Chapa elected

By KATHY SNEAD
TJ staff writer

Donna Chapa was elected SGA President by 96 votes in the March 6 run-off against Nigal Vidale. Chapa is a first semester senior and Model U.N. X student coordinator. Chapa said through the experience of the campaign she finally realized how important elections are. In the run-off for attorney general Richard Golden defeated Craig Wilkinson by 261 votes. For junior class president, Stephen Johnson received 149 votes and defeated Adam Sherrill who received 118 votes. More than 189 votes were cast in the run-off than in the first election.

Famous author to speak

By TOM STAEMNS
TJ staff writer

Award winning author John Edgar Wideman will speak at Winthrop College on Wednesday, March 26. He will give two lectures: one in the Baruch Room at Jeyes Center at 12:30 p.m. and one in the Recital Hall at 7:30 p.m.

The next membership drive will be held in Columbia on April 12. According to President Iris Boyd, the convention is open to all members. At this time, the organization is not financially able to pay for members to attend. Those wishing to attend will be required to pay their own fee.

Senate passes NAACP charter

By KATHY SNEAD
TJ staff writer

The Charter for Winthrop's chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People was passed unanimously by senate Tuesday night. The NAACP is a non-profit organization whose goals and purposes, as stated in its charter, include "the elimination of racial prejudice and (to) take lawful action to secure its elimination."

"It's good for the school because of its main purpose. It's a positive step toward more unity all over campus," said Donna Chapa, McLaughlin senator and SGA president.

"I think that's a good thing and it has now gained strength. I'm looking forward to what we can do."

The public will be considered a Division I organization and will request the same type of funding received by The Anthology from the Student Allocations Committee.

NAACP schedules projects

By A. GISELE CHICK
TJ staff writer

The Winthrop Chapter of the National Association for theAdvancement of Colored People has begun plans for future activities both on campus and across the country.

On March 27-29, the Regional Convention for the NAACP will be held at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Knoxville, Tenn.

According to President Iris Boyd, the convention is open to all members. At this time, the organization is not financially able to pay for members to attend. Those wishing to attend will be required to pay their own fee.

The state NAACP meeting will be held in Columbia on April 12. According to adviser Mollie Newberry, any members wishing to attend the meeting will be provided with transportation for the day.

On April 12, the NAACP will hold a car wash to raise funds for the treasury. Beginning March 31, the association will hold a raffle for a steak dinner. The ticket tickets will be $1. The Association plans to hold bi-monthly membership drives. The next membership drive will be held April 9-11 in Dinkins and in the cafeteria lobby of East Thomson.

"You are all in an ideal position at this time. Dr. Newberry is someone who is willing to listen to your suggestions," Jones said.

Jones recommended the association make a list of suggestions that will be taken to Newberry. Jones also emphasized that the NAACP should put pressure on elected officials of the college and community.

"We put these people into their respective positions, directly or indirectly, and if they aren't willing to listen to our grievances, then they can just as easily be removed," Jones said.
Should Epicure be replaced?

By RANDY FIRESTONE

The biggest complaint by students at most colleges and universities may not be the grades they receive, but rather the food in their respective cafeterias. Winthrop College is no exception.

This spring, the food service contract at Winthrop, which is worth nearly $1,000,000 in sales, will come up for renewal. The contract is currently held by Epicure Management Systems, Inc.

What are the procedures that Winthrop must follow to secure a contract with a food service?

What must the food services do to keep the students happy? Is there anything the students can do and if so, what are they?

The contract process is mandated by law for state agencies. According to state law, the college is a state agency and must get at least three bids if the contract is to exceed $1,500.

“We [Winthrop College] have to follow exactly what the state lays out for us in the regulations,” said Jeff Mann, vice president of student development.

“We are trying to do is give the students the best possible food plans without costing the college an arm and a leg.”

“Of course you can’t please all of the time, but we think we are giving them the best choice,” said Mann.

Food service bids are solicited by Winthrop for the contract and as stated in the bid regulations, Winthrop need only take the least expensive.

Food services that have already expressed interest in the Winthrop contract include ARA Co., Aladin Food Service, The Canteen Co., and Serv-O-Matic.

John Presto, vice president for administrative services, said contract proposals will go out to the various food services March 5 and are due back one month later.

“Our specifications call for the meal plan type of food system,” said Presto. “Anything else such as a buffet or a la carte plan would be too much cost for the students.”

Epicure has also expressed an interest in retaining the food contract it has with Winthrop. “We have a lot of services to offer students. We try to please as many as the students as we can,” said Epicure Manager John Simpson.

All school officials are interested in giving students the cheapest meal plan possible. Students living in dormitories are required by Winthrop to purchase a meal plan. This is in the form of either a 10, 15 or 21 meal plan.

Epicure has other plans that students don’t know about. For example, a person on a 10 meal plan can also purchase a $25 card to use at the snack bar in the student center. This card is used as an a la carte supplement to the meal plan and adds variety to student meals.

We also have plans available to day students that are separate from the regular meal plan,” said Simpson.

These plans have always been available to the students, but the students that are dissatisfied with their current plan fail to inquire about these alternatives.

