BLOWING ROCK HOTEL TO COST QUARTER MILLION

Charlotte, Conn. Has Contract for Blowing Rock Hotel... The hotel, or the part that is being built now, is merely an extension or an enlargement of the Mayview Club house, which was opened last season.

The hotel, or the part that is being built now, is merely an extension or an enlargement of the Mayview Club house, which was opened last season. The new section will have 150 rooms and each room will have a bath in connection.

The building of this quarter-million-dollar hotel is only a part of the improvement and development work that is taking place on the Mayview Park property. Work has recently been started on a golf course that has been designed and laid off by Donald Ross, one of the most celebrated golf course builders in America.

English The World Today. A Swedish literary society is fostering a movement to make English an international language—the language of the entire world, at least so far as commercial and diplomatic communications are concerned.

At Jonesville, La., where several hundred destitute refugees from the Black, Little, Texas and Ochsiba river districts are being cared for, work has been completed flooded today. The town, while the refugees there is located on higher ground than the town itself, it is expected that from the camp site will be inundated.

Preparations are being made to care for 5,000 refugees at Harrisonburg, where a refugee camp was established in the town. More than 1,500 people are already concentrated in these two camps and the number is constantly being increased.

Water from Ferriday crevasse today reached the town of Water, La., and the reports were that the town is slowly being flooded. At Vidalia, La., efforts to erect temporary levees to prevent the water entering that place were continued throughout last night and today with some hope of success.

No dangerous developments in the levee situation in the lower reaches of the river were reported today. Weather bureau predictions indicate that there will be little change in the river stages for the next few days, but that a slight indication that recently established high records will be broken all points on the lower river.

James Kelly Dies. Death Claims Last Cadet Named by Lincoln. New York, April 30.—Commander James Douglas Jerrald Kelly, U. S. N., retired, 75, up to two years ago one of the directors of the New York Herald, died tonight in his Manhattan home. His widow and three daughters survive him.

Commander Kelly was the last cadet appointed to the naval academy at Annapolis by President Lincoln. He was retired in 1901, but returned to service during the late war and was killed at different times as a result of the wreckage of a number of the court of court-martials and by the bureau of intelligence. He was the author of several books on naval subjects.

THOUSANDS BATTLE WITH FLOOD WATERS

Army of Workers Pile Bags of Seed in 'Weak Places to Prevent' Floods. Thousands of workers are engaged in the work of mounding and ministering to destitute families.

New Orleans, April 30.—While water flowing through the three levees in the lower Mississippi river continued to cover more lands today, the fight to prevent other breaks in the levees was carried out without any let up. Thousands of men spent their Sabbath for common piling sand bags to strengthen the weak places and to raise low stretches of the embankments to meet higher river stages than any yet recorded.

In the third Mississippi levee district alone no less than 10,000 men were engaged in the fight to hold the swollen river in its channel, the 4,000 employed by the government in this district being reinforced by more than 6,000 civilians who have volunteered their services for common protection of their homes. Church services were dispensed with in many places, the pastors leading their flocks to the levees where the day was spent in hard labor to prevent further flooding.

Other hundreds spent the day in searching the flooded areas for unaccounted families and removing them to small boats to places of safety. Throughout the day the numbers being cared for in hastily improvised camps, adopted more progressive farming methods and greatly increased its cotton production. If these same methods had been used in producing diversified crops the south would have been waiting in money.

The "two-blades-of-grass" slogan was slight if it had not been, of the large plantation. The large plantation would have been waiting in money. A solution of our problems may be found in the small farm. Thinking men take that view of it. We cite from Cotton News the following article on the subject of small farms which makes interesting reading.

The time has come in the evolution of the agricultural industry of the South when economic wisdom makes it essential that the individual lands be gradually abolished. Large tracts of large bodies of farm land owned in every country have always built up and maintained a rural system in the form of peasant proprietorship, which is obvious not only to the student of modern civilization, but in retarding the higher type of progressive and prosperous agriculture.

The Russian Revolution, which a few years ago overthrew that government and created Bolshevism, was largely due to the uprising of the peasant classes who for generations had been practically enslaved as serfs on large estates owned by the wealthy classes. Not more than 100 years ago, the British Government found it necessary to enact a law to force the sale and cutting up of large estates in Ireland so as to provide means for the young and check the stampede of emigration of the Irish to America. The British Parliament is considering the necessity for enacting similar laws with regard to the large estates in England in order that homes may be provided for small land-owners and the industry of agriculture developed and a better scale of production to meet the needs of the country for food and feedstuffs.

