TRADE AT HOME.

Yes, we should all trade at home. That keeps the dollar here and it keeps going from one hand to another, unless it happens to get into the pocket of some tight-wad where it fades from the line of circulation. However, there are some who're attached to this trade at home business and we feel as if the Made-In-Carolina slogan would also be a good one for this trade at home stuff. Here it is, "All things Being Equal Demand Carolina Products."

The News has boasted trade at home stuff to its readers until some of them have actually come to us and complained, asking that we give them a rest from the argument for this trade at home stuff. Here it is, "What we started out to tell you about was an instance which was called to our attention one day this week. A Chester county man wanted a drive shaft for a Maxwell automobile and went to one of the local automobile dealers or merchants, who gave him a price of $8.00. The man got a mail-order catalogue and ordered one less than $3.00. Now what do you think of that? Do you think that man ought to trade at home? Not on your life, he would have been a fool to have given some local man a present of $5.00 just to be able to say that he was trading at home. The local dealer's price was entirely out of line and it is evident that he is trading with the wrong jobber or else he could have given a better price on the drive shaft. We believe that most Chester firms quote prices in line with the closest of competition but once and awhile some fellow tries to "clean up" and knocks the trade at home business into a happy natural."

BOB JONES WILL CONDUCT REVIVAL AT ABBEVILLE

Abbeville, S. C., May 15.—W. C. Haymaker, of Winona Lake, Indiana, campaign manager for Bob Jones, the evangelist, has arrived in the city and will be here until the meeting which begins June 3, and lasts through the month. Mr. Haymaker will direct the work of the various committees from the different denominations, and will have charge of the erection of the tabernacle which will have a seating capacity of 1,500 and will be erected in one day by volunteer labor. Bob Jones is an evangelist from Montgomery, Alabama, and preached his first sermon when only 14 years of age. He has been at it ever since.

THE FUTURE OF COTTON

What is the future of cotton? This is a question asked at the present time, and a reader deserves a very pertinent inquiry as follows:

"I notice in your editorial on cotton that you continue to be bullish. Apparently one of your principal arguments is 13,000,000 bales. Do you not consider that this contemplated crop is over 50 per cent in excess of the 8,000,000 bales which were reduced to 50 per cent cotton and increased wages force the spinners to charge prices for the finished goods which will invite the buyer to buy less?"

This question, which goes to the fundamentals of the situation, has been repeatedly noticed in this news paper. The Wall Street Journal has always based its conclusions upon the law of supply and demand. Its answer, therefore, must be, yes. If 30 per cent cotton and increased wages force the spinners to charge prices for finished goods that will invite public boycotts, the contemplated consumption of 13,000,000 bales would be reduced.

There is a great scarcity of American cotton, and following the usual law, prices should advance until they reach such a height as to check consumption. Users of raw cotton are always bound to consider what the purchasers of goods will pay as well as the price they pay for raw material. When the price passed 30 cents the consumers' limit had not been reached, and cotton was headed for higher levels.

The sugar suit, in substance charging that it was a violation of the law for an exchange to rig the clearing prices, had an unsettling effect. An official estimate of the intended acreage raised hopes of a large crop. These, with talk of a drive shaft for a Maxwell automobile and went to one of the local automobile dealers or merchants, who gave him a price of $8.00. The man got a mail-order catalogue and ordered one less than $3.00. Now what do you think of that? Do you think that man ought to trade at home? Not on your life, he would have been a fool to have given some local man a present of $5.00 just to be able to say that he was trading at home.

Labor is the uncertain factor in the cotton situation. If it is reasonable and does not try to raise prices against itself, there is a likelihood that for this year at least business will be active and the output of manufacturers large. Purchasing power of consumers is large, and the price index now indicates stability and, probably, slightly higher prices. On the other hand, there is no assurance of a crop of 13,000,000 bales. In present circumstances the Wall Street Journal would consider a large acreage a crop reduction factor, and if weather or insect pests a heavy weevil infestation. Beyond this it does not care to predict the size of a crop yet planted. It hopes for 13,000,000 bales but expects less.