While always hearing about how awful the food is, a majority of students interviewed agree that they can’t eat anywhere, as much as they want, for as little they pay. “I think it comes down to about $1.10. $1.20 per meal,” said Barry Price, Richardson R.A. “That’s cheap for all you can eat-style.”

Epicure is the only state supported school that offers the continuous feeding system,” said Simpson, “with all of the extras thrown in, such as the salad bar, ice cream stand, and the cereal bar.”

“We and try to get the students’ input as much as possible. We send out questionnaires, surveys and personally talk to students about what they want changed or improved.”

“They said they wanted low calorie dressing on the salad bar and we put it there. They wanted it.”

SBA receives donation

By LINDA DAY

Springs Industries of Fort Mill is donating $500,000 to Winthrop's School of Business Administration. In accordance to Robert Thompson, a Springs executive, the pledge was announced a year ago. The first part of the gift, a check for $100,000 was given to Winthrop's interim president, Dr. Mark Newberry from Walter Elsasa, chairman of the board at Springs Industries. The balance of the donation will be paid in increments over the next four years.

Thompson stated that the gift is a result of the long association between Springs and Winthrop.

“It is also giving us the potential for a stronger relationship during Winthrop's time of transition,” he said.

Winthrop College Office of Admissions will host its semi-annual Winthrop Day, Saturday, April 5, to high school students interested in attending Winthrop.

Winthrop Day, according to Lynn White of the Admissions Office, is hosted each spring and fall semester as an opportunity for prospective students and their families to visit campus and acquire more information about Winthrop.

“We sent about 6,000 invitations to students who have expressed an interest in Winthrop,” said White, “and we are expecting over 700 of these students to attend the program Saturday.”

Included in the program will be tours of the main campus and lake area, a complimentary lunch in Thomson cafeteria, and a view of a typical student dormitory room.

First safety week sponsored

By LYNN Burke

The Resident Life Staff at Winthrop College sponsored its first Safety Week March 3-7. The program was spearheaded by Cynthia Cassens, associate dean of residence life, several other housing members, and public safety staff members.

According to Cassens this idea was designed to get attention and increase student awareness of personal safety on campus.

Residence Life staff members placed “Never Walk Alone” posters around campus and paper tray mats in the cafeteria as a warning of fire hazards resulting from overloaded sockets.

“Gotcha Day” proved successful according to Cassens.

Resident assistants checked every room for unlocked doors. When one was found, they placed a “Gotcha” sticker on the door to warn other students that their belongings could have easily been stolen.

“I feel that the program should be continued because of the favorable responses received and because it was a success,” Cassens said.

1986, was a drive for the Hunger Fund in which some $71 in pledges. It was a mile run and Connor made her best time ever finishing in 1002. "I wasn't the last one to finish either," she said with a smile.

Asked what motivated her to start running, Connor said that her brother convinced her that she should do something. He told her that if he could do it, she could do it too. It's a family activity, and Connor didn't want to be left out.

The 21-year-old special education major at Winthrop trains for road races by running four to six days a week around Winthrop College's campus and nearby streets. She runs about two and a half miles a day or averages 12.15 miles per week.

Connor estimated participating in 15-20 road races over the past couple of years. "And I finished them all," she said, noting that the longest road race in which she has participated was a 5K (5 kilometers) or 3.1 miles.

"I run for the recreation and to stay healthy," Connor said.

At Winthrop, she has maintained a grade point average of 3.0. Her plans are to graduate with special education. She prefers working with the handicapped. "It would be so self satisfying," she said.

Connor said people treated her differently when she was younger by making "cat calls" at her and picking about her condition. "It was hard, but I finally learned to deal with them," she said. Even today, Connor said people still treat her differently when she was growing up. "Mom insisted on people doing things for me," she said. "If she wanted something done, she would tell me to do it just like she told my brother. Of course, I had my limits."

Connor said that she was glad her parents raised her like they did. "People thought I had a bad family because they didn’t treat me as an exception. They were wrong," she said.

Her family was not the only group to treat her like other kids. "I was mainstreamed all the way through school. I wasn't sorted out or put in special classes."

"I ran for the recreation and to stay healthy," Connor said. Other hobbies include reading, working with the Newman Community at Winthrop College, and collecting baseball cards.

"Missed the whole year," she said. "It was kind of a bad attitude about a handicap."

Connor, a sophomore at Winthrop College from Mauldin, S.C., has been a victim of cerebral palsy for 21 years. Doctors told her at a young age that she would spend most of her life in a wheelchair. Connor said she just laughed at them. You can’t be the power of the human spirit, and I’ve got the power. I amaze the doctors every time I go back for a visit.” Even though she walks with the assistance of hand-held braces, she hasn’t let her condition slow her down.

Running is one of her hobbies. Her latest road race, Feb. 1, was a drive for the Hunger Fund which some $71 in pledges. It was a mile run and Connor made her best time ever finishing in 1002. "I wasn’t the last one to finish either," she said with a smile.

TJ, the students' paper
SGA control unethical

By LISA BUÉ
TJ editor

What constitutes a free society?

Some say free elections and a government that is held accountable to the people. What keeps the government accountable? According to decisions of the United States Supreme Court, it is the job of the press to provide robust and open debate so that people will constantly evaluate the officials they entrust. In a democracy, that debate should not be controlled by the government.