In the cotton states the advent of the tractor has necessitated a revolution in the old methods of cotton farming. This change calls for diversification of crops, the use of improved farming machinery, more intelligent farming methods and a more economic system of production and marketing. The day of speculation and large plantations with a "big game" to be furnished food and feed supplies to the town merchant, with the cotton grower his annual rents in either

Plums and Prunes. The good things of this world have to be planned for, worked for, struggled for. There is no easy road to success. The plums are few—the prunes many.

THE SMALL FARM COMING.

Times change and men change with them. Ten years ago the slogan was "Make the blades of grass grow where only one grew before." This advice was followed and resulted in a bale to the acre, then a bale and a half, then two bales. There was over-production and then came the cry, "reduce your acreage."

The "two-blades-of-grass" slogan was slight if it had not been, of the large plantation. The large plantation would have been waiting in money. A solution of our problems may be found in the small farm. Thinking men take that view of it.

The time has come in the evolution of the agricultural industry of the South when economic wisdom makes it essential that the individual lands be gradually abolished. Large tracts of large bodies of farm land owned in every country have always built up and maintained a rural system in the form of peasant proprietorship, which is obvious not only to the student of modern civilization, but in retarding the higher type of progressive and prosperous agriculture.

The Russian Revolution, which a few years ago overthrew that government and created Bolshevism, was largely due to the uprising of the peasant classes who for generations had been practically enslaved as serfs on large estates owned by the wealthy classes. Not more than 100 years ago, the British Government found it necessary to enact a law to force the sale and cutting up of large estates in Ireland so as to provide means for the young and check the stampede of emigration of the Irish to America.

In the cotton states the advent of the tractor has necessitated a revolution in the old methods of cotton farming. This change calls for diversification of crops, the use of improved farming machinery, more intelligent farming methods and a more economic system of production and marketing. The day of speculation and large plantations with a "big game" to be furnished food and feed supplies to the town merchant, with the cotton grower his annual rents in either bales, has passed. The large land owner must move on his lands, reorganize his past methods of farming and operate the farm as a modern, up-to-date institution, or he must exp up his land and sell it to small landowners. The negro tenant without constant expert supervision will make a complete failure as a profitable farmer under best weevil crop diversification conditions. Thousands of such tenants are leaving and will continue to leave the cotton belt in future years, as they find themselves unable to cope with the new system of agriculture.

There is an abundant supply of hardy, young manhood in the Northern and Western agricultural states who can be easily induced to locate on Southern farm lands as small landowners if the effort is made to secure them. There are thousands of white tenant farmers in the South who would develop into better farmers if they could become the owners of small farms sold to them at reasonable prices and on long terms.

The highest type of the successful farmer and citizen of the United States is the man who owns and personally operates a well equipped small farm, cultivating his lands intensively and making the farm self-sustaining. The South needs to be reorganized in such a way that there never will be the right kind of agricultural prosperity in the cotton belt until the small landowner is in the majority of the farmers. The barrier of the boll weevil, the difficulties of probable crop diversification, with negro tenantry and the ever increasing burden of taxation will drive the large landowners back to their farms or force them to sell out.

The fact that a purchaser of a small farm can borrow 50 per cent of the purchase price at a fair market value from the Federal Land Bank, offers a superior inducement to the prospective small farmer and the purchaser. Farm Land Associations made up of large landowners should be organized all over the South and every possible inducement offered to settlers from other States to locate on such lands as purchasers of small farms. The splendid climate, fertile soils and ability to grow all kinds of crops, livestock, fruit and truck, offers a superior inducement to young farmers residing in less favored sections of the United States.

STUDY YOUR HABITS.

Your failure to progress in business, if you had hoped you would, is naturally a source of great disappointment to you. Not unreasonably, too, you are inclined to attribute it to causes and conditions over which you have no control.

should say ninety-nine times out of a hundred—the business legend has only himself to blame. And more often than not the disappointments he experiences are chiefly due to his having unconsciously acquired bad business habits.

Perhaps this is the trouble in your own case. Have you ever given any thought to the question of whether you habitually act or think in any way that might disastrously affect your business prospects?

Many young men, for example, have the bad business habit of dawdling or otherwise underestimating themselves when at work. Such young men usually have in addition the habit of arriving at their place of business a few minutes late, and whenever possible, of departing from it a few minutes before closing time.

