One of four American clergy to visit the Iranian hostages in Tehran during Christmas 1979 will be speaking at Winthrop.

The Rev. William Sloane Coffin, Jr. will be speaking on "Fostering Peace and Justice: The Role of Higher Education" Wednesday, Feb. 19 in Tillman Auditorium at 8 p.m.

Coffin, pastor of Riverside Church in New York City, has been active in many civil rights issues including protesting the Vietnam War and Selective Service, acting as adviser and field trainer for the Peace Corps, as well as being a CIA agent in anti-Soviet operations from 1950-1963.

Since he came to Riverside Church in 1977, Coffin has established the Riverside Disarmament Program advocating reversal of the arms race.

Coffin's visit is sponsored by the Winthrop College Campus Ministries.

The flu blues strike Winthrop

By MAGGIE ZALMEA
TJ staff writer

Have you got the flu blues? Join the crowd. Crawford Health Center reported about 90 cases a day last week. “Fortunately, this week it’s down to 30 a day,” said Bonnie Keisel, R.N. at the Health Center.

Symptoms may include a scratchy or sore throat, sneezing, stuffy nose, tearing watery eyes, cough and unusual tiredness.

If persistent fever, yellowish/greenish mucus coming from the lungs, chest pain, or tenderness around the eyes or cheeks occur, a health professional should be consulted.

Now, let’s get down to the good stuff. What can be done to relieve these uncomfortable symptoms?

The American-College Health Association offers the following tips:

1- Drink large quantities of fluids. Fluids help to loosen secretions which facilitates removal and aids in reducing fever.
2- Saline gargles. Gargling with one to two teaspoons of salt in a large glass of warm water every four hours will help reduce swelling and cleanse the throat.
3- Analgesics. Aspirin or acetaminophen (Tylenol or Excedrin) will provide pain relief.
4- Cough medicine. Some act as expectorants, loosening secretions; others suppress coughing.
5- Decongestants. Recommended for relief of nasal/sinus congestion.
6- Throat lozenges. Soothes throat irritation.
7- Antihistamines. Useful for treating allergic symptoms, sneezing and running nose.

These medications do not require a prescription and can be purchased at the health center or local pharmacy.

“Don’t forget to give yourself plenty of time to rest and sleep,” said Keisel.

Students receive honors

Three students from Winthrop College were selected to perform with the South Carolina All-State College Jazz Ensemble in Greenville, S.C. Feb. 14 during a convention of the South Carolina Music Educators Association.

According to Phil Thompson, interim director for the Winthrop Jazz Ensemble, the students were selected from audition tapes sent to the South Carolina Music Educators Association.

“We submitted tapes from these three students based on their abilities and performances,” Thompson said.

Scott McLaughlin, a senior at Winthrop, was chosen to play drums for the ensemble. McLaughlin is from Charlotte, N.C. and is majoring in music education.

Keith Johnson, a senior music education major from Gastonia, N.C., will play trombone. Johnson is a former member of the Winthrop Jazz Ensemble.

Reid Hall, a junior majoring in music, has been chosen to play lead alto saxophone with the ensemble. Hall was the leader of the saxophone section during the performance. He is a native of York and also plays with the Winthrop College Jazz Ensemble.

The concert featured a 10th grade student from Columbia named Chris Potter. Potter performed with the high school ensemble but was a guest soloist with the college ensemble.

“Chris is what I would call a musical jazz genius. His talent is incredible,” Thompson said.

Today is the day

By LISA SUUE

According to Chris Hanlon, applications to run for SGA and DSU offices are due today. SGA offices include president, vice president, attorney general, public prosecutor and defender, and class offices. DSU will elect its president and vice president. In the past, elections have been for the same type of positions—whites, men, and Greeks.

The last female SGA president was in 1984 and no black student has ever been elected to the position. The last female SGA officer was in 1984 when Kerri Robinson served as attorney general. For the past two years, only three women ran for major SGA offices. Only one of these was successful. No minorities have sought these positions in recent years.

It's time for a change. Maybe no blacks, women, or non-Greeks run because they feel they cannot win. Needless to say, they are probably right. In a traditionally Southern institution, white men are slow to give up power. They'll fight for the status quo unless they are challenged.