The same is true at Winthrop College. A college newspaper's role is to provide open debate so that students can evaluate the officials they entrust. Unfortunately, some SGA members are either too ignorant or too unethical to see this.

Before publications editors were selected on March 2, a vacancy on the student publications board was discovered. It was SGA President Brett Smith's responsibility to fill that space. Realizing minority students' recent concern over being shut out of college participation, Smith could have displayed true statesmanship and seen to it that Winthrop's black community was represented on a very important committee. However, Smith chose to ignore them and appointed Barry Cubbage, a member of his own fraternity, Pi Kappa Alpha, to the board.

As a result, so minorities are misrepresented on the board of student publications. This is inexcusable.

Although on the surface the appointment may seem trivial, Smith and several SGA members wrote letters to the board of publications endorsing a candidate for the position of editor-in-chief.

Since student publication guidelines do not allow the paper to endorse SGA candidates for office, it is especially wrong for the student government to make it their business to interfere in the newspaper's internal affairs.

The ethics of Smith's actions should definitely be questioned. Any right-thinking person realizes the danger of interference. Meddling may seem insignificant, but to think where it will or will not stop is frightening.

It is hoped that Donna Chapa, SGA president-elect, will recognize the importance of open debate in a democracy and refuse to engage in such practices.

If Smith and some of his cronies could have their way, The Johnsonian would be nothing but a propaganda sheet full of articles and editorials similar to those written in Orwell's ironically named "Ministry of Truth." Without a free press, a government is free to oppress.

Jokes not funny

By ALLAN C. JENKINS
TJ contributing editor

The week after spring break is a difficult time for contributing editors—Brett Smith hasn't done anything objectionable, Mark Newberry is still keeping a low profile, Martha Piper isn't even here yet, the board of trustees hasn't had anything to debate, the newly elected Ms. Chapa hasn't misstepped anywhere... so what is there to rave about?

Looking over my past columns, I realized I may have made a few misjudgments. First of all, when I characterized the student body as being apathetic, it's possible I was on thin ice. How could the student body be apathetic when just over a quarter of that group voted in the SGA elections? If the student body was really apathetic, only 20 percent would have come out to vote.

If the student body was really apathetic, nobody would be upset about Reagan's "I'm a Contra" speech. I know the students are not apathetic because when I've asked students about the speech, four of them said they "had heard about it." That isn't apathy, folks.

Naturally, I decided the worst thing about Winthrop this week is the disgusting perpendurion of "space shuttle" jokes. Here are just a few that I've been subjected to this week:

1. Q. Where did Christa McAuliffe go on her spring vacation? A. All over the Bahamas.
2. Q. What was Christa McAuliffe's favorite TV show? A. "Lost in Space".
3. Q. When is the next shuttle launch scheduled? A. The Fourth of July.
4. Q. What does NASA stand for? A. Need Another Seven Astronauts?
5. Q. Why did the school board have to fire Christa McAuliffe? A. She kept blowing up in front of her kids.
6. Q. What was the last transmission received from the Challenger? A. Not! I said, "But Light!"

My stomach has been turning since I heard the first of these jokes, and I am sure most of my readership will agree that Winthrop can only gain a bad reputation if it continues to produce such "jokes" that can only pass for comedy.

Rock Hudson had to die before they quit telling jokes about him.

Students (and I mean students everywhere, not just at Winthrop) should show a modicum of respect for tragedies that tug at the national heartstrings.

Face it, last semester you couldn't go 10 steps without hearing a famine joke. Where does it all end?
Letters to the editor —

Deadline

Dear Editor:

FEBRUARY 26 Deadline for applications for editor positions of Winthrop College student publications: i.e. The Taller, The Anthology and The Johnsonian.

Lisa, why was this not publicized before Feb. 24? The Johnsonian is the most widely read student publication at Winthrop College. You and the rest of The Johnsonian staff have a responsibility to your readers, which is: YOU MUST HOLD UP A MIRROR TO THE COLLEGE SOCIETY; THAT MIRROR MUST HAVE NO CURVES AND IT SHOULD BE HELD WITH A STEADY HAND.

The only two people to apply for the editor's position were you, Ms. Buie and Brad W. Godfrey. Many students, including myself wrote letters to Dr. Morgan and the publications board to convey our concern over the selection of the editor of The Johnsonian. They saw it not to take the advice that we offered them. I, as many others, hope the publications board made the correct decision for Winthrop College, and most importantly, for the STUDENTS.

I sincerely hope that The Johnsonian starts living up to its billing as the student newspaper. There is a need for better coverage of minority events, Greek happenings and many other activities that do not get a fair shake in The Johnsonian.

Since you have been re-appointed editor of The Johnsonian I hope that things will change. If the policies of the editorial staff do not change concerning student "apathy," misrepresentation of the college and overlooking certain areas of student society, I and many others will continue to voice our opinions with letters just like this one.

Concerned,
Barry G. Newkirk

Editor's note: According to the guidelines of the publications, only people in the following positions are eligible to apply for TJ editor: editor-in-chief, managing editor, news editor, advertising manager, photo editor, or features editor. These guidelines have been established for years and were passed by the voting members of the board. TJ editor has no voice in the matter.

