Board rejects libel complaint

The board of student publications unanimously voted to dismiss a complaint concerning libel last Tuesday.

Brad Godfrey, former Johnsonian staff writer, registered a formal complaint with the board after the publication of Editor Lisa Buie’s editorial entitled “SGA control unethical” in the March 24 edition.

However, Godfrey said he did not intend to take any legal action.

“I don’t intend to take any kind of legal action against the board, the school, or the paper,” Godfrey said.

Godfrey claimed that Buie’s editorial implied that his recent kind of legal action against the board, Godfrey stated that “ac-

Schedule revision planned

By TOM STEARNS
TJ staff writer

Winthrop College is offering pre-registered students a special two-week schedule revision period this month. The revisions will be handled April 17-30 from 8:30 to 5 p.m. in 102 Tillman.

Winthrop Registrar Karen Jones explained, “We’re trying this revision session to attempt to alleviate the long lines that usually occur at Add/Drop at the beginning of each semester. Hopefully some of the students will make changes now instead of waiting until fall.”

Jones cautioned that no new registration will be permitted during this time. “This is simply come first served basis, will be to allow pre-registered students August 28 from 9:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. to clear up any problems in their schedules so that there will not be such a crowd in the fall.”

I think that since the revision period runs Add/Drop, simply by going to through exam week, students the registration office. Classes should know by then how they can be added with a permission alteration, she said.

Besides the April revision period, two Add/Drop sessions will be held in the fall. The first, for early registered students who have paid their fees, will be August 25 from 4-5 p.m. The second, for all students on a first come first served basis, will be handled August 28 from 9:30 a.m. to 7 p.m.

“Hopefully,” Jones said, “if students will take advantage of these special opportunities, there will not be as large a crowd at Add/Drop as there has been in the past. In the meantime, we are looking for new ways to increase the efficiency of the registration system.”

First measles case reported

By DR. SUZANNE HAEFELE
Special to TJ

Even though our first measles case is not yet confirmed by blood testing, and this will not be completed for two weeks; therefore, we must assume that this is a true case of Rubella or “red measles” on campus.

The usual symptoms of measles are high fever, persistent dry cough, and pink eyes with purulent discharge. After these symptoms are present for three to four days, a rash usually begins about the face and neck and then spreads over the next few days to the trunk and onto the feet. Then this rash gradually fades. The incubation period for measles is 10-14 days.

There are several complications that can occur from measles. These include ear infections, pneumonia, and encephalitis (inflammation of the brain) - 1:1,000. The older the individual, the higher the rate of complications.

A case of measles can also be “modified.” This usually occurs in a person who has previously been immunized but is still susceptible. It is thought that five percent of those who are “up to date” on their measles immunization are still susceptible. Modified measles may present with low grade or no fever, may not have a cough, may or may not have pink eyes with purulent discharge, and a rash which is usually present may be sparse. Also, the incubation period may be prolonged from 14-20 days instead of the usual 10-14 days.

Those people that are susceptible to measles are those who have never been immunized for any reason (religious or otherwise), those immunized before they were a year of age, and as mentioned above, those who are immunized and “up to date” still have a five percent susceptibility rate.

Since there has been a probable case of measles on our campus, it is essential for those students and staff, especially those at high risk as mentioned above, to be alerted to either the usual symptoms or the modified symptoms of measles. Those students who are either unimmunized for any reason should report to the Crawford Health Center on a daily basis during the following dates: April 14-23. They should contact Lyn Neil in person and state whether or not they have had any of the above mentioned symptoms of the measles. Please report any possible cases as soon as possible so that we can keep the number of cases confined.

If any student has previously checked on their immunization status earlier this year and were said to be “up to date”, there is no need to re-check on those records. If someone is unsure of their immunization status, please call the Crawford Health Center and request to speak to one of the staff nurses. We appreciate your help in trying to deal with this problem.

Communication is essential to understanding. Some students, faculty and staff members have expressed that they cannot effectively get stories or ideas to The Johnsonian staff because they are unfamiliar with policy.

Since we are interested in obtaining valuable information regarding upcoming events from these groups, the policy is as follows:

The deadline for advertisements, letters to the editor and newsbriefs is 5 p.m. Tuesday in order to appear in the following week's issue.

Deadlines for news stories are Tuesdays and Thursdays at 5 p.m. Simply because a story comes in on Thursday does not mean that it will necessarily appear in the next issue. This is because our contract with the Yorkville Enquirer requires that all but three pages must be completed for printing by Tuesday evening.