Challenge them.

Blame the staff

By ALLAN C. JENKINS
TJ contributing editor

Three weeks ago, The Johnsonian received a "Letter to the Editor", which we were unable to print because the author affixed neither his/her address nor his/her name.

It's a shame, for the letter was both eloquent and timely. The writer is a staff member at the college, and he/she complained that the staff is often forgotten—"the vital role they play at Winthrop is rarely appreciated or publicly recognized.

The author may have a point. For the past couple of weeks, I have listened to the conversations of the students and faculty, and I find that the faculty and students must be working harder to improve the status quo, or for the same type of SLF's and every-Greeks run because they feel they cannot win. Needless to say, they are probably right. In a traditionally Southern institution, white men are slow to give up power. They'll fight for the status quo unless they are challenged. Challenge them.

Letters to the editor

Dear editor,

One such sad and disappointing scene in the cafeteria is the amount of trays left on the tables. Many apathetic students do not realize that by not putting away their trays, the cafeteria may need improvements. It's a shame that the administrative staff are often not appreciated for their hard work.

All letters to the editor must be submitted to Box 6800 or brought to TJ office in Good Building. Letters must be received by 5 p.m. Letters will be limited to 200 words. Letters should be typed, if possible, double spaced, on a 5-inch space line. Letters should be submitted to Box 6800 or brought to TJ office in Good Building. Letters will be received by 5 p.m. Tuesday to appear in the following week's issue.
— "Twelfth Night" to play —

By KATHY SNEAD
TJ staff writer

A novel interpretation of Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" will be performed by the Winthrop Theater, Feb. 19-22 at 8 p.m. in Johnson Hall.

Traditionally, Shakespearean theater is presented in a dry vein. However, this production directed by Dr. Chris Reynolds has a somewhat unique approach, through the use of modern new wave costuming and original music, composed by the director himself.

"We're trying to do something as wild to today's (audience) as it was for Shakespeare's time," stated Dr. Les Reynolds, the show's costume director.

She went on to say that Shakespeare shouldn't always be presented in a reverent or uptight manner. But for the most part, the director would like to place the emphasis on the fun of performing and seeing Shakespeare.

Chris Reynolds' interpretation allows for a lot more creativity according to Teal Williamson, who plays a supporting character in the play.

"We're trying to do something as wild for today's (audience) as audience (Wednesday night) he would be shocked!"

Others featured in major roles are India Cureton, Jeff Franklin, Craig Hester, Carol Sullivan, Reggie Brunson, Will Thompson and Jack Hilderbran.

Tickets will be available Monday, Feb. 17 at Dinkins Student Union, on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Students may pick up their reserved tickets in Johnson lobby no later than 7:45 p.m. the night of the performance. For more information, call Dinkins Student Union at 823-2247.

Body language tells all

By TODD HUTCHISON
TJ sports writer

Folks, I enjoy watching my sports, but after watching different sports, I've started to notice little things outside of the game. Not major things, just little gimmicks or habits that you can associate with a player, team, or a certain sport.

Baseball has to be the easiest sport to notice these little quirks of nature. You ever notice the third baseman giving signals? I used to ask my dad why he always had so many flies around him. Then, also, look at someone after they have to slide. They must brush themselves off for a good five minutes. I mean, why worry about it; they have to have their uniforms washed before the next game anyway. But my favorite has to be when a guy is on national television and he scratches his privates. You can imagine some little boy who idolizes him scratching himself there the next time he bats in a little league game.

Currently, we are in basketball season, and there are quite a few normalities to catch. Michael Jordan has to be one of the best players in the world, but he can't seem to shoot without his tongue hanging out. The only thing I can figure is he must be checking the temperature. Also, John Thompson seems like he can't coach without his towel and post-game milk. I could imagine Georgetown's program collapsing because all the cows in the world dried up. And you can't forget all 7'4" of Ralph Sampson running down the court with his thumbs up tight. His sister play for Radford, in our own Big South Conference, and she runs the same way. I can only guess it must be built-in genetics.

