FRIDAY, APRIL 30.

With a 28-inch horse-drawn plow, one man accomplishes from 70 to 80 per cent more than with a single-bottom plow. One man with a 28-inch plow drawn by a tractor covers from 30 to 35 per cent more ground in a day than does a man using six horses on a horse-drawn plow of the same size. A 28-inch tractor plow drawn by a suitable tractor enables one man to accomplish from 60 to 70 per cent more than does the two-bottom plow drawn by six horses.

These facts were brought out by about 800 replies to an inquiry addressed to farmers in central Illinois by the Office of Farm Management, United States Department of Agriculture. Under conditions where the use of a two-row corn cultivator is practical, this machine enables one man to cover nearly twice as much ground per day as with a one-row cultivator. In the section represented by replies received by the department, three horses are most commonly used on the two-row cultivator and the addition of a fourth horse apparently increases but little the amount of ground covered per day.

Such of these farmers as use corn binders have found the use of this machine increases the efficiency of man labor 50 per cent, on the average, over that achieved when cutting and shocking by hand. Eighty bushels, the reports show, is an average day's work for one man when husking corn from the standing stalk by hand.

With respect to the value of a hay loader, they learned that the use of this implement reduces by about 25 per cent the time required to cut or load a load of hay, while the amount of labor required for unloading into the mow is only a little more than half as great when a hay loader is used as when the work is done by hand.

A LESSON FOR AMERICA.
A significant statement, that of Mr. Daxner, Belgium's minister of economic affairs, whose official duties correspond somewhat with those of our secretary of commerce. Since the armistice, Belgium has made rapid progress toward industrial recovery, production in the mills and mines and factories of that country having already attained to about seventy per cent of the pre-war normal, although more than one-half of the Belgian workers who fled before the invading Germans are still in France, unable to return to their native land because they have no homes to which to go back. That Belgium is able to make so fine a showing is due, in the opinion of her minister of economics to the fact that the country has had no serious strikes or labor disturbances. And if despite the handicap of a shortage of labor, the plucky little nation's industrial output is so nearly normal as it is estimated, this is pretty good evidence of itself that the Belgians have been on the job and working hard.

A splendid example for industrial America is here presented. The vast difference between what we might have accomplished had American workers gone to work in earnest when the armistice brought the fighting to an end, and the deplorable shortage in the nation's industrial output today, seventeen months after the last shot of the war was fired, with the attendant burdens resting upon the people, indicates to some extent how dearly we are paying for the almost unbroken series of strikes and walkouts which brought the war to America after it ended in Europe. The dignity which attaches to labor arises from the necessity requiring that for the common welfare workers must employ their manpower and ply their skill in production. If labor is entitled to any special consideration, this can properly apply only to the worker who remains on his job. He forfeits all of it when, instead of serving the public, he quits work, and conspires against the public, forbids another worker from taking his place. In the time of national emergency, Belgium has been helped upward by her workers who, holding the common weal of paramount interest, have remained on the job. We would that we might say as much for organized labor in this country. In our national emergency, it has recognized no interest as approaching its own in importance, but pressing home its every advantage has added tremendously to our economic burdens. And while production still lags far behind the country's requirements, although one concession after another has been made until wages are now at fabulous figures, labor is not yet ready to abandon its campaign of aggression and go to work in earnest.

Hereafter it will be "milk cow" and not "milk cow"—at least so far as the U. S. Department of Agriculture is concerned.
This decision marks the termination of a controversy in which etymologists in the department have had not a little interest. Those depending "milk" have pointed to scriptural use and certain Bible classics as establishing precedents, while the opposition has contended that dairymen, ranchmen, and farmers in general use "milk" instead of "milk" almost universally. The advocates of "milk" also favored that word because, they contended, it was more strictly an English word, while "milk" was Latin in origin. Since Americanization of language as well as idealism is an article in every patriot's creed, it is thought that this last ally of the "milk" defenders helped as much as any to decide the question in their favor.