Stories which do not involve a time element may be held until sufficient space is available at the discretion of the editors.

Stories which do not involve a time element may be held until sufficient space is available at the discretion of the editors.

It is hoped that The Johnsonian and all others will benefit from the printing of these deadlines and policies.

‘Only the good die young’

What is the difference between public relations and news? Public relations relays only good news whereas a newspaper tackles the responsibility of revealing the truth.

That truth may be good or bad. This year The Johnsonian has been criticized by students, faculty and administration for revealing the truth. We have in no way created the issues or controversy we revealed. For example, issues involving problems with a math professor as well as concerns of athletes came to us from students seeking our help in getting at the truth. Other incidents such as last semester's rape, deplorable racial slurs on minority's banner, the death penalty demonstration, and the action of elected student officials we responded to rather than created.

Needless to say, these issues and incidents are not necessarily favorable. However, we, as journalists feel a responsibility to inform readers regardless of whether news is good or bad. It is in knowing the truth, reacting to opinions presented in editorials, and responding that students are truly free.

Students should take seriously a quote engraved on the outside wall of Kinard building - "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free. As John Adams once said, "Let us dare to read, think, speak, and write," because as Billy Joel put it, "Only the good die young."

Letters to the editor

Discouraged

Dear Editor,

In the past couple of semesters I have become very discouraged with the way that The Johnsonian has been operated. It seems that the editor is determined to stir up controversy, or even create some, just for the purpose of gaining attention. Whatever happened to the newspaper which was for the students' use and not the use of the editor? I Dear Editor, I am tired of watching you attempt in response to the editorial pt to slander and abuse "Appalled" and all other related everyone who does not have the editorials, I would like to write same viewpoint that you do. The about this so-called racial newspaper is for the students to hostility that has set all the become informed about college black students on fire? I am a and national events. It is The normal everyday student who Johnsonian, not Lisa Buie's usually has little to say about soapbox.

Earlier this year some I have never really been ticked student leaders on campus ap-off like I am now. Lately, peaked to the board of student everytime I turn around it publications to make a change in seems like the blacks or the the leadership of our newspaper. NAACP members are crying The board chose to ignore the something new. Some new pleas of the students and reap-type of racial discrimination. point the existing editor. But. The way I feel is that the alas, the students get the final blacks are getting all worked up word.

Yes, The Johnsonian's budget thorp's students, and even white comes before senate soon. A big students, at that, may not have budget of over $20,000--just done even. I believe the black waiting to be cut. Is it true that students drew a conclusion too the paper had over $5,000 left quickly. They said there were no over last year? If so, then I think witnesses to the defacing. Well, that a 50 percent reduction in who's to say black students funds to the paper could make a didn't do it for this particular reason. In the past when someone's fraternity (white) posters got torn down or defaced they would just discredit it to the whole student population or even drunks, but would never single out a particular majority or minority.

And when this happened to black fraternities they immediately go to singling out the white students at Winthrop, when who's to say it wasn't the Arabs, Mexicans, or even blacks when there were no witnesses. Or was this a way of making an issue over something that wasn't there to start with.

Sincerely,

Michael Scott Pullon

After about 20 minutes of discussion, Dr. Tom Morgan, professor of history and board chairman, entertained a motion to deal with the complaint. A vote was taken and the board of directors responded by stating that the complaint needed no further consideration as a question of libel. Housing policy unfair

By ALLAN C. JENKINS
TJ contributing editor

Married and international students who believe in the college catalog’s assertion that they will receive priority when applying for Breazeale/Roddey apartments can scratch that belief. Last week, Residence Life announced that it is extremely unlikely that any apartments will be available to any students on the “waiting list” in the coming year due to planned renovation of Roddey this summer and fall.

So far, so good. Residence Life went on to announce that priority for any apartments opening up in Breazeale will be given to current residents of Roddey, and that the current Breazeale residents can keep their places.

That couldn’t be right: the catalog clearly states that married and international students will receive first priority for campus apartments.

But it is right, according to Dean Cindy Ossens in Residence Life, who said that this case is not a “normal one” and that the policy will not be followed.

Obviously, this means that single students, who are accorded no priority in the catalog, will be forced to the alternative.

Student publications unanimous in the complaint be disregarded.

“I feel that we provided ample opportunity for hearing the complaint, Morgan said, “and the board responded by stating that the current Breaseafe residents don’t have to worry about losing their place.