Football has a few things worth noticing. Everybody had to notice Jim McMahon head butting his way to a Super Bowl victory. He must be pushing for a Goofie's Relief commercial. Clemson fans should all recognize Terrance Rhoulac when he breaks into his shoot-out after he scores. I've been a Cowboy fan since I was four or five years old and I wonder like everyone else if Tom Landry's face is chiseled out of stone or he has a case of hemmorhoids.

Other things I've noticed is the victory lap. I like the idea of how a victorious person or racer is allowed a lap to recognize his superiority. In tennis the customary handshake at the net is a worthy thing to notice. Golf is also great to watch when someone sinks that last putt to win a championship.

Yes, there is more to watching sports than jumpers and home runs. Next time you watch a game try to notice other things.

Conference unity needed

I also think that all new officials should go into a probationary period for two or three years, and then become permanent. And I think there should be a common salary for all Division 1 officials in all sports. The way it is now, in basketball, one conference gives a guy $150 a game and another one gives him $85 a game, which makes the official naturally leans more toward favoring the conferences that pay the bigger money.

Another thing, I also think that the monics inside the NCAA should be split equally between all Division 1 teams, and that it's high time to have the whole 251 teams participate in the NCAA tournament.

To do that would require two things: First, you would have to eliminate the post-season conference tournaments, which have no purpose anymore anyway, because multiple teams from each conference get into the NCAA tournament anyhow. Second, you'd have to make a tournament a week longer. Start with 32 sites and eight teams in the first round at each site. That way, two teams could come out of each site, which puts the number at 64, which clips into the way it's being done today.

What's happening, the way things are done now, is that we're building dynasties by overexposure on TV. In time, we're going to limit the number of appearances on TV by any school, because it's separating the strong from the weak. It's gotten to the point now were recruiting is no contest.

You have your 40 schools that have achieved star stature with the excessive exposure, who usually sign their high school players before the kid's senior year starts in the fall. And then, you have the also-rans who fight for the crumbs in the spring, like desperate robins in the snow. There are a few exceptions, but not many.

The last thing I want to dwell on is the problem we currently have with West Coast basketball. It's gotten to the point now were recruiting is no contest. A final factor is that weather in that part of the country is not conducive to basketball. There are too many surfboards, short-shorts. The only time people stay indoors is when they get a rainstorm. And that there hasn't been a PAC-10 team in the Final Four for the last six or seven years. Also, they, seem, out there, to have no character coaches, no Leftys, no Lous, no Bobbies. They are all buttoned down, with their hair in place.

Okay, that's it. I've got it all out of my system for a while, but when you think about it, it's almost as crazy, as insane, as not having a jump ball at the start of the West Coast is soft is because the second half. But that's the East Coast governs all the other story.

What this all means is that the good high school players on the Pacific side don't see the West Coast schools on TV when it affects the recruiting. Already, two of the best players on the West Coast are from Thompson of Los Angeles and Earl Duncan of Santa Monica—have gone to Syracuse. The best player—Scott Williams of Hacienda Heights—has signed with North Carolina.

DePaul has cherry-picked his kid, Kevin Holland of Cerritos, and Kansas has taken a thoroughbred in Keith Harris out of Santa Monica.

Cheap Shots

There has been a very minor debate at the sports desk about why the basketball team gets more funding than the baseball program. The basketball side argues that basketball is a revenue sport, and baseball isn't. My reply is yes, but college athletics are supposed to be an opportunity for young student-athletes to continue their dreams into the professional ranks, and well... gee, but it looks like the basketball team has sent more players to the pros (10-12) than the baseball program has (0). Of course, Fred McKinnon may make it and more power to him, but the baseballers already have Wayne Shipman being scouted by the Dodgers, with Jeff Dodig, Jimmy Malseed, Scott Geins, Nick Herd almost certain to be drafted, barring injury. Not to mention who else may develop. And besides, which team ranked second in the nation last year? Right.

Rumor Mill

The Mill is kind of dry this week, but I'm sure it will be back in full force next week.

CHEERS... to Janet Dykton. She gathered in Tourney MVP, and all-Tourney First Team honors. Also to Debbie Easterlin, who also placed first in the Mill. Congrats, girls!

Eagle run Saturday

(PHO) - The eighth running of the Winthrop College Eagle Run will be held Saturday, Feb. 28 at 11 a.m. at the Winthrop Coliseum. The event, which is sponsored by the C & S Bank and White Business Machines, is an attractive race for both veteran and novice runners.