The deadline for applications was announced to all eligible students at TJ's Feb. 18 staff meeting at 8 p.m. One candidate did not meet the eligibility requirements but the board even waived the requirement for him and allowed him to seek the positions although the guidelines state that such waivers will be used infrequently.

Lodge

Dear Editor,

Winthrop Lodge residents are having some problems lately. These problems all relate to crime.

A person's car was recently broken into and a radar detector was taken. The window was completely broken out and the car was parked right across from the Lodge office.

Students continually cruise through the parking lot and harrass the residents, mostly the female residents.

The fire alarm was recently pulled by a whole group of people and no one was caught.

The main reason behind this problem is Public Safety's nonchalant attitude about this matter. The only time they're at the Lodge is during the week when it is crowded. But never on weekends when very few people are here, making cars, rooms, or Lodge itself an easy target for criminals.

When the fire alarm was set off, it took Public Safety 15 minutes to get here. I wonder how that could have helped the residents if someone was being robbed or assaulted? You tell me!

Since the Lodge is basically off campus, it is logical to me that we should be getting more than adequate protection from Public Safety. However, the only time they come out here is when an officer deems it necessary.

Do we have to wait until someone is seriously injured, molested, or raped before Public Safety deems it necessary to show up?

We need a police force that will offer us some degree of protection, rather than placing emphasis on writing tickets and making money off the students who pay their salary to begin with.

I believe a college education is a privilege and is not to be taken for granted. Even so, some of that tuition money should be allocated to a police force that will protect the students rather than nickel and dime them to death with tickets.

Richard Stamey

Racism

Dear Editor,

I think everyone is making too big a deal about these so-called racist acts. In last week's Johnsonian there were four articles and four editorials written on racism. The article "Fight the Racists" by Mr. Jenkins was filled with racism and hatred. He wants us to fight when we should all just cool it. Saying such things as, "fighting tooth and nail," vigorously prosecuted and expelled... soldiers in the war... isn't going to help the situation. Whose to say a white person wrote the vandalism on the poster? They said that there were no witnesses. Who's really to say who did it? Blaming people and fighting never helps a situation.

Mikels joins staff

Ron Mikels has been named assistant basketball coach at Winthrop College. Mikels was named head coach at Greensboro College. Mikels was at Greensboro College for the past seven campaigns. In his first season he was an assistant to Vacendak, and when he left for Duke. He was in the head coaching position. His overall record at Greensboro is 78-85, with his finest season being the 1984-85 campaign. That year he led Greensboro to a mark of 28-7, including a record of 12-2 in the Dixie Conference.

His club made the NCAA Division III play-offs, finishing third in the South regional.

Webb graduated from Heritage High School in Richmond, Va., and later earned his undergraduate degree in pre-medical education from the University of South Carolina. He is a member of the Eagle Club Board of Directors, and in 1983 he was awarded the Golden Eagle Award for his outstanding help in promoting athletic events during the 1983-84 school year. He enjoys golf, painting, and recreational sports.
Basketball season ends

By TODD HUTCHISON
TJ sports writer

Six months ago Winthrop opened up its 1985-86 men's basketball season with many new faces and changes.

The team retained the same coaching staff with Niel Gordon as head coach and also included six new team members. Other changes included Steve Vacendak taking over as athletic director and the season marking the last in Gordon's career.

The season opened on Nov. 22 with Winthrop participating in the WBTV Carolina Classic. The Eagles opened with three wins before losing in the finals on a shot with five seconds left. They prevailed over Wingate (94-67), Johnson C. Smith (89-87), and Fred McKinnon jumper with time running out, and Belmont Abbey (77-65). The Eagles lost in the finals to the Pfeiffer Falcons (85-66). In the tournament McKinnon was named tournament MVP, while Allen Washington also was named to the tournament team.

The Eagles then took on Morris in a game that turned out to be an assault on the record books. The Eagles established team records in points (132), scoring margin (89), field goals made (70), while also tying the steals record with 21.

McKinnon, personally established school records for points (40), field goals made (29), and field goals attempted (31).

The next game saw Winthrop continue its winning ways as the team defeated Piedmont 90-83. In this game Washington lost yet another school record by grabbing 23 rebounds.

The team defeated Newberry (81-61), host to Appalachian State (69-61), lost to Coastal Carolina (86-84), and lost to East Carolina (77-69) to end the sixth season of the schedule 6-4.

The Eagles opened the '86 season by losing to Presbyterian (64-57). The Eagles then bounced back to defeat Longwood (68-60). Pembroke State was next to taste defeat at the Eagles' claws 102-99 in double overtime. The team then lost to Armstrong State 76-75.

The Eagles then went on a four-game winning streak. Along the way Winthrop defeated Newberry (71-54); Central Wesleyan (91-66); Allen (72-54); and Benedict (96-72). The Eagles ended the streak with an overall record of 12-6. The Eagles then ripped off a two-game season-high streak by dropping games to Longwood (67-88) and UNC Asheville (69-60).