WAR ON PROFITEERS NOT MODERN MOVE

Gunning for This Species Said by Geographic Society to Be Ancient Practice.
Washington.—Profiteering in food and high wage demands by labor are far from being ultra modern problems. Ancient Egypt thrived its profiteers in the market places, and medieval England passed maximum wage laws, according to a communication by Paul A. Graves to the National Geographic society, which says:
"Following the devastation of the Black Death in England in 1348-1349, cultivation of the fields was utterly impossible, and there were not even enough able-bodied laborers to gather in the crops which had matured. Cattle roamed through the corn un-molested and the harvest rotted where it stood."
"Out of the situation which resulted from the impoverishment of the labor resources of the kingdom grew the first great class in England between capital and labor. The peasants became masters of the situation. In some instances they demanded double wages, and whereas formerly land-owners had paid one-twelfth of every quarter of what as the harvesting wage, they were now forced to pay one-eighth."
"Parliament hurriedly passed drastic laws in an effort to meet the new condition. Statutes provided that 'every man or woman, bond or free, able in body and within the age of threescore years, not having his own wherof he may live, nor land of his own about which he may occupy himself, and not serving any other, shall be bound to serve the employer who shall require him to do so, provided that the lord of any bondman or land servant shall be preferred before other for his service; that such sergents shall take their wages which were customarily given in 1347 (the year prior to the first appearance of the plague)."
"Violations of the statute meant imprisonment; and it was further provided that any reaper, mower or workman leaving service should be imprisoned. If workers demanded more than the regulation wage, they were to be fined double, and the land owner who paid more than the prescribed sum was to be fined treble that amount. Runaway laborers were to be branded with an 'F' as a perpetual sign of their falsity. No bail was to be accepted for any of these labor offenses."
"The first ordinance in English history, designed to curb the greed of the middlemen, was passed nearly a century earlier (in 1258), when there was a bountiful harvest, but destructive plagues caused the heavy crops to rot in the fields."
"But England did not originate food control. A law Nihil in 967 A. D. resulted in a famine the following year, which swept away 600,000 people in and vicinity of the city of Fustat. G'awhar, a Mohammedan Joseph, founded a new city (the Cairo of today) a short distance from the stricken town and immediately organized relief measures."
"The Caliph Mo'tas lent every assistance to his lieutenant, sending many ships laden with grain; but the price of bread still remained high, and G'awhar, being a food controller who had no patience with persuasive methods, ordered his soldiers to seize all the millstones and grain dealers and fling them in the public market place. The administrator, then established central grain depots and corn was sold throughout the two years of the famine under the eyes of a government inspector."

Mr. J. H. Patrick Gets Emblem.

The first group of official emblems for South Carolina farmers which have joined the National "Better Sires—Better Stock" crusade has been received from the United States Department of Agriculture and mailed out to farmers by the Extension Service of Clemson College. There are fifty-four names on this section of the breeder's honor roll, and it is expected that many other names will be added rapidly in the near future. The emblem is granted jointly by the Department of Agriculture and Clemson College to any farmer or breeder who declares that only pure bred sires are used, not necessarily owned, on his farm. It contains name, address, date and number of enrollment, and is attractively engraved.

Mr. J. H. Patrick, of White Oak, who is well known in Chester, was among those who received an emblem. The News regrets that no emblem from Chester county has yet made application for an official emblem and hoped that a number from this county will join the "Better Sires—Better Stock" crusade.

Negro Killed By Another.

John Mobley, colored, was shot and almost instantly killed last Tuesday evening by Ben Craig, also colored, the tragedy occurring on the farm of Mr. Ike Hicklin in the Knox station neighborhood. Craig used a single-barreled shot gun, the lead striking Mobley in the lower part of the stomach.

The inquest was held Wednesday afternoon by Magistrate James R. Reid, the jury returning a verdict that the deceased came to his death from gunshot wounds inflicted at the hands of Ben Craig.

From information obtainable it seems that Craig and a woman, Marie Baker, with whom he lived, had a quarrel and she left home. Craig walked up on the and Mobley in the public road and fired on Mobley, inflicting the wound from which he died within a few minutes. It is stated that Craig also fired on the woman as she was fleeing but the shot was without effect.

Craig fled immediately after the shooting and although Sheriff Anderson and Deputy Howze searched the area shortly after the killing, Craig managed to elude the officers and when last heard of was in the neighborhood of Rock Hill. Officers in various sections have been notified and are on the look-out for Craig.

Death of Mr. W. H. Traylor.