Habit is the worst enemy a man has. He who is in the habit of thinking inferior positions, so is the habit, far too frequently in evidence, of working carelessly and hastily, with little thought as to the quality of the work turned out.

The man who habitually says to himself, unconsciously or subconsciously, "The thing that counts for most in life is to get through," need hardly be surprised if other workers are more favored in the matter of promotions. Hasty work means inaccurate work and inaccurate work means quality contributing to business success.

Then there are other young men who needlessly handicap themselves by the bad habit of forever grumbling and complaining about the work assigned to them. "It is too tedious," "it gives me no opportunity," "I'm too hampered with the pay I am getting," are expressions they seem never to tire of uttering.

The mental attitude which this perpetual grumbling reveals is itself enough to insure their working inefficiently. So with the mental attitude of those other workers—and they are not few—who fall into the bad habit of thinking unenvy or suspiciously of fellow workers.

RAILROAD MEN LEAVE HEARING

When Outside Organizations Give Evidence, Executive Heads of Employees Walk Out but Testimony Continues at Chicago.

Chicago, April 28.—Although executive heads of the railroad employees walked out of the wage hearing today, at which outside organizations were allowed to give evidence on behalf of the public, it did not stop presentation of the industrial side of the dispute in which the National Industrial Traffic League asked the railroad labor board to direct out all controversy and revert the matter to the employees and the corporations.

The railroad men refused to sit in the hearing when J. H. Lipby started to introduce the shippers' views. Frank F. Walsh, attorney for the employees, in a protest said that he placed in the position of being drawn into another hearing.

"As far as the men are concerned the hearing is closed and we desire to make a record of the evidence now introduced as suggested by the board," he added. "We could bring the small shippers in to testify that the railroad men are not desiring a wage decrease and for every organization representing the shippers we could bring in 100 witnesses to testify that the board should not decrease wages."

The employees also presented a brief in which they protested the bringing in of outside parties not interested in the dispute.

Perhaps this is the trouble in your own case. Have you ever given any thought to the question of whether you habitually act or think in any way that might disastrously affect your business prospects?

EXCURSIONS IN THOUGHT.

What Happens When the Pictures are not in Focus. Are Not the Same. R. N. Allen, Teacher of Manual Training.

That our heads act somewhat like cameras—motion picture cameras at that—is apparent to us after a little thought. The eye serves as a lens and the delicate brain substance serves effectively as a photographic plate. Whatever we may behold with the eye (and bear with the ear) serves to make up the composite mental picture which we call an idea. From the numerous mental pictures which form our stock-in-trade we fashion that wonderful thing called the stream of consciousness. Rather, our subconscious mind does the work automatically for us. At times our conscious mind may intervene to direct the stream of consciousness along certain paths. But most of the time the work is done independent of volition and consciousness along certain paths. But our camera-heads have a distinct independent of volition and consciousness.

Our particular point of view in the stream of ideas. Or to put it a bit differently, our point of view is the "movie film" which we construct out of the many pictures which our camera-heads have constructed the eye on the delicate brain substance. No man or woman can have identically the same point of view. It is clear that each of us has the innate prejudices, the inherent tendencies, the strong predispositions all tend to make each camera-head take an entirely different picture from all of the others.

People somehow have a foolish idea that folks can believe alike and think alike if they only choose to or want to badly enough. Careful thought will convince any one that few people really believe as the want to, but as they have to. No man or woman who is normally honest can believe as he wants to. To believe as one wants to is to believe that which one likes regardless of the nature of our belief, and the fact that we are normally honest can believe as he wants to. To believe as one wants to is to believe that which one likes regardless of the nature of our belief, and the fact that we are normally honest can believe as he wants to.

The pictures in our heads determine the nature of our belief, and the fact that we are normally honest can believe as he wants to. To believe as one wants to is to believe that which one likes regardless of the nature of our belief, and the fact that we are normally honest can believe as he wants to.

Great Falls Pageant. Great Falls Schools to Have Magnificent Pageant Saturday, May 6th. The pageant is especially invited to attend—will be at Ball Park.

Great Falls, April 28th.—Owing to the fact that several features have been added to the spring pageant to be given by the Great Falls Primary School, it is thought advisable to postpone it till Saturday, May 6th. This will be a very fitting time for this display, as it is the day of the famous May Picnic, so dear to the hearts of the old citizens of this part of the State.