Winthrop then traveled to Redford for the first ever victory on the road against a NCAA Division I opponent as they defeated the Highlanders points (40), field goals made (29), and field goals attempted (31).

The Eagles went on to win their next two games as they defeated Armstrong State 90-83, and will be at advantage," said Carvalho. Bart A tag team match features All-American and ACC Player of the Year in 1986, and was recently named to the Duke University Hall of Fame.

Vacendak came to Winthrop from Durham last June, where he served as Duke's associate athletic director since 1980. His only previous experience as head basketball coach was in 1979, when he coached at NCAA Division III Greensboro College.

Vacendak's long-term goal for Winthrop is greater visibility.

Eagle tennis-ready to win

By JILL ZEGLER
TJ sports writer

The Winthrop tennis season is finally in full swing, and the players have hit their stride and competition these past few weeks.

The women currently have a conference record of 9-1, and an overall record of 46-6. Head Coach Carvalho is pleased with the women's performance. "They are playing good tennis," he said.

They have been hurt, however, in the number of players they have. Player Hazel Turner is out due to an injury, and the team has been playing with just five players. They have been forced to automatically lose two matches (one single and one double) to their competition because of this.

Said Team Captain Chris Willoughby, "So far, the team has really held their own, even with only five players." Despite future tough matches against schools like Furman and Lander, Willoughby predicts a lot of wins for the Eagles.

Carvalho also feels that the women are holding up well. "In fact," he said, "we've had some of the matches we had predicted." He also shares the team's optimism about future matches. So far, most of the matches have been scheduled away, but from now on, the team will have the opportunity to play on their home court.

"Playing on our own courts will be a big advantage," said Carvalho.

Vacendak pushes in new era of basketball

By MARK BIESECKER
TJ sports writer

Winthrop College Athletic Director Steve Vacendak has replaced Niel Gordon as head men's basketball team. Interim President Mark Berry made the official announcement on March 6.

This second time Vacendak has replaced Gordon who, with a retired, at a Winthrop match, was named as the new athletic director last June.

Speaking to a press conference in the Eagle Room of the Coliseum, Vacendak said he had people who wanted to fill.

"And I'm talking about more than his shoe size," he said of Gordon, who wears a size 13. "I'd like to thank you, Vacendak said looking towards Gordon, "this athletic program is a great testimony to what you have done."

Vacendak came to Winthrop from Newberry College in 1975. He compiled a 160-80 career record here, with 20 or more victories five times. His best year was in 1980, when the Eagles finished at 31-5. In his final year, that we're a Division One school," Vacendak said. "Winthrop can appeal... we're not at a disadvantage once the word gets out."

Vacendak's immediate priority is recruiting, which he is doing with Billie Mims, an assistant coach under Gordon for the past three years, will stay on for another year. They play to concentrate their recruiting efforts in the Southeast, particularly in South Carolina.

"Everyone must understand that we're a Division One school," Vacendak said. "Win- thrope people to hold the hooper to a 20-9 record, and then our recruiting will get an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament, over a program that moves from Vacendak said.

"In June, we (Winthrop, next year. The Eagles will play Coastal Carolina, UNC-25 Division I basketball teams, Asheville, and Armstrong State) one-third of these at home, will petition the NCAA. It will George Dunlap, head of the Selection Committee, for the automatic bid," received 160 applications from (1989) across the U.S. Vacendak's By Sept. 1, the NCAA will selection was based on his out- standing past record.

Tuition to jump seven percent

(CPS)- Stanford’s trustees last week said they were raising tuition next year by “only” seven percent. Iowa’s tuition, regents announced last month, will rise by 6.5 percent. Duke students will shoulder an 11 percent hike. While California public college students will pay 7.5 percent more next year.

In coming weeks, colleges from coast to coast will be announcing tuition hikes for next year. And in spite of a booming economy and a lower general inflation rate, the increases apparently won’t be minor. In all, students’ total college costs are due to rise an average five-to-six percent next year, an American Council on Education (ACE) report released last week forecasts.

And a group of economists studying what makes tuition go up or down says students are in for more of the same big tuition hikes beyond next school year, regardless of how healthy the national economy may be.

College costs for the 1985-86 school year are an average of seven percent higher than last year, while the Consumer Price Index—the national inflation rate—is only 3.8 percent higher.

Perhaps most consequential for students, experts agree, is that students—not governments or aid programs—will pay a bigger share of those higher costs. “State legislatures would rather have students pay higher tuition than raise taxes” to help colleges meet their higher costs, says Cathy Henderson, an education consultant who authored the new ACE report.

Rule change could hurt financial aid

(CPS)- The U.S. Department of Education issued tough new proposals last week that would cut off or reduce National Direct Student Loan money at 1,501 campuses. The proposed rules lower the acceptable default rate for schools eligible for new NDSL money, tighten the definition of a defaulted loan and eliminate the appeals process now available for schools that have high default rates.

The department also proposed to base former students’ payments on their ability to pay, as well as the amount owed. Presently, repayment depends solely on the loan amount. Colleges themselves administer NDSL programs, collect loan payments and recycle them to new loan applicants.