Residence Life needs to be aware that for the international and married students— but not for single Americans—having or not having an apartment can make a difference between staying at Winthrop or going back home.

For single students from the United States, though, an apartment in Roddey/Breazeale is simply a nice, but not necessary, thing to have—they don’t have to worry about visiting hours, they don’t have to eat turkey tetrachloride at Thomson, and they can still head home every break to their parents.

C.C. team takes on bridge

By ERIC FEARN
TJ sports writer

Friday, April 5, members of the Winthrop cross country team traveled to Charleston to participate in the Cooper River Bridge run.

Our stay was an enjoyable one. The race was more for entertainment than for serious competition. Yet, for this time of year, the times were fairly decent. Accompanied by Head Coach Dr. Edward Guettler, associate professor of English and drama, and a team of Winthrop students, we settled down for our night of rest before the race in the illustrious, architecturally masterful building that is known far and wide as the Ecco-Travel Motor Inn. We ate at the Sandbar restaurant near Folly Beach.

The author of this article, being somewhat superstitious, carried the pizza, a can of Classic Coke, and myself into the dining room, the crowd of 6,684 runners and 46 overall. Jim Koterba, associate professor of English, said, "I'll be a little slow today, because of the bugs biting me." With that the boy turned around and walked off, shaking his head as he went.

After it was announced the race would start at 9 a.m., because of the delay, the participants had begun to restlessly move around. We were then greeted with the good news at 8:37. It was announced that the chief of police was ordering the race to start at 9:45, so as to keep the traffic problem down. We all settled back to the starting line and began to wait. It was then announced that the chief of police had been overruled and that the race would start at 9 a.m. to accommodate television coverage of the race. We all once again wandered off the line. Finally, at 9 a.m., under a cloudy sky (the fog had already been burned off), the race was started.

The course is flat for two miles to the bridge. Then you ascend to the top of the first rise of the bridge, descend, and ascend to the second rise, descend, then run over a small incline. Then you run two flat miles to the finish. While running over the bridge, I observed some poor souls leaning over the side and returning their shrimp, crab legs, and much more to the saltwater below. The weather was hot, and noticeably warmer while you were running on the bridge.

Golden recorded a time of 35:13 over the 6.2 mile course, and he finished 3rd in his age group and 46 overall. Jim Koterba finished in 36:49 and was eighth in his age group and 66 overall. The author of this article ran a time of 37:34 and was eighth in his age group and 118th overall. Dorothy Case ran a time of 47:10, a personal record by more than two minutes, and was eighth in her age group. All of the aforementioned people received hand-made ceramic mugs at the awards ceremony. The times were better than would be expected at this juncture. Some members of the team will now be preparing for the Come-See-Mee road race the weekend of the 11th and a road race coming up in Charlotte the weekend of the 18th.
Fashion class does windows

Winthrop's fashion promotion class recently did window displays for stores in downtown Chester.

Ben Fanselow, instructor for the class, said, "We did the windows by invitation. The students did a good job and were well received."

The promotions class instructs students how to do proper displays. During the course, students are given assignments to try and come up with effective and successful visual displays.

"At the end of the semester we located local store owners and do their displays as an outside project to get a taste of the field," said Fanselow.

Susan Moore, participating student, said, "We worked in groups of four; each had a store to do. We talked to the owners of the store and redid their window."

The class did a variety of stores including office supplies, hardware and clothing.

"Properly done displays are important to merchandisers for catching the buyers' eyes," Fanselow said.

Fanselow has done display work for Macy's, Gimbel's and Belk. He also owns his own display company called Fanselow Enterprises which does store planning and displays.

If you are a Winthrop student and are interested in competitive swimming, a special event will be held April 8 from 2-6 p.m. at Winthrop's swimming pool in Peabody Gym.

This year's Swimming Intramurals Senior Invitational will consist of sprint and relay events for both men and women. The sprint events consist of 50-yard individual butterfly, 50-yard individual freestyle, and the 100-yard individual.

The relay events to be held are the 200-yard medley relay and the 100-yard freestyle relay.

The events will be based on a point system in which first place receives nine points, second place receives seven points, third place receives five points, and sixth place receives one point. All events will be timed. Free T-shirts will be awarded to the men's and women's individual champions and runners-up and to the men's and women's relay champions and runners-up.

The event is sponsored by the swimming club, the physical education department, and the intramural office. Participation will be open to the public. For more information contact the intramural office at 323-2410.
