MEN START CURLS AGAIN INSTEAD OF POMPADOURS

Paris—Curls are coming back—but this time it is men's turn. Gone are the days of sleek pompadours brushed back to look like the finest piece of patent leather. American film heroes probably have had much to do with bringing back the mode, or perhaps it is only the natural course of events. As soon as madame began leaving off gentlemanly fashion, monsieur had to go in for feminine ones. At any rate, fashionable hairdressing parlors in the 'Arabian' and St. Honoré quarters report a steady increase in the number of masculine clients demanding permanent waves and curls.

Prominent actors are among the most frequent visitors to the curling parlors, but middle-aged business men and the young men, also, are fast taking up curls and waves. The style of dressing the hair, of course, depends on the shape of the face and head. Sometimes there is a wavy pompadour, or again there is a parting on the side or in the back with little ringlets at the side. Men are unfortunate in that frequent cutting of his hair makes a good factor, and consequently visits to the curler's are made necessary. However, the new fashion is not such a boon to the hairdressers as was to be expected, for the men are no longer demanding the intricate lotions as formerly.

The curlifiers are also announcing curls for women. After the success of the prim, uncurled single attempts, they are now making a popular a rival coiffure. Slightly disordered curls are what some of the hairdressers are advocating, but it is questionable if you see if curls return for the women. At any rate, they make a good solution for doing up women's locks just before the start of a bundle of them, held up by a pearl and silver-headed bandage, is pretty for evening wear. It is a practice for men to wear under the minkie hats now being worn.

LESSON OF TWO FIRES.

Chilmon College sustained a loss of approximately a quarter of a million dollars by fire one day last week. The town of Hartsville sustained a loss of approximately one hundred thousand dollars in the loss of a school building last Friday night.

"We have here in two cases the enormous sum of three hundred and fifty thousand dollars of property destroyed by fire. It is a suggestive lesson to the dangerous and destructive element which fire is in our material life. The State's sinking fund, the grandiose death of our people should be spiritual, scriptural and intelligent, and not to tradition, habit, and the selfishness of the 'living God,' I am, your devoted pastor, J. J. Vipperman.

FARMERS MUST NOT PRODUCE COSTS BY IMPROVING THE SOIL.

The big problem with farmers throughout the country is the cost of producing crops. Experts who are giving their time and thought to problems which confront the farmer. The cost unit—that is, the cost of producing 100 pounds of tobacco, a pound of butter or a dozen eggs must be lowered before the farmer can hope to realize satisfactory profits from his labor. Tennessee's agriculture is no exception. Unless products are produced more economically, if Tennessee dairy men expect to sell butter on the same market and compete with Wisconsin and Minnesota dairy men where butter-fat production is about twice that in Tennessee they must find better, better, better, produce feed, cheaper, or eventually those farmers will force their way out of business.

The Alabama affair when he returned the Tennessee farmer must improve his farm by increasing the amount of crops and by increasing the capacity of his farm for crops and live stock. Improve his methods in every practical way, use good areas for breeding good seed in the production of crops and the best known methods in marketing these products once they are produced.

One of the biggest factors in economical production is fertile soil. The farmer should be growing of legumes such as clover and alfalfa and the use of barnyard manure is the surest and cheapest way to accomplish this.

There is on this continent almost every variety of scene that the wide world can furnish. There are mountains which for majesty and grandeur cannot be equaled in any other country; stately rivers, magnificent lakes, boundless woods, mighty waterfalls. In spite of improved highways and cheaper transportation this vast heritage is not appreciated as it ought to be. We are always seeking for those things which are in the clouds, not for those that lie at our feet. It is not that which we hold in our hands or store away that makes up wealth, it is the faculty of fully appreciating and enjoying those things without which the world would be a vast sterile tract as devoid of beauty as the moon with its oceans of ashes and burnt-out craters, which nothing can redeem.

WORLD ON SERIOUS CHANGE.

Young Man in Spartanburg Held on Charge of Attacking on Women's Testimony Before the Magistrate is Conflicting.

Spartanburg, April 7.—Following arrest and incarceration in the county jail Sunday afternoon and a preliminary investigation before Magistrate John I. Lancaster, Fred Hipp, 26, of Beaumont, was bound over to the court of general sessions under charges of committing a statutory offense against a young married woman living between Beaumont and Whiteside, according to information obtained from the magistrate.

According to the announcement of Magistrate Lancaster, the young woman in question alleged that the offense against her was committed last Thursday afternoon. A warrant against Hipp was sworn out Sunday afternoon, and the defendant was arrested by Sheriff Sam E. Miller. Hipp denied ever having seen the young woman, the magistrate said, the testimony offered by members of the family of the prosecutrix was conflicting.