Many institutions, however, may be trapped in “ineligible” status for at least two years, no matter what they do to correct defaults, some educators say. “In essence, they’ve shut several doors on us at once,” says David McDermott, controller at Metropolitan State College in Denver and author of a national study on the NDSL program.

McDermott’s study found direct loan defaults on the decline, down to 8.93 percent in 1984 from 11.9 percent in 1979. Because the program is retroactive, money for next year is based on default rates in previous years. And deadlines for putting bad debts to the government—which will collect loans for schools—and for filing appeals have passed.

The federal government contributes new money for lending according to the number of schools making and how well they collect old loans.

The new regulations, which may go into effect this June, aim to get schools into lowering their NDSL default rates. This is taxpayers’ money,” says Sharon Messinger, spokeswoman for the Education Dept. “There’s $5 billion in default right now. That’s a $1 billion cost each year to taxpayers.”

If they don’t lower their default rates, Messinger says, some schools will be ineligible to get more money to loan out next seven percent before the end of the decade,” she says. “Salaries have a lot of catching up to do.”

Schools generally stand granting real salary increases for faculty and staffers during the last decade.

But giving people raises has an enormous impact on the cost of higher education, Henderson says, because salaries constitute between 65 and 75 percent of most colleges’ budgets.

Moreover, more than half the buildings on U.S. campuses are 25 years or older, and are badly in need of repair, according to testimony given to a House committee last year.

“We’re not talking about (fixing) history classrooms, where you just have to replace a map and maybe a blackboard,” adds Bob Aaron of the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges.

“It’s the cost of renovating a chemistry classroom to do up-to-date lab work that really hikes the cost of instruction,” he says.

The University of Illinois—where 44 percent of the buildings are more than 50 years old—recently estimated it needed $600 million to repair and renovate its campus buildings.

But the federal government in recent years has ended or dismantled many of the programs that gave direct maintenance subsidies to colleges.

Consequently, colleges are turning more to students to provide the money for salaries and upkeep. “Students’ demands in our country are for high-cost disciplines, and so the cost of education is going to be higher,” Aaron says.

College adopts censorship

LINCOLN, NE. (CPS)-Hoping to avoid more budget cuts, University of Nebraska officials censored a film that was to be shown on campus, and last week pressured the student newspaper not to publish a photo of legislators sleeping during a budget committee meeting.

The officials apparently hope not to provoke legislators into cutting the university's budget any more.

In the past year, Nebraska, its coffers emptied by the farm crisis, has been struggling with one of the worst budget crises in the nation.

To cope, legislators cut state colleges' budgets in mid-1985, forcing campuses to close class sections, lay off some part-time instructors and delay most equipment and library acquisitions.

"The external pressure of budget reductions is continuous," says Dr. Otto Bauer, vice chancellor of student affairs at Nebraska's Omaha campus.

More cuts are necessary this year. The state budget committee now is debating how deep the next cuts will be.

While it does, educators can't keep up their movie, tried to control the student paper and some fear, even may alter courses to make sure they don't anger legislators.

One budget committee member, Sen. Bernice Labeled, recently told the director of the university's art gallery she objected to the showing of "Hail Mary," a French film about immaculate conception, on Nebraska's main campus in Lincoln.

The director promptly canceled the showing.

"Politicians who want to use the (gallery) as a political whipping post might use this film to lobby against universityspending," says George Neubert, director of the Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery, in a press release.

The Sheldon traditionally has shown films too controversial for off-campus theaters.

"It's a very touchy situation," says a gallery official who declined to give her name. "We're facing a lot of budget cuts, and we don't like to talk about it much.

"We don't want to provoke legislators to reduce funding to the Nebraska Arts Council because it had supported the showing of "The Life and Times of Harvey Milk," the true story of a gay politician murdered in San Francisco, and the appearance of the Twin Cities Gay Chorus.

Most public television stations have shown the Milk film, which won numerous awards.

Some Catholic groups have objected to "Hail Mary," a film which sets the story of Jesus' conception in modern times, and includes brief scenes in which actors appear naked.

"There are serious constitutional issues here," says John Taylor of the Nebraska Civil Liberties Union.

Porn war pushes into court

(CPS)- Former Indiana University student Dave Henderson last week instructed his lawyer to submit a plea of guilty to showing a porn movie on the IU campus last November.

Henderson, who graduated last fall, may be the only student in the country facing charges for showing an "obscene film, the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) in Washington, D.C., says .

And while "there is a real increase in the level of the war on pornography" on campus nationwide, ACLU legislative analyst John Taylor says, "there is a real increase in the level of the war on pornography" on campus nationwide, ACLU legislative analyst Barry Lynn thinks "this is the first case of an arrest of a student in a long time."

If convicted, Henderson could face up to a year in jail, a $5,000 fine, or both.

Penn State, Illinois, Texas at Arlington, Michigan State and Baylor all have had controversies concerning X-rated films on campus during the last year.

While the debates generally feature pickets and angry exchanges, Fairfax County police a few years ago seized the nationwide campus hit "Debbie Does Dallas" from George Ficks.

Michigan State University.

But, unlike the Henderson case at IU, no one was arrested.

In November, Henderson organized a showing of the X-rated film "Instalatable" at a residence hall to raise money for charity.

