FRIDAY, APRIL 21.

During the five years between 1915 and 1920 a greater advance in dairy farming was made in the south than in any other section of the United States.

While this indicates that the south is awakening to the need of more dairy cattle, the southern states are still far behind the corn belt and eastern states in this important branch of agriculture.

In 14 southern states in 1920 according to the U. S. census, there was an average of only about two head of dairy cattle to a farm, while in 14 corn belt states there was an average of nearly six dairy cows to a farm.

Yet the south is better adapted in many ways to dairy farming and all practical and experienced farmers and all agricultural experts agree that the surest way to be permanently successful and prosperous in farming is to have at least a few head of good dairy cattle.

The editor of the News-Reporter spent Saturday and Sunday last in Sumter county.

Many farmers down there are making money. They make some cotton, but are devoting their time largely to other things. One of the best young farmers in the county who owns a beautiful home, with electric lights and running water, and several hundred acres of the most fertile farming land in the county, is not complaining of the boll weevil nor anything else. He is too busy.

There is a money crop on this farm every month of the year. Fruits and vegetables, chickens and eggs, hay and grain, pork and beef, and this young farmer is now feeding out a car load of hogs. They will be ready in sixty days and around $2,000 will be added to his bank account.

Corn down there is selling at sixty cents a bushel, but that did not worry the mind of this man, with his crib full. He expects to cash in on it soon, not at sixty cents, but at around $2 per bushel, the corn having been converted into pork.

He raises some cotton, but the boll weevil can get every lock of his crop and he will not be hurt much.—Washington Ga., News-Reporter.

This world is made up of funny people who do strange things.

"Fatty" Arbuckle, who was world-wide known as a moving picture comedian, had thousands of admirers who enjoyed his comic movies.

"Fatty" had went wrong when he began to make big money and the people began to show him some attention. He began to lead a life that would not be becoming to Christians. This life finally got him into serious trouble. He was tried for murder and has been acquitted by a jury of twelve—eight men and four women.

"Fatty's" pictures have been put on the blink in the manner in which he acted, other than on the screen. Thousands of people have refused to look at his movie pictures, and thousands of people who profess to be Christians will never again go to see Arbuckle's pictures. These people are going to end Arbuckle's movie picture career by refusing to patronize theatres who show his pictures.

We wonder if that is the proper spirit for Christians to have at the term themselves, to show? Would not a real Christian say: "Fatty, we enjoyed your comic movies and we admired you very much, but we find that you have not been leading a straight life. However, we want you to be a real good man and if you will try and lead a Christian life we will again be glad to see your comic films at the picture houses. Now if you will show us that you are a real man and that you are willing to follow the will of your Maker, we will gladly stand by you and assist you in becoming a better man."

No, the people who call themselves Christians are not going to help "Fatty" Arbuckle to become a real Christian man—they are not going to lend him a helping hand. He is now down and so far as Christians are concerned he is dead.

are concerned he can stay down. He went to the devil and now he can stay with the devil. If Arbuckle, or hundred others, will ask God to forgive his sins; they will be forgiven and if he lives the right life he will enter the Heavenly Gates, but if Arbuckle waits on "Christian" people to help him get right he is going straight to hell.

Another Free Advertisement.

This article, in a sense, is some more free advertising. It has to do with a well known canned syrup, the chief ingredients of which is our Georgia cane syrup. This syrup has a patent name, which is "Karo."

This syrup is now being advertised all over Georgia in Georgia newspapers. This syrup is not made in Georgia, nor in the South. It is manufactured in Illinois.

Why is it that these people can advertise so widely using only a portion of pure Georgia cane syrup and sell it here in Georgia where the farmers are complaining because they can't find a market for their goods? It certainly is not because these Illinois people offer their goods cheaper. Not on your life. It is for this reason: Their syrup sells for more than double what Georgia farmers are getting for Georgia cane syrup.

Why? Because the Illinois manufacturers are making a uniform grade, packed in uniform tins, and sell under an advertised trade mark. This and nothing else enables these people to sell an adulterated Georgia syrup at a higher price by twice, as the Georgia farmer, is getting for his home grown, pure unadulterated goods.