Leeds, April 28.—William Henry Traylor of Fairfield county died at 1:45 o'clock Sunday afternoon in the 74th year of his age. For about two and one-half years he had been in failing health.

He was a Confederate veteran; having joined the Sixth South Carolina, Bratton's brigade, Field division, Company H, when about 18 years of age, and served during the war.

Mr. Traylor was a member of God Branch Baptist church. He loved his church and was held in high esteem by his brethren.

Burial services were held at Beaver Creek church on Monday afternoon, conducted by his pastor, the Rev. E. D. Wells.

The deceased is survived by one brother, Thomas William Traylor, of White Oak, and one sister, Mrs. Mary Francis Carter, Shelton, R. F. D. 2.

Besides his widow he leaves the following children: Mrs. George W. Wood, Abbeville; Mrs. W. H. Stevenson, Leeds, R. F. D. 2; Mrs. J. B. Stewart, Shelton, R. F. D. 2; and Thomas C. Traylor and Charlie Medow Traylor, Shelton, R. F. D. 2.

Battery Dependability

The war proved conclusively the great importance of the motor car. It also proved the importance of the starting and lighting battery. On a vast number of cars used by American officers in the field of operations the "Exide" Starting & Lighting Battery was used as the power supply for automobile starting and lighting.

The "Exide" will serve you just as faithfully as it served the United States Government in time of war. Made by the largest maker of storage batteries in the world, the "Exide" Battery represents the last word in storage battery design and manufacture. The "Exide" costs most to make, but least to use. Come in and let us show you why the "Exide" that is made to meet the specific demands of your starting and lighting is the right battery for your car.

Swift & Company Does Not Control Its Raw Material

Other industries can buy their raw materials according to need or judgment, and set a selling price. They need manufacture only what they can sell at their price.

Cotton, wool, wheat, lumber, iron, steel, and other non-perishables, can be held either by their producers or their users until needed.

But livestock comes to market every day in fluctuating quantities from scattered sources, wholly uncontrolled and at times without regard to market needs.

An immediate outlet must be found for the perishable products, at whatever price, as only a very small proportion can be stored.

No one can foresee or stipulate what they shall bring; prices must fluctuate from day to day to insure keeping the market clear.

Only the most exacting care of every detail of distribution enables Swift & Company to make the small profit from all sources of a fraction of a cent per pound, necessary for it to continue to obtain capital and maintain operations.

SECURES NEEDED HELP
Apparatus Growers' Association Gets Recognition
Williston, April 28.—The fact that the South Carolina Apparatus Growers association is organized has been of great benefit to them in the past, but especially to this season.

The South Carolina Apparatus Association was recognized by the railroads in the recent strike, enabling a way that would be impossible in dealing with individuals. Immediately after the embargo was declared the association sent a delegation along with a delegation from the North American Fruit exchange and a representative of the Southern railway to Philadelphia to confer with the traffic manager of the Pennsylvania railroad and secure permits for ten refrigerator cars, enabling them to place two at each of the important shipping points in South Carolina—Williston, Hattiesville, Blount, Ridge Spring and Trenton. Before these cars were exhausted the embargo was lifted and the association was able to handle the apparatus in the usual efficient and satisfactory way.

The Sweet Ointment of Appreciation.

The value of appreciation is far from being correctly measured by the majority of persons. Too often we simply say "Thank you" in acknowledgment of some good deed done for us when instead we should strive by every possible means to show just how much that good deed means to us so easy to take for granted the kind feelings of others for us when if we only knew it we really discover the extent of their charity. Particularly in this time of our treatment of older persons. In some ways the present generation seems to have missed the happiness that springs from a proper appreciation of our elders, but very probably every generation throughout the ages has fallen in some way in this regard. The man who has had his day, we argue, should be satisfied to step aside and give others a chance, but we realize that as long as a spark of ambition burns in the human breast no one can become reconciled to be merely a looker-on at events as they transpire. Men and women everywhere are sacrificing much in order to give their children the chance the latter demand, and the sacrifice, we feel, is not made without a hard wrench. No one wants to step aside unless he is forced to do so, well knowing that such action means the final renunciation of all the hopes and ambitions he has clung to throughout the years.

