the Kansas farmer, who the shortest cut to his place in the sun was the direct route of ruthless "arrested cattle." Hence the murder of Edith Cavell, the sinking of the Titanic and other things of the kind. And it is true that we all tend to use just that kind of reasoning in many of our own daily affairs. Men are not an animal who do their work as if he believes in the magic of words. He has not yet gotten over the magic aliteration of "press conference" and "press conference" and the happy make-believe of childhood and the words "hocus, pocus" work the most astounding effects in his limited circle. For men and women are the devoted slaves of axioms—whether they be religious, ethical, or mathematical.

But the axioms that the whole is never greater than the sum of its parts is not always upheld by nature and life. There is always an unknown element which intrudes upon the sum of the parts and makes it something more than a mere sum. Take protoplasm for instance. Chemists are agreed that it is a living substance and that its formula is CHONS—which means that protoplasm is made of carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, and sulphur, hydrogen, oxygen, and sulphur. But all these substances can not take all these substances and mix them. The sum of them all can never be equal to the whole which is the LIVING protoplasm. When that comes to pass, man shall have discovered the secret of life—he shall have learned how to create living things and how to give life to the dead. It is just at this point that the materialist scientist fails to realize that perhaps there are spiritual forces which he should take into account.

There are strange substances called catalytic agents. Suppose we heat potassium chlorate. Very little action takes place until a small amount of manganese dioxide and then the potassium chlorate readily decomposes and we get large volumes of oxygen. Potassium chlorate and manganese dioxide is not changed or decomposed a particle. By its presence it has speeded up the action of the process and it has made the process itself a living substance that do there are other substances that do just the same thing—they hasten or retard chemical action without being changed themselves. These are called catalytic agents. Whenever a catalytic substance happens to be we may expect the whole to be greater than the sum of all its parts.

Behold the weakness of the bachelor and wonder at the strength and the glory of the benedict! What girl is it greater than herself when she is loved? What boy is not transformed when the miracle of love works within him? Yes, it takes two persons to make a love, but when the two become one in spirit, geometrical axioms will not apply. In the union of two there is one ineffable spiritual being, and the sum of which we know little. Numerically two lovers are merely two lovers—but spiritually they may be legion in the actual sense of the word. Love is the greatest spiritual catalytic agent in the whole universe. It is the only thing that can incite to the highest and noblest of actions, and stimulate to purest thought—and yet remain in itself undiminished.

It is in the realm of things spiritual and mental that the whole is often greater than the sum of its parts. The hope of mankind rests upon this truth. Good books, noble and true friends, a love of nature, a sympathy for the mankind—these are a few of the catalytic agents that give to the soul the rapid descent into sin and hasten our all-too-long climb to the heights. They are the things that make the whole of any and every life greater than the sum of its parts.

John Guin, a cotton mill operative, was killed this morning about 6 o'clock by the Charlotte passenger train three miles west of Monroe, Guin, who is about 22 or 23 years of age, and a companion, John Black, aged about 18, left Monroe some time last night, with the intention of walking to Charlotte. They became sleepy and sat down, according to Black, on the side of the railroad embankment. It appears that Guin sprang out against one of the rails and was struck by the engine, since his skull over the right eye was wounded on the scaly wire, the only abrasions found on the body. Railroad employees, however, are of the opinion that Guin might have met his death in attempting to board an early freight train which was going westward. Young Black seems to be very much addled, is extremely nervous, and apparently does not know just what happened. John Guin is said to have a wife and child at the Baldwin cotton mill at Chester. Black is also from Chester. They came to Monroe a week or more ago and secured work in the Standard Mills, located with John Deese. Mrs. Deese stated that the boys told her last night they were going to walk to Charlotte today. The body of Guin was brought to Dillon's undertaking establishment this morning by Sheriff Fowler—Monroe Enquirer.

Dear Editor:
The wholesale killing of song birds in the Southern States is largely responsible for the failure of the cotton crop last year, says Mr. T. Gilbert Pearson, president of the Associated Audubon Societies. He has recently been in South Carolina, where he made a study of the subject.

"Songs birds feed on the boll weevil, the insect which is the dreaded enemy of cotton planters. Each bird will eat several hundred in a season, says Mr. Pearson. Not only do they eat the insects, but they also eat the cotton crop, farmers shoot by the hundreds. Some of the larger ones, including robins, are used for food."

"Most States have laws to protect these birds, but in some the laws are not properly enforced, according to Mr. Pearson. A campaign of school-house lectures has been organized in North Carolina. The purpose is to show farmers the value of song birds, especially the 'singer' of the boll-weevil."

County treasurers are to retain 25 cents for each chile for their work. These collars are to be worn by the dogs on all occasions except when in a hunt or chase.

The new law is very plain, much in contrast to the old law, and it does away with all county, municipal or other dog taxes and requires only $1.25 to the State. A collar marked "dog license" is to be furnished each dog owner by the county treasurers. For every failure to pay the fine of $5, or five days, is imposed, and each person reporting a collared dog will receive one-half of the fine.