Until the Georgia farmer imbibes some of this "Yankee" hustle, they will long expect to take any thing they can get for their products. We have got to make our products attractive in the package and then we have got to advertise them to the world and create a trade for them. Syrup is not alone in this class. The same thing applies to sweet potatoes and a number of other products for which the protection is exclusively adapted to raising.

Douglas people are taxed to pay for having Virginia painted bulls swept off the streets every day. The breaker tells us they can't get the uniform graded in Coffee county, or Georgia, as that matter.

This condition has got to cease. The sooner that better. Now is the time to start the reform.—Coffee County Progress.

FRESH EGGS ENTIRE YEAR.

Clemson College, April 17.—During April at Max when eggs are plentiful, of higher quality, and the market price is very low, is the best time to preserve eggs, according to N. R. Micholof, Extension Poultry Specialist, who suggests that only strictly fresh eggs should be preserved, that dirty eggs or eggs that have been washed should not be used.

Washed eggs will not keep because the protective coating has been removed by the washing, and dirty eggs will become tainted in flavor, cause the infertile eggs are better than fertile eggs for preserving.

1. The water glass method is one of the most satisfactory methods to use. The commercial water glass which can be bought at any drug store, is used in the following proportion:

1 quart of water glass to 10 quarts of pure water.

Water that has been boiled and then cooled, is preferable. The mixture should be stirred until the ingredients are thoroughly mixed.

A clean stone jar is the most suitable container. The eggs should be placed in the water glass so that those at the top are covered by at least two inches of the liquid. The jar had best be covered in order to prevent evaporation, and stored in a cool place.

LEGISLATION OUTLINED

Want a Deal Examination of Matrimonially Incurred Opposa. Blanket Equal Rights.

Columbia, April 19.—The legislative program for the League of Women Voters of South Carolina for the coming year was outlined in a statement issued today by Mrs. C. Y. Reamer, of Columbia, chairman of the legislative committee of the organization. The things which the women will advocate before the 1923 legislature, and for which they will work in the meantime are a prison farm bill, a bill to provide for repression of prostitution, a bill to the recently defeated Simonhoff bill to require both men and women to stand medical examinations before being given marriage certificates; poll tax for women; enforcement of the prohibition laws; opposition to blanket legislation providing for equal right for men and women.

In explaining the provision to legislation giving women the same rights and privileges with men, the statement says that giving these identical rights "such privileges as power rights, responsibility of the husband for the support of his family, age of consent laws, the Mann Act and similar laws might be automatically swept away and that the entire body of state legislation for the protection of wage-earning women would be endangered."

BUSINESS WISDOM.

Don't let ambition kill your scruples. To become a star aim at the stars. If your principles are right, your policies are likely to be.

The biggest fool in the man who fools himself. No "who are you?" but "what are you?" is the real question.

After all, life and living do not consist only of food and rainfall. Only a lightweight could seek to give light weight.

In the end, the things that count are the things you care, count. Being a "good fellow" sometimes leads a man to become a felon.

No man is a success who has not happiness in his heart. It's rather be poor and deserve love than rich and deserve hate.

Poor Old Fellow.

The toll-worm man. What's he to do? With nothing but land! From sun to sun He tells and sweats, But what's he to do With all his debts? He plants and plows He digs and hoes, But what's he to do In face of such woes? His cotton he plants And works with all his might But what'll it be to him With the weevil in sight? Mr. Weevil he waits And sharpens his bill, And what he'll do Is to be seen—still.

Plant your peas Beans and sorghum too. But take that frown off And stop being blue. Work, and work, work and work And do all you can, Brace up your shoulders And stand like a man. That's a good fellow that never bends.

He had been visiting his uncle only about two weeks while Mrs. Burns, a widow, formerly of Charleston, had been at Mr. Gaitanor's residence for a longer period. CHewing AS A BEAUTIFIER.

Scientists Attribute "Rabbit Mouths" to Lack of Jaw Exercise.