The four-mile course will begin and end at the Winthrop Coliseum. The runners will make their way around the lake through the residential streets near the Winthrop campus, and around the main campus. The beautiful scenery makes it one of the most attractive short courses in the Carolinas.

Trophy will be awarded to the winner of each division. The winners will receive a round trip airfare to the Eastern Airlines via Eastern Airlines. The chief prize will be a new car. The grand prize for the top male and female runner will be a round trip airfare and exclusive use of a ski resort.

Entry forms may be obtained by calling or writing the Winthrop College Athletic Department. Entry fees are $5 for adults and $2 for students. No entries will be accepted after the race begins.

Club hits the snow

By JILL ZEIGLER
TJ sports writer

Despite some of the 60-degree weather we've been experiencing lately, the winter season is officially upon us, and along with it has come the opening of resorts and the sound of skis crunching into the snow.

Many Winthrop students are hitting the slopes - Hawksnest, Beach Mountain and Sugar Mountain just to name a few.

This year's Winthrop Outing Club can be added to the list of those checking into the ski scene. They have made several night skiing trips to Hawksnest and are planning even more trips. The club may also try to get in a weekend trip before the snow season is over.

One advantage of going with the Outing Club is that you don't have to pay a ski lodge to have a good time. The club provides the gas money and Epicure supplies the food. They meet every Monday at 6 p.m. in Dinkins, Room 220.

And skiing is just their winter specialty. Then spring rolls around, they hope to take a few bicycling and rock climbing trips. The club provides most equipment for their outings.

Outings are open to all students.

One good thing to consider about the Outing Club is that anyone and everyone is welcome to go on the outings.

So, if you get a sudden urge to go skiing this winter (and you want to do so without having to dish out some big bucks), check into the Winthrop Outing Club and get ready for the snow - any way you can.

The cheerleading would like to thank everyone who made Homecoming a success!
Ken Carroll perseveres
Only the strong survive

By ROBERT JOLLY
TJ managing editor

Two years ago Ken Carroll, now an optometry major at Winthrop College, was an avid high school cross-country and track captain, a Fellowship of Christian Athletes officer, a member of his church youth group, and a water sports enthusiast.

He had just graduated, he had a job, a steady girlfriend, and his family had just moved to West Palm Beach for the summer.

His life seemed easy, until he was paralyzed in a diving accident at 11 a.m. July 27, 1984.

He recalled vividly the events that led up to and followed the accident: "My cousin and I were jumping off a trellis beside my uncle's pool. The water was about six feet deep, and we decided to dive. He dove first and belly flopped so bad, I wanted to top his dive."

"The top of my head hit the bottom of the pool, I almost laughed: I couldn't move anything. My cousin, who had thought I was joking at first, pushed me to the side of the pool."

"It took the ambulance a half-hour to arrive. It was during that time that I tried to move my neck and the excruciating pain hit. The pain almost numbed me."

Carroll even recalled the paramedic and described her as "gorgeous."

Carroll had two surgeries that night: one to remove broken bone fragments from his neck, and a fusion surgery that entailed removing bone from his hip and wedging it into his vertebrae to stabilize his neck.

He awoke to find a weighted apparatus called a halo traction device attached to his head.

"There was no thought of being able to move at all."

Carroll, who is now 19, was to spend two weeks in traction before being transferred to a rehabilitation hospital in Charlotte, N.C.

He spent six months at the rehabilitation hospital, where he received physical, occupational and recreational therapy.

"I had to learn to feed, dress, and wash myself: the things I used to take for granted, I had to learn all over again."

It was during the period of rehabilitation, which Carroll refers to as "being born again," that he understood what it was like to be a Christian. He had never really been a Christian before his accident, and now he found a new strength in Christianity.

"I had always claimed to be a Christian. I questioned why this happened to me," Carroll said. "Mom told me to trust the Lord, so I did. I knew with the Lord behind me I could accomplish anything."

"I described the time as a spiritual awakening, and decided to dedicate his life to pain."

"I prayed to be the Christian God wanted me to be."