$350,000 for free distribution of seeds by members of Congress. Four Republicans of the sub-committee voted to eliminate the appropriation while the democrats, Senator Harbin, of Georgia, Harrison, of Mississippi, and Overman, of North Carolina, voted to continue distribution. The republican members of the committee expressed confidence that the senate would sustain their action, and it was expected that a fight in conference would result. Secretary Wallace, of the department of agriculture, was said to have recommended abandonment of seed distribution, and the sub-committee had evidence that the congressional packages were being used improperly as premiums by private individuals.

THE NEW DOG LAW HAS TEETH
All Other County and City Dog Laws Repealed by the New One.

Columbia.—Governor Cooper has signed a number of new acts including the Barwell act to "put teeth" in the dog tax law of the State. This new dog license fee of $1.25 supersedes the act passed by the 1920 Legislature, which was so confusing that practically nobody knew anything about the act.

Under the terms of the new act, which is effective for the tax this year, every owner of a dog six months old or older, on Jan. 1, must pay a license of $1.25 for a dog collar, and the license must be paid on or before Feb. 1 every year. This $1.25 will be returned to the school district from which it was collected to be used by the schools of the district.

When Money is a Handicap. Persons who have learned some hard facts in the school of experience insist that "one's best friend is one's money". They say this because money will buy the necessities of life, for once it is in a person's possession it does not lose any part of its magic power, no matter what the repute of its owner may have become. Money, then, has grown to be on the character of the young man or girl who may have, although it comes with all its influence, buy everything one wishes. Notwithstanding these facts money can be a direct handicap, a drag, an obstacle. One of the really bad effects exerted by money is seen in the mark on the character of the young man or girl who may have vast amounts to spend, given by over-fond and over-foolish parents. This has been established for some time from observation of the antics of college and university students, the children of wealthy persons, whose careers while attending the education, the students are those of pecked spendthrifts. Young men in college and university life who have allowances running into many hundreds, or thousands, of dollars indulge in luxuries which, instead of contributing to their advancement, send them down the hill of retrograde on a swift toboggan. Character is formed in this way—but what obstructs instead of being inspired with admiration for that which is upright, clean, honest and forceful they may become a disgrace to their college. They will embrace that which is fatal. The hypothesis can be disposed of; of these things actually happen.

High school girls are just now furnishing some bizarre examples of student life that prove the theory that large amounts of money in the hands of "well-to-do" children are deleterious instead of helpful. Lovable girls driven by rallow youths who never earned a dollar in their lives, but who spend with facile ease, visit cabarets, jazz resorts, tea shops, shady flats and road houses, bearing their passengers on joy rides that are damaging and dangerous.

The conduct of these high school students are considered scandalous by the authorities who have made investigations. The children themselves cannot be blamed so much as they are living in a time that is particularly hazardous in its effect on morals, they have money to spend, they see unfix examples on all sides and they go out at high speed, either ignorant or unmindful of the consequences. The evil itself can be traced directly to the home and then to the parents who are wholly responsible. The rich, indulgent father, who provides his son or daughter with luxuries and large amounts of money cannot expect the best results from what can be nothing but a foolish investment.

Deciding Where to Buy

The success of a business depends on its ability to analyze the mental operations of the public, and to determine where people go to, where they shall buy goods. The merchants who read the public mind most accurately get the business.

When one finds that he needs something, the question comes up where that article should be bought. From some source back in the mind the suggestion comes that such and such a place would be a good store to visit for that purpose. Hence comes that question:

In the majority of cases, it is created by the store that has made the most effort to impress its reputation on the public mind. People remember the things they buy, and they forget other things that are rarely called to their attention. The advertised store conforms to the laws of psychology, by constantly calling public attention to its goods, its methods, its prices, and the advantages of trading with it. Consequently the inner consciousness, when asked that or where a person should buy, is apt to respond by suggesting certain advertised goods.

It is of course true that while a store by advertising can always draw in a lot of new trade, it can't keep growing really, does give good values. But advertising helps a store do that, notably in these two ways:

Advertising encourages merchants to handle big lots when such articles should be advertised. They know that by offering them at low figures, they can draw attention to the public by advertising, they can swing these big lots and turn them into money in a short time, thus buying in a large way the taking advantages of special opportunities, they are able to offer special values.

Advertising increases volume of trade, thus reducing the operating and overhead expense per article, making it possible to cut prices to the public. The advertised store buys and operates at low figures, and can thus make low prices.

The cow and the hen, always dependable stand by of our artists, have demonstrated their worth as reliable sources of income during periods of depression and returned good profits, according to the secretary of the Kansas state board of agriculture.

ITS NOT WHAT IT COSTS TO GET IN THE NEWS—BUT WHAT IT COSTS YOU TO STAY OUT.

What Does It Cost to Stop Advertising?

You remember James Pyle's Pearline. It had been advertised regularly from 1873 to 1907.

Then the trustees of the estate saw a brilliant chance to save money. They cut out advertising.

Sales dropped like a clap hammer—profits went where soapuds and bubbles go. In 1914 Pearline, like Jess Willard, tried to come back. But it was too late. The business was sold at a price which is said to have covered barely the value of the machinery and inventory.

Moral: A business will grow as long as it advertises.

A salesforce will thrive as long as it TRIES.

You can't make progress against the current unless you keep rowing. But the harder you row, the faster you go.

How much will The News' readers spend in your store?

Doesn't the answer to that question depend upon you?

Advertise—means to sell.

Not to advertise usually means to fail.