Indiana nac wrestled with the issue before. Earlier in 1984, administrators had halted the showing of pornographic films on the campus until students and faculty members fashioned a policy for them.

Although the student-faculty committee did not ban the films, it did officially discourage showing them.

But when Henderson scheduled the showing of "Instalatable" in November, "seven or eight" people filed complaints, and Monroe County prosecutor Ron Waicukauski publicly promised that heads would roll if the screening occurred.

"It's a pretty short list of heads, Henderson says now. To his knowledge, no one else has been arrested for showing "obscene material."

Henderson notes Waicukauski has not gone after stores in Bloomington that sell "dirty" books and rent X-rated movies.

Additionally, the prosecutor did not arrest any staffers at the theater in town that shows skin movies.

Model UN to convene in April
By KAREN PARKER
TJ staff writer

The Model United Nations is in its 10th year, and the Model U.N. Conference is rapidly approaching. Taking place April 9-12, the class is an annual conference that brings Winthrop students together with southeastern high school students for a simulation of actual United Nations processes.

The college students present a demonstration on the first night of the conference, and for the next three days, high school students imitate them, proposing, debating, and voting on resolutions that deal with current world issues.

The Winthrop Model U.N. is unique in several aspects, explained Donna Chapa, student coordinator of Model U.N. X. For instance, Winthrop was the first to combine both college and high school students in a U.N. simulation, and was the path for colleges to follow. It is also a student-run, student-organized program, with the aid of the steering committee. It consists of 11 Chapa said, and represents every aspect of the college.

Kip Worrell, undersecretary for public relations, said, "The Model U.N. works in a combination of student, faculty, and administrators."

Chapa also depends on her two officers and the 13-member team, as secretary general and Jean Kiser is Chapa's administrative assistant.

Winthrop students participating in the conference gave their opinions on what they hoped to gain from taking the political science 260 course:

Bob Lee (USA) "I've gained an understanding of international affairs from the standpoint of the country I represent."

Susan L. Dillard (United Kingdom) "I feel we've attained a better perception of life in the United Kingdom and its relationship to the world system."

Matt Barley (Finland) "I've gotten an understanding of how the United Nations works."

Barry Cubbage (Israel) "A better understanding of the geography of the Middle East."

Dr. Glenn Thomas, professor

Peer adviser needed

Peer advisers are needed to provide academic help for new freshmen. Peer advisers will go through a four- to six-hour workshop this spring and then be assigned a group of five incoming freshmen for next fall semester. Peer advisers will receive two semester hours credit for taking a course in psychology next fall. Peers will also receive a stipend if they successfully complete the course and perform well as peer advisers.

For more details contact Dr. Dennis Wright, 106 Kinard. Application deadline is April 4. Spaces are limited and will be assigned to the first 20 qualified applicants.

Activists opting for aggression

(CPS) - The newest round of campus anti-apartheid demonstrations indicates protesters and their opponents may be switching to different tactics.

It seems to be, one Penn State student says, time "to be more aggressive." In recent months, students have erected purposefully-un能看出 "shantytowns" to illustrate campus links to racism and poverty in South Africa, tried to enforce boycotts of Coca-Cola products, staged a few more sit-ins and, most frightening of all to some administrators, threatened to interfere with college efforts to recruit minority students if their schools don't sell interests in firms that do business South Africa.

Black students at Penn State several weeks ago began boycotting campus activities, wearing black armbands, refusing to spend money at campus shops and promoting the call for divestment of actual United Nations recruitment.

Penn State is under a court mandate to increase minority enrollment to five percent by 1987. Minorities now comprise 3.7 percent of the school's students.

At about the same time, Dartmouth students protested when administration "kidnapped" a black erected to symbolize the plight of South African blacks.

Stanford students also built a shantytown that ultimately was burned by unknowns last week. The Dartmouth shantyties earlier had been vandalized by self-appointed conservative students.

And on Jan. 24, about 60 students, provoked by a campus speech by South African Bishop Desmond Tutu, briefly occupied the office of Cal-Santa Barbara Chancellor Robert Hutenback.

The students left before being arrested, but as confrontations spread, other administrators are beginning to crack down on protesters.

In mid-January, a UCLA court placed three anti-apartheid protesters on academic probation.

Penn State President Bryce Jordan says the administration "regrets very much the students' choice of tactics."

"I personally believe that the Black Students Coalition Against Racism's current effort to link the call for divestment with a boycott of minority recruitment programs at Pennsylvania State University is a course that if successful will hurt black students," he wrote in an official reply to the students' threats.

"We went through all the normal protests," says Lawrence G. Patrick, president of the Black Caucus at Penn State. "We felt we had no choice but to get more aggressive."

Black students refused a meeting with a group of advisors to the board of trustees last week.

"We want to meet with the trustees themselves," Patrick says, reflecting the hardline policy he says the coalition has adopted.

"They didn't know how to deal with us at first," he says. "Their first statement was that these students are misguided, and we're being misguided - by the trustees and the president."

The boycott already has evoked a stronger reaction than any previous protests, administrators concede.

