VOL. 13

HOW MUCH SMARTER WOMEN ARE

Another proof of the sagacity of women is in the matter of buttons.

The button has disappeared from women's apparel except in a purely ornamental or vestigial way.

Man clings to buttons with the same tenacity he displayed against relinquishing galluses for the belt.

In many quarters the gallus is still holding its own.

We used to joke about the time required for a woman to dress.

There was a story about a professor who learned a whole foreign language in intervals of waiting while his wife dressed for dinner.

Those days are gone forever. The modern woman dresses in four minutes flat.

Woman even calls gravity to aid in simplifying process. The frock is lifted against the floor and drops snugly on the figure.

Man, on the other hand, must tread warily the Via dolorosa of the button.

At best it is a slow job, and one which must be carefully done.

White woman has quietly revolutionized the mechanics of dressing.

The small boy forgets that he remembers to hurry home, but remembers that the man forgets to pay back five dollars.

It is easy to remember the things that promise a profit, easy to forget the other.

But the world at large does not remember a record last year, but have made nothing to gain.

People who dislike you treasure the memory of your sins, for your sins justify their dislike and foster their judgment.

But the world at large does not remember a record last year, but have made nothing to gain.

Because you did something shameful that left a blot on your record, you think the blot was there.

Because you did something shameful that left a blot on your record, you think the blot was there.

Because you did something shameful that left a blot on your record, you think the blot was there.

Because you did something shameful that left a blot on your record, you think the blot was there.

Because you did something shameful that left a blot on your record, you think the blot was there.

Because you did something shameful that left a blot on your record, you think the blot was there.

Because you did something shameful that left a blot on your record, you think the blot was there.

THREE THOUSAND YEARS OF FARMING

Lays Basis for Rotation System, which is Outgrowth of Constant Practical Observation.

Out of the practical experience of farmers over a period of 3,000 years or more has finally developed the fundamental principle of crop rotation.

The modern farmer dresses in four minutes flat. Robbed hair is particularly responsible.

When cereals become the chief source of food of the early people, it was natural that these cereals should be sown in the same field year after year.

In England, sales of yarns and cloths still show a marked increase.

Business Integrity Counts. Glen Buck, in Nation's Business Magazine, says:

The first thing that almost every man does when he starts a business is to establish a reputation for integrity.

The fourth stage was the introduction of legumes or clover for the crop system.

The fifth stage was the introduction of clover for the crop system.

The sixth stage was the introduction of clover for the crop system.

The seventh stage was the introduction of clover for the crop system.

The eighth stage was the introduction of clover for the crop system.

The ninth stage was the introduction of clover for the crop system.

The tenth stage was the introduction of clover for the crop system.

The eleventh stage was the introduction of clover for the crop system.

WORLD IMPROVEMENT IN TEXTILES

The cotton spinning industry of the world is holding the improvement of the world's textiles.

Robert George got to thinking about life one day and wrote this.

"The twenties are years of discouragements. It is a hard-trying time for all.

"The forties are the years of vision, when a man finds himself, finishes his castles in the air and knows the value of his dreams.

"At sixty, a man has committed enough mistakes to make him wise far above his juniors.

"Some of the best work in the world is done in the seventies. No man has a right to retire at any age unless he wishes to die.

"You don't like to undertake the hard and puzzling, do you? This has been a fault and drawback all your life, hasn't it?

"You have flunked or failed so many times that you have begun to doubt your ability.

"But your failures are not due to lack of brain power or any other disability on your part except your unwillingness to do anything which demands close and constant attention.

"Have you ever created 'situations' which would take the exercise of good judgment and long study to conquer?

"You may find it harder to do this sort of thing now than when you were younger, but it is not too late to begin.

"Many fail because they try to make life one of ease and freedom from difficult tasks.—Exchange.

Alexander Dumas, Senior, poached his way to Paris, defraying his expenses with the game he shot on the road.

What a blessing it will be when all the timid people in our country start to make the timid people into a few million others, who have gained self-confidence.

Andorra, a republic in the Pyrenees, has no army, no taxation, no money, and no roads.

Tunnel Through The Rockies

One of the greatest engineering achievements in American history was accomplished a few years ago when, successful completion on February 18, 1927, President Coolidge, seated in the White House, presided in a golden telegraph key that gave the signal for blasting away the final obstruction in the pioneer bore of the Moffat Tunnel near Denver.

When completed, this "hole" will be the longest railroad tunnel in the western hemisphere and the sixth longest in the world—5.1 miles in length.