This will probably be the biggest thing of the kind that has ever been held in this county, and will be well worth seeing even by those who live at a distance from Great Falls. Mr. E. B. Wallace, supervisor of the primary school, is directing the pageant. She has put it on in Columbia and other places with great success, and is sparing no pains and expense to make this one a thing that it surpasses any previous one. It is intended to portray the advent of Spring, and almost every living creature that comes at this time of year is represented.

The new base ball park with its commodious grandstand to seat the spectators will furnish an ideal place to stage the pageant. A throne for the crowning of the King and Queen has been erected in front of the Grand stand. This will be beautifully decorated as will the players' booths and the front of the grand stand.

While only pupils of the primary school take an active part in the performance, the pupils of the grammar grades and the high school will march in the parade, and the moving picture photographer will be on hand to take pictures to be presented on the screen.

OTHER CLAIMANTS FOR NEAL ESTATE

Alleged Ten Millions May Be Only Three-quarters of Millions.

Greenwood, April 28.—The $10,000,000 estate to which Mrs. Dan S. McCoy of this city claims she is her 15-year-old son, Therry McCoy of Tulsa, Okla., are heirs may be only three-quarters of a million after all. Mrs. McCoy claims that the money was left her and her son by John J. Neal of Omaha, Neb., who she claims was her former husband. Information gained here is that John J. Neal left an estate of only $750,000 and that is involved in complex litigation in Forsyth county, North Carolina. A dispatch from Winston-Salem, N. C., says that so far as known John Neal was never married. He was an orphan boy and obtained a job with the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company, in time becoming district sales manager. He went to Nebraska and accumulated a fortune. He died, leaving a fortune of $750,000 and a will, distributing all the money to certain orphanages in North Carolina, with the exception of about $300,000 in bequests to friends.

The state of Nebraska, claiming Neal as a citizen who died without heirs, claims that the property should escheat to the state. Friends of the University of North Carolina claim that if the will is invalidated, the property will escheat to the university's rights should be protected. Besides other claimants, Mrs. Dan S. McCoy of this city claims she is Neal's widow and is legally entitled to the property, which she insists amounts to $10,000,000. For the past eight months, Mrs. McCoy has been living in seclusion in the back of a small store here, claiming that she feared violence from other claimants to the property of her alleged husband. If her whereabouts become known, she refuses to discuss the alleged inheritance and declares she expects the estate to be settled in time for her to return to Rio Grande, a small town on the Mexican border, by June 1.

THE DUKE SUPPER

Charlotte Observer Writes of "Spirit of Electrification." Chester Pledges Friendship.

The following article is from The Charlotte Observer of Sunday:

The dinner given by the Chester Chamber of Commerce Friday night in honor of James B. Duke is of more than passing interest and significance. The business men of that substantial and thriving little city were frank in their acknowledgment of the part Mr. Duke and the Southern Power Company have had in the industrial and commercial development of the piedmont section of the Carolinas, and happy in their expressions of appreciation. Their pledge of friendship, support and cooperation in future activities in the field of hydro-electric development is not without force and effect.

The people of Chester are peculiarly qualified to appreciate the value of the Duke enterprises to the community for in that country were located the first large developments of the Southern Power Company and there is located the ideal mill community of Great Falls. They have seen a magnificent stream going to waste until there came upon the scene this Duke with the spirit of a pioneer, the vision of a prophet and the gift of a fighter. They have seen the wealth of their community multiplied as a result of the industrial development and the commercial expansion which followed the building of the hydro-electric plants. They have seen opportunities for men in every class of their citizenship broadened and increased. They have seen young men of their own neighborhood taken into this great home enterprise and advanced to positions of responsibility.

It is declared by experts that approximately $750,000,000 will be required during the present year in the United States to construct and equip plants and other facilities necessary to take care of the increased demand for electricity for power and light. It will take more than a billion dollars to provide the expansion demanded in the field of street railway, gas and other utilities. Funds necessary to put over this great program of expansion must come from people who have money to invest. The wise investor is going to put his money in the safest places available and he would be foolish if he did not gauge the stability of a power company or other utility by

CHEAP GASOLINE

Says Gasoline Will be Selling for Two Cents a Gallon in the Near Future.

The following article from a recent issue of The Monroe Enquirer is of more than passing interest:

Messrs. J. A. Osborne, editor of the Daily News, Washington, N. C., and E. W. Stevens, of New York City, were Monroe visitors yesterday, stopping at the Hotel Joffre. These gentlemen were investigating the old Lewis Mine property near Washaw, and stated that an effort was being made to begin mining operations there in the near future.