Alleged Victim Testified.

The young woman testified at the hearing, according to the magistrate, that last Thursday afternoon, while she was waiting for her husband's milk, Hipp entered her yard. Several other persons were on the premises at the time, including her mother. She testified, but none except the sister appeared at the hearing.

Hipp followed her into the house, the woman said, and then assaulted her, the magistrate explained. On the return of a neighbor, she told him of the assault and he immediately set out to find Hipp, the magistrate said. She testified, however, that she was in an inner room and in the absence of his wife, said that he was not informed of the alleged assault until his Saturday night, Magistrate Lancaster said. Sunday afternoon, she testified, according to the way Miller and asked him to take some action.

Sister Also Appears.

The sister of the young woman testified that Hipp followed the young woman into the house and assaulted her. She testified, however, that she was in an inner room and in the absence of his wife, said that he was not informed of the alleged assault until his Saturday night, Magistrate Lancaster said. Sunday afternoon, she testified, according to the way Miller and asked him to take some action.

FACTS ABOUT SOUTH CAROLINA.

The total area of South Carolina is 30,495 square miles, or approximately 20,000,000 acres. There are only about 44 persons on the square-mile in South Carolina, showing the need of a larger, farming population.

South Carolina's mean temperature is 62.9 degrees. The highest annual mean on record was at Beaufort in 1908, of 67.4 degrees, and the lowest was at 56 degrees, in Mountain Rest. Oconee county, in 1917.

The annual precipitation of South Carolina is 47.75 inches. Heavy power used by the textile manufacturing establishments of the state last year was 222,887,000 kilowatt-hours, valued at $42,300,000, or 50 per cent. was classed as hydro-electric.

A new record for construction was set in South Carolina last year, with this state ranking next in Florida in gains. The principal building advances were made in Spartanburg and Greenville, where new work was very much in evidence.

Of the approximately one and one-quarter millions of population in the United States, less than 6,000 are foreign born.

Thirty Years of the Weevil and Still Good Crops of Cotton.

While the coming of the boll weevil has materially increased the cost of production in the United States, this fact need not discourage the producer because even at its increased production cost cotton is still the cheapest of fibers and there is a growth world-wide demand for it. The weevil reduces the yield per acre and necessitates the use of poison and other expensive control measures. It also forces cotton production out into new Weevil-free areas, which are less suitable to cotton growing than the older cotton-growing districts. Cotton production in this country, however, is being permanently on a more costly basis. Nevertheless, the growers are learning more and more successful ways of combating the weevil, and there is no reason for panic over its inroads.

This is the view of the United States Department of Agriculture, which says exaggerated ideas exist as to the effects of the weevil and the difficulty of carrying with it is about 30 years since the weevil invaded the United States. It has now spread over the entire United States. Agonomists declare that the country is nearing the time when it will not be able to supply its own cotton requirements by producing of furnishing the bulk of the world's supply. Such fears, according to the department, are unwarranted. Available statistical methods afford hope of holding the pest back. Meaningful judging by their performance by the present crop countries that have been preyed by our deluges to expand their cotton acreage and to improve the weevil, a large addition to the world's cotton supply for many years.

The department does not minimize the importance of the weevil. This is shown by the fact that yields in Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina have, at times, been reduced from 50 to 75 per cent. below the average of the period before the insect's invasion. The States mentioned in effect in discouraging production has perhaps been as important as the damage done to high prices. The destruction of bollworms, Nevertheless, the fact that two States, Texas and Oklahoma, have twice grown records of yields in the past indicates that the weevil is not fatal to the cotton industry. These records were made in years when the weevil was checked by nature. They were also largely due to tremendous acreage expansion made in response to high prices. They consequently do not necessarily indicate any great success in weevil control. Nevertheless, such crops certainly show that the weevil is not preventing cotton production.

There has been a gradual revival of cotton production even

Big Vices Syndicate and Whiskey Ring Found by Officers.

Chicago Police Discover Main-moist Effort to Evade Law.

Chicago, April 7.—Evidence of a liquor and vice syndicate which the police said had been doing a business of millions of dollars a year was found here yesterday in a raid on headquarters of the organization where eight men, alleged to be subordinates, were arrested.

Records of wealthy liquor customers, names of hotel proprietors, enforcement officers, accounts of beer deliveries and details of the channel whereby liquor was brought from rum fields of New York, Miami, Fla., and New Orleans were confiscated.

John Patton, former mayor of Boston, a suburb, one of those arrested, was charged by Sergeant Edward Birmingham of the raiders, with having helped to "forget the bookkeeping system."