DEATHS IN SCHOOL FIRE

MAY TOTAL FORTY PERSONS

Camden, May 17.—Forty people, men, women and children, are believed to have been lost in the fire which broke out in the Cleveland school house, about six miles southeast of Camden, burned to the ground during a school entertainment.

It is impossible tonight to get the names of those who were burned to death when the building was destroyed, and tonight the entire community is endeavoring with frantic energy to check up the list.

The school term was closing and an entertainment was being given on the second floor of the building, access to which is by a narrow stairway. On the first floor a kerosene lamp was either knocked over or exploded and flimsy material at once caught fire and in a short while the building was burning fiercely. The hall upstairs was packed to the doors and the almost entire fire department was a tremendous rush for the stairway as the flames leaped upward. Dozens jumped from windows and the almost entire fire department was a tremendous rush for the stairway as the flames leaped upward.

The building burned rapidly and in a very short time was a mass of glowing embers. Many people from Camden had gone ahead the closing exercises. Tonight five people had been brought to the hospital here, a distance of about six miles. Three of these were suffering from broken limbs and the other two from burns.

Some of the children from Camden had gone ahead the closing exercises. Tonight five people had been brought to the hospital here, a distance of about six miles. Three of these were suffering from broken limbs and the other two from burns.

The Story Of The Eskimo Pie.

Several years ago C. K. Nelson who had learned something of the confectionery business while working in his father's store at Ottumwa, Ill., decided to try his luck as an ice cream manufacturer. Accordingly he borrowed three thousand dollars and started a small plant. To his dismay the income from the business did not begin to keep up with the expenditures. He stuck tight, hoping that the tide would turn, but as he would be found himself getting deeper and deeper in debt.

One day after he worked and often far into the night he cudgled his brain for some plan that would turn failure to success and save his business. At last an idea came—a somewhat revolutionary idea. It was to manufacture and market bars of ice cream coated with chocolate. He felt sure the novel confection would be both popular and profitable but, like everyone else who considered the proposition of coating ice cream with warm chocolate from a theoretical standpoint, he was not at all sure that the thing could be done.

After numerous discouraging failures he finally hit upon the successful plan of dipping bars of ice cream in melted chocolate at a temperature of 90 degrees, wrapping them in tin foil and then pack them away in ice, after a long, hard fight he obtained a patent on the idea. Then began the difficult task of interesting investors in the invention in order that it might be developed commercially. It was rough, up-hill going and enormous difficulties and discouragements were encountered but Nelson held on like a pig to a root. The result was that he finally succeeded in raising enough capital to begin manufacturing his product. Success came immediately. The business grew by leaps and bounds for the Eskimo Pie won favor wherever it was introduced. Today it is sold by the million, being carried by confectioners all over the country. The inventor gets a royalty five cents on every dozen made and sold. His income averages some $30,000 dollars weekly.

Some say it was luck pure and simple that brought success and fortune to Nelson. But taking into account the hard work, the determination and the stick-to-itiveness that entered into the conception and development of the idea, getting it patented and finally marketing it, most of our readers no doubt will agree that there was a great deal more to it than luck. The same success will come to any young man who avails an equally good idea and doggedly plugs away until he has developed, clinched and "sold" to folks willing and eager to buy.

BUYERS STRIKE IN BUILDING.

A "buyers' strike" appears to be developing in the building industry, which has been employing a tremendous boom. A survey of 242 American cities and towns shows that April undertakings fell off 16 per cent as compared with March figures, and May is expected to show a greater decrease.

Recent developments in New York City have shown the tendency in a striking way. Within a few days big projects involving more than $50,000,000 of construction work have been postponed indefinitely because of high bids. They include a $44,000,000 orphan asylum, a $10,000,000 addition to Columbia University, a $2,000,000 Y. M. C. A. building, $11,000,000 extension of the New York Telephone Company and other enterprises of similar nature. Public buildings, public utilities and electricities are first to yield from the pinch of high building prices. Office structures and homes may follow. It is inevitable, with materials and wages soaring. Philanthropy cannot afford the cost and investment cannot take the risk of building at the peak and losing through a subsequent slump.