"At sixty, a man has committed enough mistakes to make him wise far above his juniors.

An average of 650 men have been employed in drilling the two holes. When complete, they will have cost more than $15,000,000.

It is figured. If a public enterprise, authorized by the Colorado Legislature, and it is the intention of the Moffat Tunnel Commission to lease the complete railway tunnel to various Colorado and trans-continental railroads, according to the Denver Rocky Mountain News.

Thus, more than sixteen years after the death of the great dreamer on which David H. Moffat, Denver railroad builder and financier, carried a lifetime and immense fortune, will have become a reality.

Actual work on the big holes in the mountains has been under way less than four years, according to a United Press dispatch from the west portal of the tunnel.

There was less than an inch of error in the perfect alignment of the two holes, one from the east and the other from the west. Twenty-seven workers sacrificed their lives in the stupendous task.

"Since September, 1923, a crew of 650 men has been drilling toward the west portal of the tunnel. There was less than an inch of error in the perfect alignment of the two holes, one from the east and the other from the west.

Twenty-seven workers sacrificed their lives in the stupendous task. They were many of the best men in the country.

Why should not the boss want now to let them, to meet the men who work for him without feeling it necessary to be on his dignity and assert his authority?

Why should not the employer like to feel that on the one hand, a month there is no difference between his position and that of any other man?

Are the conditions of ordinary business life so enchanting that one is not glad to get away from them now and then, and meet his fellows on another plane, even if that plane happens to be modelled on customs which have long passed out of life?

As a matter of fact, a little more fraternity in business would be very much better for the world.

If governments were so careful to take care of their sick and fallen as are some of the lodges, there would be less helplessness in every life.

If business establishments were as ready to assure a faithful worker, who had fallen by the wayside, that his wife and children would be cared for, as some of the lodges do, how many more would be able to afford a more direct route to the Pacific coast, which will open up for Denver a new source of water supply which in itself will be worth infinitely more than the cost of the project.

David H. Moffat died defeated, notes the Columbus Ohio State Journal, "but the idea which inspired him has won its way."

FRATERNITIES

It pleased me to hear a member of President Coolidge's cabinet reply to a rather "snappy" attack upon lodges which had appeared a few months before in a magazine.

The author of this attack took the superior position that intellectual people do not require to mingle with other men on terms of equality, and that the whole purpose of fraternal societies is to enable the members to wear finer clothes than they do in common life, and to feel more important, because there are not lines of "cast." Well, what of it?

Why would not men want to vary the humdrum of their lives by less than four years, according to a United Press dispatch from the west portal of the tunnel.

There was less than an inch of error in the perfect alignment of the two holes, one from the east and the other from the west.

ALL OUT OF PROPORTION.

If we are ready to accept the axiom that agriculture is the basis of our National life, that everything else is dependent upon it, we are forced to admit that so long as it is statistically shown to be a fact that farm "plants", their utilization and "output", have been keeping pace with the growth of population in this country, something is fearfully and vitally wrong, and that it is the business and financial leaders of the Republic, the men who have lifted industry and trade to a highly organized and advanced plane, to take hold of this agricultural problem and see what can be done about it.

Per capita footage of land in harvested crop has decreased over 16 per cent since 1900, while the average yield per acre of the principal crops combined has been practically stationary during this period. As a result, the production of farm products per acre of our population has declined nearly 9 per cent since 1900, despite the fact that the output per agricultural worker has increased 18 per cent. We have increasingly been meeting our National needs for supplies of food and raw materials by buying more of them from abroad and selling less of our own to foreign countries. Since the beginning of the century our exports of agricultural products have decreased about 25 per cent, while our imports of food and raw materials with or without the aid of our own farms have increased over 40 per cent.

These figures show a very real danger to the present in order to emphasize how they reveal the weakness of the American farmer, and the great and insurmountable disadvantage to which he is being put as compared, for instance, with the position of his agricultural competitors from abroad, or as compared with the increasingly commanding position of business and industry at home.

The combined capital, labor and material costs per unit of product moved almost parallel with the wholesale prices of farm products from 1880 to 1900, but from that latter period up to 1919-1929 the combined unit cost of production increased nearly 85 per cent, while the wholesale price level of agricultural products increased only 132 per cent.

In consequence of these changes, agriculture has been lagging behind the general march of economic prosperity which has accompanied our industrial development for a generation. As a branch of our economic life, agriculture has had a progressively smaller share in the National income.