"I decided the inclusion of six months of rehabilitation, Carroll was sent home and told he would probably never be able to live on his own.

"Dad told me I could take two roads: I could either be a baby and a nuisance, or I could take the dynamic independent route and make something out of my life."

"Dad told me I could take two roads: I could either be a baby and a nuisance, or I could take the dynamic independent route and make something out of my life."

"I realized that things are going to take me longer. I had to discipline myself to manage my time."

"The hardest thing to deal with was knowing I was different. I was scared to make friends. I have a responsibility to there may be a cure. It doesn't matter if I never walk again. We all are healed when we go to heaven."

Curran named outstanding employee by former President Lader

By JILLIAN COFFIN
TJ staff writer

Martie Hardin Curran, director of Alumni Relations at Winthrop College, was named Outstanding Employee 1985-86 by outgoing Winthrop president Phil Lader during Winthrop commencement exercises.

"I was stunned!" said Curran.

"Lader was notorious for calling on me to talk to groups; when he called my name I thought he was going to say that I didn't hear what he said."

Curran feels that the alumni relations have come a long way in the past two years.

"The success has come from the hard work of the Winthrop alumni staff," said Curran.

The Alumni Relations help raise funds for the college. They contact all former students to contribute to the annual funds. Money received goes for scholarships, the library, and recruitment assistance.

"We also like to keep track of the alumni," said Curran.

The Alumni Relations department holds the annual phonathon, which has grown extensively, and Alumni Weekend. The Alumni Relations department has increased student awareness through the Student Alumni Council.

Curran is credited for her dedication, leadership skills, and her witty, enthusiastic personality. Curran's love for Winthrop comes from her 18 years at the Winthrop Training School which is now Withers.

"Winthrop has a special place in my heart because of my 18 years here," Curran said.

Curran became the director of Winthrop's Alumni Relations in 1981. Before coming to Winthrop, Curran worked in the office of Gov. John West in Columbia. She also worked for WSH-TV in Orlando, and WESH-TV in Orlando. She was graduated from Columbia College. She lives in Rock Hill with her sons John, 10, and Dan, 7.

Alumni tours Alaska and Canada

By KATHY SNEAD
TJ staff writer

Involvement is the purpose for this year's Alumni Tour of Alaska and Canada June 17-July 1, sponsored by the Alumni Association of Winthrop College.

The tour will include stops at cities such as Anchorage, Juneau, Ketchikan, and Vancouver, this year's site for the World's Fair. Also, during the tour at least five Winthrop Alumni who are currently living in Alaska will join the tour in Fairbanks for a reunion.

This trip is just one of the many services the association provides for Winthrop Alumni to become reacquainted with their alma mater.

"We're getting them (Alumni) interested in Winthrop," said Martie Curran, director of the Alumni Relations. Curran also hopes these excursions promote communication between the alumni themselves.

Although this trip is directed towards alumni, it is open to their families, guests and Winthrop students. For more information, contact Martie Curran at the Alumni Association, 323-2145.

WC collects 229 pints in blood drive —

By TOM STEARNS
TJ staff writer

"People are deterred for various reasons," Webb said. "Some for weight problems, some have poor blood counts, some are just not well enough. Although they can't give this time, we appreciate the effort, and encourage them to try again next time.

"Basically at Winthrop," Webb said. "We try to reach the first-time donors. We had a goal this time of contacting 150 first-time donors. We want them to see that giving blood is not that big a deal. It's easy, it doesn't really hurt, and once they give once they see that. It's hard the first time, but it gets easier."

"A college blood drive is the first chance many have to give," Webb continued. "We encourage students who have or haven't given blood in the past to give. Once they're over the hump of that first time, it's a lot easier."

Conservative group monitors classes

(YCT)-The Young Conservatives of Texas is a student group that split from the nationwide Young Americans for Freedom four years ago in a money fight. It is now monitoring classes on five state campuses, looking for professors who inhibit "the free and liberal exchange of ideas" and who grade down students for political reasons.

YCT official Tim Belton says the group is not connected to Accuracy in Academia, the group which this year began trying to identify professors who espouse "liberal" ideas at the expense of advertised course content. YCT has yet to report any cases of offending profs to campus officials.