"All of my life I have wanted to do something worth while and I haven't," writes a father of today in a recent communication to his daughter. "It seems the first of my life have all ways been blanked. What a tragedy is here glimpsed in these simple words! How pitiful that no opportunity has been afforded, nor ever will be afforded now of achieving his wish to go what compensation he can from the works and deeds of his children, making himself believe that in their success he will attain at least a shadow of the gratification he yearned for on his own account. But the fires of his life never died out. He completely is one being for which he has much to be thankful, for many men in his position would have given up the game long before. That the lesson he unconsciously taught the daughter to whom he wrote is being learned well and thoroughly is demonstrated in the fact that today she is beginning to appreciate and is not afraid to acknowledge it, the noble heritage that has come to her from that father. She is seeing him in a different way from that in which she has been accustomed to regard him throughout her life. He is the same father, to be sure, but she has now glimpsed certain great depths that she had not dreamed existed, and like the good son or daughter she has determined to live up to the fine spirit of the noble self-sacrifice, the unhesitating renunciations he has been forced to make in order to give her the chance she craved where he believes he has failed.

The heights are always just before us. We are eager to reach them and some of us seem weighed down by the impression that we are the first to attempt the ascent. What do we know of the bitter failures, the sudden disappointments, the hidden sorrows of those whom experience shows us have made the same attempt many times before we unconsciously push them out of the way? What do we know of the hard knocks that life has administered to those noble fathers and mothers who in their day went through the same experiences that some of us are today going through for the first time, only to go down in defeat? What do we know of their pitiful life tragedies, their burnt offerings in the altar of self-renunciation in order that we may have the chance they missed? Are we appreciative of what they have done for us? Are we ready to acknowledge to them by word of mouth the debt we owe them? Let us turn these things over in our minds and see for ourselves just what they mean to them. They have done much for us in their time; are we doing anything for them now that we have told them over and over they must make room for us? A little appreciation goes a long way in this world to make things easier and sweeter. Often it acts as a sweet ointment to rub on wounds that reach deep down into lives that have made heroic sacrifices apparent as a sweet ointment to rub on wounds that reach deep down into lives that have made heroic sacrifices apparent as a sweet ointment to rub on wounds that reach deep down into lives that have made heroic sacrifices apparent.

us, not in the hasty, matter-of-course way in which so many of us make our acknowledgments, but in that earnest, sincere, lovable manner, which floods with light the heart that has long forgotten to expect true appreciation.

In Boston, Green & Sweet Co. watched the Miller records for some hundreds of large cars. They found that Miller increased the former tire mileage from 50% to 75%. They eliminated blow-outs and saved each tire in each 1,000 proved disappointing to the users.

$1,000 Daily To Reduce Your Tire Cost

The Miller Tire mileage, now discussed every where, is not an accident. Over $1,000 daily is spent in tests and inspections. Fifty inspectors guard against defects.

Every lot of tread stock is first vulcanized and tested in the laboratory.

Over 1,000 tires yearly are worn out in factory mileage tests.

Every tire is signed by maker and inspector, and both are penalized if a tire falls down.

Highly-paid experts spend their years in making betterments.

Miller cords last year averaged 15,000 miles.

The new Miller treads, in these tests, outwear the best of others by 25%.

Defective Miller Tires are a rarity. Some large Miller dealers last year had not a single adjustment.

If you don't know where to buy these new Miller tires you should find them out. They are saving millions of dollars to motorists.

Get one and watch it. It will give you new conceptions of a modern tire.

Mark the results

RALPH PARLETTE

"Human Efficiency" will be the lecture topic of Ralph Parlette, well known writer, editor and orator who will appear here on the last night of the Big Republic Chautauque.

"Human Efficiency" has a vital ferent, when you try to order a sandwich and a cup of coffee in a dining car and are treated by the waiter as if you were an intruding hobo, when you modestly desire to enjoy the blessings of civilization and pay for just what you get, no more no less, thus retaining your self-respect, and find yourself classed as a sining, poor relation to the body politic, you may know that the spoliars have passed that way, and spread their corrupting mites on hobo boys, waiters, clerks, storekeepers, taxi-drivers, servant girls, doctors, lawyers, preachers, and—oh what's the use!

Ralph Parlette has lectured in over five thousand cities in the past twenty-five years. He is known wherever the Chautauque is known. He is the editor of the Lyceum Magazine. He makes you laugh, then think. Next day you think some more about it and you get a new cheer to live.