The golden age of beauty for mankind has passed; today man is a soft-footed animal and this will be the secret of the race's loss of beauty in the future, according to a recent column in the London Daily Telegraph wherein the decline and fall of the beauty of Englishwomen are solemnly discussed. It is not asserted that the Englishwoman is no longer beautiful, but that her "beauty" is for posterity to get less beautiful.

The difficulty, it is shown, all lies in the jaw. Modern jaws are narrower with "rabbit" like incline and "contracted palates" becoming more common all the time. These things were unknown in pre-medieval times, which is the period, by the way, when beauty is said to have reached its pinnacle. The golden age of beauty is placed in pre-medieval times.

All these conclusions are drawn from exact and exhaustive study of human skulls. Among the younger generation, the English statistician finds the narrow mouth and small jaw in the ratio of one to four, so that the national face may be said to have altogether altered.

People don't chew and they haven't been chewing for centuries, is the indictment. In ancient times food was tough and it had to be well chewed. Hard food demanding sustained mastication was an item of all meals. The jaw was properly developed thereby, while today it is left to languish and the narrow jaw is the rule, more especially among women.

The remedy is simple, it is shown, consisting merely in doing away with the crowded cities, making a radical change in the diet, and returning to the simple habits of the common six or seven centuries ago. It is admitted, however, that pre-medieval is by no means an exact term and that the Normans of France and the high point of Grecian beauty were in pre-medieval times, but so were the days in which the owner of the Pitdawn skull (found and the Neanderthal gentleman lived, moved and had his being—that Neanderthal gentleman whose remains one may see in the museum at Bonn, and they had jaws that made the Greek ideal seem small and inconsequent by comparison.

The fear is expressed that the models of Phidias and Praxiteles were brought up on a soft diet. Sinusitis and seas and porridge are as now, and the comparison of the known to have had their place then and modern diet, it is hinted, is considerably exaggerated on both sides. It is thought that possibly modern man is not so devoted to the soft kind his ancestors were not so devoted to the hard as some of these scientists would have it believed.

Heavy Damage to Stocks in Several Stores Resulted From Fire and Water—Loss $300,000 to $400,000.

Lexington, April 18.—Damage probably approximating from $300,000 to $400,000 was done by fire here today, which seriously damaged or destroyed 22 automobiles and trucks in the garage of the Motor Service Company, destroyed tires and supplies and caused heavy loss of water and smoke to the stock of Barnes' variety store and Pickett Brothers grocery store. Two buildings, owned by Varner & Buchanan, were also considerably damaged, with a third suffering small damage. The Methodist church, which stands within a few feet of the garage, escaped without damage.

The blaze started from a spark while some mechanics were at work on a truck in the machine shop of the garage, it is said. The automobiles belonging to private owners a goodly portion of them being in street. Losses to buildings and stock of goods are covered by insurance, except for tire and supply stocks of the service company and a few hundred loss in Wilson's cafe.

Two new fire trucks with pumping engines arrived here Saturday proved their worth, undoubtedly preventing a much heavier loss, as the pressure without the pumping engines was rather weak.

Chautauqua Audiences Will Hear Important Address.

Prof. Chester M. Sanford to Discuss Problem of Avoiding the Misfit in Industry.

"What shall I do in the world?" is a great problem which "misfits" or "mismatches" in the labor market are faced. The solution of this problem is afforded by the lecture "Fallures of the Misfit" to be given here by Prof. Chester M. Sanford.

Prof. Sanford is an expert on vocational guidance. His lectures aim to guide the young people of the com-munally into choosing their proper vocations—to help orientate students in industry and the professions. Every man, young or old, who has the future of America at heart will be vitally interested in this lecture.

The tragedy in many lives is the attempt to succeed in the line of work with ability and inclination point in an entirely different direction. Many a man who would succeed in business would be a failure as a physician and vice versa.

Professor Sanford's lecture gives valuable suggestions concerning the closing of a vocation.

SOUTH IS ON THE EVE OF GREAT CHANGE FOR BETTER, SAYS JORDAN

By Harvie Jordan.

Houston, Texas.—In my trip throughout the entire cotton belt, I find that the farmers are unable to meet their obligations, are compelled to reduce their standard of living, and to strip their communities of the things that make them attractive, causing stagnation in both town and country. The farm population shows marked depression, especially during the last two years, and the young people, especially, are leaving the farms and taking up their residences in the cities and towns. Negro labor is showing an alarming decrease in the agricultural sections, seeking employment in other lines.