DEADLOCK COMES ON FORD OFFER

Committee and Manufacturer Far Apart. Gorgas Plant and Fertilizer Production Two Points at Issue.

Washington, April 25.—An impasse has been reached by the house committee on military affairs and the local representatives of Henry Ford respecting the disposition of Muscle Shoals.

The committee insists that the Gorgas steam plant, on which the Alabama Power company has a $5,000,000. The committee insists that Ford guarantee to produce a standard fertilizer during the 100 year life of the proposed lease.

Ford continues to demand Gorgas and his only concession is to the effect that he will defend his surrender in the courts in the event of litigation. Respecting fertilizer production, he continues to be obstinate. He guarantees to produce a standard fertilizer at a profit not exceeding 5 per cent of the fair, actual, annual cost.

He refuses to bind himself to continue the production for any number of years, and is understood to be of the opinion that the government should not insist on development that production is at a loss.

The attitude of the committee respecting Gorgas is that the government is in honor bound to give the Alabama Power company an opportunity to acquire it from the government direct and that as it is not satisfied with the operation of nitrate plants 9 miles distant, it is content with sound business principles that it will be permitted to serve where it is greatly needed.

The committee is obstinate regarding fertilizer production. If it turns over to Ford property worth $100,000,000 it is determined that it is able to tell the people that it secured the production of a finished, high grade and inexpensive fertilizer for 100 years.

Both the members of congress, and especially those who are members of the military committee, including Representatives Wright of Georgia and Stoll of South Carolina, are alarmed lest the impasse can be represented of Ford are also in danger and that one of them, J. W. Worthington, has remarked to the committee that Ford had "just as well retire."

It is regarded as highly probable that the committee will see Ford to come to Washington and meet with the committee in executive session. There is belief that if Ford would come much of the confusion would be eliminated, and that it would be possible to put his offer, amended as the committee would have it through the house.

A meeting of those interested in re-organizing the Sunday school baseball league in Chester was held yesterday afternoon and it was decided that Chester would again have Sunday school baseball this year with at least three teams—the Methodist, Presbyterian and Associate Reformed Presbyterians and possibly another team. The First Baptist Sunday school at a conference Sunday morning voted not to enter the league this year. At the meeting yesterday the other denominations expressed a desire that the Baptist would reconsider the matter and hoped that they would put a team in the field. A committee has been appointed to work out the schedule for the games and arrange other details matter.

It should be gratifying news to the people of Chester—equally gratifying the farmers—to know that the cotton co-operative marketing plan went "over the top" in Chester county. Chester county's quota was 6,000 bales and more than 9,100 have been secured to date. This amount is represented by 248 contracts. South Carolina has now secured its quota. However, efforts will be made to get others to become affiliated with the plan. In speaking of the cotton crop we heard a Chester county farmer say that he had noticed that the world would need an extra large amount of cotton next year. "Just more more more" to get the farmers to plant a large crop," he said. There might be a good deal to his argument and too, we note that the "estimators" are ready as they can be. They have planned about six million acres more this year than they did last year.

THE BOLL WEEVIL PROBLEM!

A New Farmer's Bulletin on the Cotton Pest.

Clemson College, April 22—The Extension Service has received, through the aid of Congressman E. H. Dominick, a supply of Farmer's Bulletin 1265, "The Boll Weevil Problem," for distribution among the farmers of the state, and copies may be had from county agents.

This bulletin gives a general account of the boll weevil problem, it deals with the history of the insect in the United States, the damage it has done in different regions, the reason for local variations in damage, the indications for the future, the habits of the weevil so far as they can be ascertained, and the means of reducing weevil injury.

The following is an outline of the practical methods of controlling the boll weevil: (1) Fall destruction of the cotton plants. (2) Destroy as many weevils as possible in hibernation by cleaning up and burning over. (3) If you are not poisoning plants in the fields located in situations where weevil damage will be minimized, if you are poisoning, however, plant your fertile soil with hibernation quarters and concentrate your efforts on thorough control of the weevil in these fields. (4) Prepare the land early and thoroughly in order to obtain an early crop. This means fall plowing.

The Dead Letter Office has been in session ever since the Franklin started our postal service. Even then people addressed mail to Mr. Spheeris Smithers, "Atlantic Coast," and expected him to know just where Zaks lived.