"Before, the anti-apartheid activities were strictly educational. This threatens to keep the process of minority recruitment from working," says William Ashby, vice president for student activities at Penn (Continued on page 15)
Shealy recognized for service

By JILLIAN COFFIN

Anna Shealy, an interior design student, has been recognized by the Carolina Chapter of ASID, the American Society of Interior Designers, for her outstanding service to her local ASID chapter and the interior design profession.

Shealy is president of the Winthrop ASID chapter. She is also a student board member of the Carolina Chapter of ASID. Shealy recently received the Gary Idol Award at the annual awards banquet this past November in Charlotte, N.C.

"I was very excited because Gary Idol was important to the design profession," Shealy said. "He is the first student ever to win this award.

"We are especially pleased that Anna should be the first recipient of the award among the seven very active ASID student chapters in the Carolinas region," said John McCall, adviser for the Winthrop chapter.

"From the first time I've been at Winthrop, I've never seen a more active group. Shealy has led the group in a very dynamic way. She has really enrolled herself in the design community," McCall said.

Shealy has been responsible for many 'firsts' for the chapter, such as the Southeast Regional ASID Career Days being held at Winthrop. She is also the first Winthrop ASID member to address the entire Carolinas Chapter. Shealy has helped build the most active ASID chapter in Winthrop's history.

"Students have begun to realize the importance of being a professional group," Shealy said.

"I am particularly proud of Anna and the maturity and professionalism displayed within the group of offices including Daphney Shull, vice president; Kari King, secretary; and Pam Branch, treasurer.

"All have done exceptional jobs," McCall said.

RSA gets students involved

By DORRIE TONEY
Special to TJ

This week is Resident Students' Association Week. The purpose of RSA Week is to get students involved in residence hall activities and provide a week of educational, as well as recreational activities for residents.

The activities will start today with a "Welcome to Winthrop" banner contest. Each residence hall may enter a banner which may be used on Winthrop Day. The banners must be up by noon and the judging will take place at 2 p.m.

Tonight at 8 p.m. in the Bancroft Lobby, Sonya Wolfe, residence director of Phelps Hall, will present "Beam Me Up," a program about promoting positive feelings toward yourself and others. On Tuesday, the rooms entered in the Most Original, Hometest, and Craziest Room contest will be judged.

The Roommate Game will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday night in the Lee Wicker lobby.

Jeff Mann, vice president for student life, will host the game in which a roommate couple from each residence hall will be determined points for each question both of them answer correctly.

RSA Week will conclude on Thursday with the Cassidy Cup Award Banquet. The Banquet will be in the Faculty and staff lounge of McBryde at 5 p.m.

The residence hall unit that has earned the most points for attending campus events will receive the award which is named after Cynthia Cassens, the associate dean of residence life.

The awards for the banner contest, room contest, and roommate game will also be presented at the banquet.

The members of RSA invite all Winthrop students, faculty, and staff to attend these events. Anyone with questions may call Brenda Jenkins, chairperson of the RSA Week Activities Committee, at 3311 or Harriet Gardner, chairperson of the Cassidy Cup Committee, at 3261 for assistance.

The Officers of The Political Science Club would like to thank all of the students who went on our trek to Florida over Spring Break. Because of our activities the following changes have been made in Florida:

(1) All riders on "Pirates of the Caribbean" must wear seat belts (Right, Donna).

(2) New bed in the Quality Inn (Right, Barry?)

(3) New ventilation system in the rooms (Right, whatever?)

(4) No more falling rocks at Stone Mountain.

Thanks for making it such a great trip! Wherever shall we go next year? James, Jean, Connie & Janet

Many of the students feel cheated because they don't get to carry over the meals they don't use from one week to the next.

Carry-overs are not allowed because Epicure plans for the number of meals per week that there are meal plans for. If Epicure carried over, a person with a 10 meal plan could eat 20 in a week. If everyone did this, some people wouldn't get fed.

"To my knowledge, no food service in the state has a carry-over plan," said Simpson.

Although there are still some complaints, most students contacted said they are content with Epicure.

"There's no guarantees that any other food service's food will be better or cheaper," said one student. "I would rather stick with a company that is used to our needs than start all over again with a new company."

Choosing a long distance company is a lot like choosing a roommate.

It's better to know what they're like before you move in.

Living with someone for the first time can be an "educational" experience.
And living with a long distance company isn't any different. Because some companies may not give you all the services you're used to getting from AT&T.
For instance, with some companies you have to spend a certain amount before you qualify for their special volume discounts. With some others, voice quality may vary.
But when you choose AT&T, there won't be any surprises when you move in. You'll get the same high-quality, trouble-free service you're used to.
With calls that sound as close as next door. And discounts off our Day Rate on your state-to-state calls.

With savings of over 50% during weekends until 5pm Sundays, or nights from 11pm to 8am, Sunday through Friday. And 40% discounts evenings between 5pm and 11pm, Sunday through Friday.
With AT&T, you'll continue to get services like immediate credit for wrong numbers and collect calling. And long distance operators to help you anytime there's a problem on the line.
So when you're asked to choose a long distance company, choose AT&T. Because whether you're into Mozart or metal, quality is the one thing everyone can agree on. Call 1 800 222-0300 for more information or to choose AT&T.

Reach out and touch someone.

AT&T