I do not think it will be exaggerating to state that there are thousands of vacant farms throughout the cotton producing section of America due to these conditions, which are the outgrowth of an un sound agricultural policy which has been pursued for the last fifty years. After the War Between the States, when the negro was set free, he and his white master were immediately required to enter into a struggle for an existence in competition with each other by the production of cheap products, especially cotton.

The old system has broken down. The debacle in prices of farm products since 1918 has wrecked the worn-out shack. The South is either in a death struggle or on the eve of a new birth, and I am convinced that the latter is the case. We are on the eve of a new, more prosperous and greater South.

The conference with leading business men, bankers, merchants and farmers throughout the entire South I find that people are thinking as never before. The statement was made to me over and over that the old order of things is passing away; that it has served its day and generation. People tell me on all sides: "We need white immigration; we can never continue under the old order. It has ceased with the negro and white man to pay a fearful penalty."

Even were scientific methods discovered today for creating the bull weevil, it would be impossible for the South to produce a full cotton crop. The assets necessary for the production of cotton have been depleted by a greater extent within the last two years than in any similar period during the last half-century. The South, like the other agricultural sections of America, is debt laden with a tremendous inflated debt incurred for the production of the crops of 1920 and 1921, and this burden alone means the certainty of a sharp production and a complete change. Two billion, three hundred million dollars is a stupendous sum, and yet this is what the South has based upon the cost of production of the last two cotton crops. It is in proportion to the twelve billions of dollars lost by the agricultural producers of America that the cost of producing the last two crops and the selling price.

The remedy to these conditions is to change the old worn-out, hazardous system. The people of the South realize they can not continue same and that they must place agriculture upon a strictly economical business basis. No longer will they plant in faith, reap in hope and market by accident. Devaluated agriculture is a certainty. The producers must secure a price for their products on a level which will enable them to receive cost of production plus a reasonable profit. The fact that the agricultural producers of America and the various lines of industry that extended credits for the production of the crops of 1920 and 1921 are in the same predicament as the people of the South means the absolute certainty that these conditions are going to be changed for the better, and no section will show a greater change for the better than the South.

For the present year, crop with ideal seasons, we are facing the certainty of a small cotton crop. With adverse seasons common sense plainly dictates the certainty of a record-breaking short crop, a crop never made worse by the record-breaking small cotton crop of 1921. The law of cause and effect can have no other result.

The world has been sick. Some months ago it stopped from its sick bed. It has passed through its convalescent stage. The world will have an abnormal appetite for food and clothing. From whence will these supplies come? While the world was sick, supplies exceeded demand. Now that the world is returning to health and vigor demand will exceed supplies, which will mean famine supplies, famine prices and the consumer will pay the penalty.

Lloyd George warned against excessive ambition when he said, "The mountain of fame has great responsibility, the higher you climb, the colder and lonelier it becomes; you are exposed to every attack of the elements, also it is necessary to deny yourself the comforts of peaceful home life."

Defective sight among 100,000 persons in the United States could have been prevented in half the cases, according to the field secretary of the National Committee for Prevention of Blindness.

Set New Pace For Motor Car Industry

To a public that has become keenly discriminating, low prices are appealing only when allied to high quality.

This fact explains the interest in Chandler prices. These prove that resources, manufacturing skill and high ideals can build the exclusive, powerful, long lived car at a figure little above those for admittedly cheap cars. This is the most significant automobile development of 1922.

The Chandler Six is the lowest priced car of its style, size and power. There are bigger automobiles of larger bore and spoke, but they cost more in original investment, and their greater weight involves larger maintenance outlay.

The extraordinary success of the Chandler line has not been lost on competing manufacturers. They have been forced to a belated acceptance of the policy of lowest possible prices, adopted by Chandler and other foremost makers at the beginning of 1922.

Whether in the snappy touring types or in the luxurious closed models the Chandler Motor Car Company is now building the closest priced car it ever produced. It will continue to build for quality.