Perhaps they had Zaks's address in letters up in the parrot, maybe a chief full of 'em, but then it was easier to let Ben hunt Zaks. Today people are addressing letters to John Smith, New York, N. Y., or Chicago, Ill. Shaking Uncle Sam can locate him, which is just as incomplete as was Zaks's address of yore. The Postoffice Department asks you to put the number and street in the address. It helps you.

WHY CREAM TESTS VARY.

For many good reasons are there for variation in tests of cream? Sumnerland, Ohio. S. H. S. The question of tests is one of the most irritating that confronts the dairy farmer and the creamery owner. There are many opportunities for this variation that are not understood by the farmer that frequently he will blame the creamery operator for giving him a dishonest test, when this may not be the case. It would be highly desirable for the interests of both parties if a tester were to be employed by the patron, and paid for by them, who would make the tests at the creamery. The creamery operator can check up on these tests by either employing his own tester or by measuring his churn yield against the test made by the patron's tester. Variations in cream tests may be due to conditions under the control of the producer or because of faulty sampling and testing by the purchaser. The following are the chief factors under the control of the producer that may cause variation in cream tests:

1. The position of the cream screw, or skimmilk screw in certain types of separators, will cause a variation in test. Only a slight turn of the screw is required to bring about a change in the test, and this turn may frequently be due to the vibration of the separator or to some accidental cause.

2. Variations in the percentage of fat in the milk of various milkings will also cause a variation in the cream test. Low idid milk will skim thinner cream than rich milk. The addition of fresh cows may change the test of the milk of a herd which will operate to change the test of the skimming cream. These changes in herd tests are well recognized by members of cow testing associations and others who have followed this matter carefully.

3. Variation in the speed at which the separator is being operated and failure to operate at a normal speed will cause variation. As a general rule, the higher the rate of speed the higher is the percentage of fat in the cream. In tests made by Hunziker he found that milk separated at a low speed produced cream testing 18.8 per cent. at normal speed it was 22.2 per cent. and at high speed it was 22.7 per cent.

4. The rate at which milk is fed into the separator also is important. The larger the amount of milk in the separator the greater the amount of cream and the lower the test. The milk float of a separator is important, as it regulates the rate of flow.

Too many farmers consider the float to be unnecessary and either put it aside entirely or neglect to note whether it is operating correctly.

5. The temperature of the milk when separated is another important cause of variation. Cool milk will yield richer cream than warm milk. On a cold day the milk not only cools faster before separation, but the separator is cold and it chills the milk as it passes through. Some men find it desirable to run a small quantity of hot water through the separator before starting to separate on cold days.

6. The amount of water or skimmilk used to flush the separator is one of the minor causes of variation. If a larger amount is used than usual it will have the effect of actually diluting the cream and thereby lowering the test.

Among the causes under the control in part of both producer and creamery man is the condition of the cream at the time of sampling. Samples representative of the entire cream are almost impossible to secure if the cream is not well stirred or if it has dried over the top, if it has been partly churned, or if it has been frozen. The person taking the sample should see that the cream is thoroughly stirred, and if scum and thick the cream should be warmed until it pours freely.

Unless properly taken care of, the sample will deteriorate. If the jar is not kept tightly stoppered, the moisture evaporates and the sample will test too high. A liquid preservative should not be used as it dilutes the sample and gives a test that is too low. The sample must be properly shaken, must be properly prepared for testing, the tester must be efficient, and all the work done carefully. This is merely a problem of the mechanical operation of the test and only competent men should be employed for this purpose. The man who does the sampling and testing should not only be capable, but should be one in whom reliance can be placed.

HAMBONE'S MEDITATIONS

A MULE KICKED ME SO HARD, TERTHER DAY, DOCTUR SAY AN LO'S MAH CONSCIENCE BUT JEBGIN' FUM BE BILL HE MUS' ER DONE KICK HIM TOO!

A Motto for Workers.
By H. Addington Bruce
Many business men, as a general rule, keep on their desks or hang on the walls of their offices printed notices of exhortation or warning. Of such notices, "Do It Now" and "This Is My Baby Day" are the ones most frequently found in business places.

But there is another which ought to be found frequently in the office of these—yet which actually is not.

found. If it is important to prevent wastage of business time, and if it is important to be prompt in the doing of business, it clearly is much more important to do one's business as accurately and thoroughly as possible.