The office suite had a doctor's name on the door and the first room entered was fitted up as a physician's reception room. Shelves were stocked with half-pint bottles of various brands and kinds of liquor, available for physicians to take to their own patients to analyze.

In the hidden alcove books of the syndicate leaders, detectives said, were listed names of more than 200 well known Chicagoans and many large hotels here and liquor here and in outlying towns, details of the management of four large breweries here, and of four large distilleries of beer and liquor and the cost systems used in disorderly houses.

Such work was made for the raid for the alleged heads of the syndicate whose names, the police said, were revealed through the records.

Conditions Are Good.

New York, April 7.—Gilbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, said today that there has been a considerable recession in the steel industry during the last thirty days, but that some improvement in business had been noted since the first of April.

Director Louis of the Budget, the other speaker, discussed governmental economy and declared that with no change in the program as carried in the 1925 budget, we will end the year with a balanced budget and a surplus of $87,954,489.

INTEREST IN YORK COURT.

York Court Convening Next Week of More than Ordinary Interest to Chester County People.

The term of court which convenes in York next Monday April 13th, with Judge Meminger presiding, will be of special interest to Chester county people in view of the fact that several trials in which Chester county people are interested are expected to be held at this court.

Morris McFadden, motorcycle policeman of Rock Hill, is to be tried for the murder of Deputy Sheriff Simpson, Chester man, who was riding in an automobile driven by Bernard Cook of Chester, on the night of February 27th, in Rock Hill. Details of this incident are familiar to Chester News readers. McFadden is now out on a $5,000 bond. He will be represented at the trial by Attorneys Hamilton and Wilson of Rock Hill, John B. Hart of York, and David Hamilton of Chester. Solicitor J. Lyles Glenn will be assisted in the prosecution by Attorneys F. K. McLow, of York.

Another case of local interest.

Another case of local interest is that of W. P. Agnew, late of York, and David Hamilton of Chester. Solicitor J. Lyles Glenn will be assisted in the prosecution by Attorneys F. K. McLow, of York.

Miss Helen Coleman, also teacher in the Leeds school, and that at the time he had a living wife, is now out on a $10,000 bond.

Sylvester Moore, a Chester county negro, is to be tried for the murder of the York term of court, being alleged that he had run down and killed another negro with an automobile in the road section of York county, 1924 time ago. Moore is also out on bond.

WORTH TRYING.

This is for young men and young women who are standing in the edge of life, and wondering what it is all about. From their experience and their hearing, they know that many of the deserving are called failures in their old age; that many of the undeserving are called successes.

They know, if they have been at all observant, that chances are often unequal, that misfortunes are as likely to fall upon the unjust as on the just.

They know, too, that the most enlightened races are but half civilized, that selfishness, the greatest single force that is holding back progress, is still prevalent.

And they wonder often whether it is worth the effort to try to make the most of themselves, to try to win the prizes which seem so difficult to win, and whose quest is beset with so many chances.

Well, if the effort is not put forth, what will happen? Straggle first, poverty afterward, misery 'till the last.

Life is as hard, even harder for those who do not try, as for those who do.

The mere labor necessary to earning a daily living is extremely arduous to one who does not in the beginning take the trouble to learn how to earn a living.

Try long hours of toilsome, unskilled labor for a few years, as the present writer has done.

There is nothing pleasant or easy about that. At night you will be so physically weary that you will have no ambition to do more than eat dinner and go to bed.

The alarm clock will anger you in the morning with its summons to leave the most delightful minutes of your day, those dreamy half-dreaming times that come just after awakening.

And through the day, as you go about your work, you will see those about you getting ahead, their work constantly becoming more interesting and less difficult physically, and the pay that brings them the things that make for happiness growing constantly larger.

A few years of that will teach you as nothing else can that the seeming difficulty of preparing yourself for some real and highly useful place in life is well worth undergoing.

And a few years of some higher kind of occupation, if you are well prepared for it, will teach you that there is some work that is its own reward, even if it does not lead on to fortune.

That kind of work does not necessarily mean work that is wholly mental.

The skilled artisan enjoys his work, because he uses his brain as well as his hands—the greater the skill the greater the proportion of mental effort enters into the task.

The brick layer is well paid, and his work is interesting. The man who brings him the mortar is a mere machine, and not only so, a mechanical device which will soon take his job away altogether.

It is worth the while to learn to lay bricks, or build houses, or paint pictures or plan bridges.

And the work entailed will not be nearly so hard as the work you would have to do if your mind had never been trained. Select-

CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE
When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will yield words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" designates a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square in the right, and a number under column headed "vertical" will fill the white spaces to the next black square below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except street names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete terms are indicated by special definitions.