In 1880, for each dollar of share in the National income received by persons engaged in all other branches of our economic life, each person engaged in agriculture received 51 cents.

In 1890 this relative share had risen to 38 cents and in 1900 to 45 cents; but by 1929 it had fallen to 41 cents and by 1929 to 39 cents. Furthermore, the portion of the National wealth which our agriculture represents has grown less rapidly than the remainder, as we have become more and more dominantly an industrial, commercial and financial Nation.

Thus, in real values—that is, in dollars of constant purchasing power—our agricultural wealth increased only 40 per cent from 1900 to 1929, while the total National wealth increased 70 per cent, and the non-agricultural wealth nearly 80 per cent. These changes are broad reflections of the fact that there has been an increasing disparity between the returns to the American farmer from his labor and investments in agriculture, and the returns which have come to workers and investors in other fields.

Thus, in the last crop year, 1925-1926, the Commerce Board finds that after paying business expenses and taking a reward for his labor and management at the rates of his hired labor, the average farm owner-operator secured a return on his investment of only 2.4 per cent, or on the other hand, he would actually lose on his capital as he could secure from investing it in a mortgage on another farm, the reward for his year's labor and management would be $440.

This includes the value of the food, fuel and housing supplied by the farm, and was less than the average wage of the hired farm laborer, and less than half as much as the average tenant farmer, without any investment received for his labor, namely, $981. These figures may be contrasted with the average labor salaries of $1,185 for employed workers in such occupations as manufacturing, rail-road transportation, clerical work, and government service—Charles Lotte News.

COOKING.

Professor DeJant, of the Pasteur Institute, in Paris, has evolved a plan for doing away with brooding by organizing a series of culinary factories. Cooking, he claims, is one of the world's biggest industries and it has never been organized.

Millions of women throughout the world, he says, are daily performing a fatiguing task which they do not like. If all cooking were done in a factory there would be a great saving of time and labor.

It is probably a good idea from the economic standpoint. There is much truth in his view and many housewives will approve of it. But isn't cooking an important and delightful factor in a well-regulated home? Isn't it one of the pleasures that help to hold the family together? Going out to a restaurant all the time or having the meals brought into the house all the time seems hardly a satisfactory substitute for the real pleasure of home cooking.

In his country, to be sure, the average housewife can't cook. She knows how to throw a chunk of meat and a handful of vegetables into a pot and how to make a messy substance which she calls biscuit, and so forth. But that is not real cooking.

Real cooking is an art, and like all arts, can be made the source of great pleasure. Few women cook the kind of dinner that papa likes to eat. It is rare and frequently, is not healthy. Papa may be laying the foundation of hyperchlorhydria, chronic gastritis, a uric acid diathesis or two or three kindred other troubles that we acquire slowly, after years of faulty feeding.

AFRAID TO EAT

Bleating Spells, from Indigestion, Put an Oklahoma Man in a Miserable Fix, But He Found Relief.

Swink, Okla.—In describing how he suffered from indigestion, Mr. S. T. Strain, of Okla., says: "I had been a user of Black-Draught for four or five years. I have been taking it for stomach trouble. I suffered after eating with a heavy feeling. It is particularly frequent, is not healthy. Papa may be laying the foundation of hyperchlorhydria, chronic gastritis, a uric acid diathesis or two or three kindred other troubles that we acquire slowly, after years of faulty feeding. There were times when I just did without anything to eat until I was too weak to go. I was just miserable and the way system seemed clogged.

"I had spells when I could not eat much, and I would be nauseated and hurt a lot. I was in a pretty bad fix.

"I began taking Black-Draught. It seemed to help me wonderfully. My head's found indigestion that benefited me as Black-Draught did. I certainly can recommend it.

science first, and as an art next. As she gains mastery of the subject she also learns how to square papa's appetite and individual taste with his capacity for digesting her cooking.

Of course, both papa and mama could study food values and their own bodily limitations and could obtain the proper kind of nourishment from the nearest food factory. But, even then, would they not have lost something? Would not another shop have taken away from the foundation of the home?

To be sure, mama would have more time on her hands. But mama is doing with their spare time these days, it gives you a cold chill.

If, however, this idea of the French professor is carried out and is successful, why not have all babies turned over to a neighborhood crèche or public nursery, have the government or the Standard Oil Company do the family washing and housecleaning, have the National City or First National Bank look after the family budget and, in the same manner, turn over all mama's responsibilities to a well-organized, scientific agency?

There is no doubt that such agencies could do all these things better than mama. But what if the dickens will mama do to kill time?—Selected.