So the business man might find it a real help to keep constantly before their eyes during business hours a card giving the salutary reminder, "Take Pains." Indeed, it might greatly pay them to have a number of such cards printed and hung where their business associates and employees would be sure to see them frequently.

For of there is anything that workers in business seem inclined to forget, it is this same most important principle of accuracy and thoroughness.

This applies to workers in all capacities, from executive heads to workers in the most subordinate positions. Too often haste and carelessness predominate, to the eventual "rust" both of the workers themselves and of the firm—both which they work.

Yet nothing is more likely to prevent a man from achieving business success than slackness in his working standards and his working methods. The output of all slack workers must needs be inferior in quality. And, as incidentally phrased by one keen student of human affairs:

"One of the most insistent things in life is that you are ultimately judged by what you actually accomplish. The busy world gives scant attention to assertion, explanation, protest, apology, or complaint. What counts most is not promise, but performance. Good work speaks for itself. Time spent in promises, regrets and professions is usually unavailing. The present age is intensely practical, and more than ever the race is to the alert, the energetic and the industrious, to workers earnestly intent upon securing actual results."

Hence, to repeat the succinct advice of another equally keen observer:

"Have a work for every moment, and mind the moment's work. Whatever your calling—making all its bearings and details, all its principles, instruments and applications. Let nothing about it escape your notice."

Thoroughness wins! That is a truth which can not be too often or too emphatically proclaimed, especially in these days of numerous experiments of the gospel of "getting by."

And however much workers may resent being admonished by mottoes to "Take Pains" unless they habitually do take pains they are fated forever to remain workers who wonder why they do not make headway in the business world.

of such cards printed and hung where their business associates and employees would be sure to see them frequently.

For of there is anything that workers in business seem inclined to forget, it is this same most important principle of accuracy and thoroughness.

This applies to workers in all capacities, from executive heads to workers in the most subordinate positions. Too often haste and carelessness predominate, to the eventual "rust" both of the workers themselves and of the firm—both which they work.

Yet nothing is more likely to prevent a man from achieving business success than slackness in his working standards and his working methods. The output of all slack workers must needs be inferior in quality. And, as incidentally phrased by one keen student of human affairs:

"One of the most insistent things in life is that you are ultimately judged by what you actually accomplish. The busy world gives scant attention to assertion, explanation, protest, apology, or complaint. What counts most is not promise, but performance. Good work speaks for itself. Time spent in promises, regrets and professions is usually unavailing. The present age is intensely practical, and more than ever the race is to the alert, the energetic and the industrious, to workers earnestly intent upon securing actual results."

Hence, to repeat the succinct advice of another equally keen observer:

"Have a work for every moment, and mind the moment's work. Whatever your calling—making all its bearings and details, all its principles, instruments and applications. Let nothing about it escape your notice."

Thoroughness wins! That is a truth which can not be too often or too emphatically proclaimed, especially in these days of numerous experiments of the gospel of "getting by."

And however much workers may resent being admonished by mottoes to "Take Pains" unless they habitually do take pains they are fated forever to remain workers who wonder why they do not make headway in the business world.

There Are Thousands

Of makes of typewriter ribbons. Some of them are very good; some of them are a nuisance; and a few of them are real typewriter ribbons. If you want the best typewriter ribbon made you will find it at the Chester News.

Try just one and if it is not the best ribbon you have ever used we will make you a present of an Eskimo pie.

They do not cost any more than the ordinary ribbon and they last five times as long, to say nothing of the real satisfaction you get in using them.

ITS NOT WHAT IT COSTS TO GET IN THE NEWS—BUT WHAT IT COSTS YOU TO STAY OUT.

What Does It Cost to Stop Advertising?

You remember James Pyle's Pearline. It had been advertised regularly from 1873 to 1907.

Then the trustees of the estate saw a brilliant chance to save money. They cut out advertising.

Sales dropped like a clap hammer—profits went where soapsuds and bubbles go. In 1914 Pearline, like Jess Willard, tried to come back. But it was too late. The business was sold at a price which is said to have covered barely the value of the machinery and inventory.

Moral: A business will grow as long as it advertises.

A salesforce will thrive as long as it TRIES.

You can't make progress against the current unless you keep rowing. But the harder you row, the faster you go.

How much will The News' readers spend in your store?

Doesn't the answer to that question depend upon you?

Advertise—means to sell.

Not to advertise usually means to lose.