It may be that nobody is to blame for the return of war-bum building costs. There has been such a great demand for construction that builders have been bidding eagerly for labor and materials, and in the case of labor at least, often paying big bonuses to get what they needed promptly.

That kind of competition is bound to raise costs. The result is so unwholesome and unsafe that a relaxing of the demand is a good thing, if it does not go too far. The labor unions, building material men and contractors can keep it from going too far if they want to, by concerted effort to give reasonable values, in goods and labor, for money paid.

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE.

By Brice Belden, M. D.

As we advance in age and our arteries harden the blood pressure rises. There has long been a belief that this rise in pressure was in itself a sinister thing, just as fever was long regarded as something to be feared. Just as we know the fever is an index of the body's fighting power in the presence of an infection, so we now know that the increased pressure of advancing age is a corrective effort on the part of nature.

High blood pressure of this type simply means that nature is compensating for something—that conditions exist that can only be met by a higher pressure, if the circulation and all the collateral processes dependent upon the circulation are to go on.

If such a pressure were reduced, there would only have been accomplished a reduction of the circulation below what would be normal under the circumstances. It might be said that a high blood pressure of the sort we are writing about is an ill-advisedly lowered there are pretty sure to be unpleasant symptoms. Harm is likely to be done in this way, shown by shortness of breath, interference with kidney action and an accumulation of water in the lungs.

One of the reasons why a high pressure is necessary in elderly individuals is because along with the hardening of the arteries there is more or less alteration in the kidneys themselves. This alteration tends to obstruct the circulation in these organs and this obstruction can only be met by a heightened pressure, in order that the elimination of toxins may go on.

It ought to be plain that high pressures under these circumstances is a safety valve which must not be tampered with in a foolhardy manner, and that it is by no means inconsistent with a very fair degree of health.

So they greased the bottom of the ship

SMART builders of smart ships, those hardy settlers along the Atlantic Coast just after the Revolution. Many a time their sharp-bull barks and brigantines showed their heels to the Mediterranean blockade and carried American goods into Marseilles. And one ingenious device for getting a knot or two of extra speed was the greasing of the vessel's bottom. So while the friction of the water held back their pursuers, they slipped onward to safety.

Friction is always a drag against progress, especially in the case of motor-cars and trucks. For years this company has been aiming at the conquest of friction by means of a lubricating oil scientifically designed. We've been successful. Ask for Polarine, the "Standard" oil for motor lubrication—not just "a quart of oil."

Miss Maeie Ellis Killed Several Miles Out From "Easy"—Man Slightly Hurt.

Greenville, May 17.—Miss Marie Ellis, said to have been from Spartanburg, was killed about 9 o'clock tonight when an automobile in which she and a man companion were riding along the Eastly Bridge road, several miles out of this city, left the road at a curve and turned over.

The man who is said to have been a Mr. Rutledge from one of the mill villages near the city, was not badly injured, and after having his wounds dressed at the city hospital left for his home without leaving a complete record of his name and address.

"The Yard of Quality"

WELCOME JAIL.

The other day a gifted man, an inventor of mechanical appliances and capable of turning $10,000 a year, voluntarily surrendered himself to go to prison for six months.

It was in order that he might take the drug cure and make himself fit to take a position with a motor car company.

He was 36 years of age. His speech and appearance were those of a man of education and ability. Doubtless jail was a humiliation to him; but he had sense enough to see that it was not nearly so great a humiliation as being a down and out victim of the drug habit.

The taking of drugs is more appalling than insanity. It is worse than insanity, because the victim is considered by others and often considered himself to be entirely a free agent. Really he is bound secretly by the most horrible of fetters.

We send insane persons to asylums and sick persons to hospitals. When humanity shall come of age she shall send those whom we now call criminals to prison in precisely the same spirit.

At present our penitentiaries and prisons are but expressions of a blind vengeance. Sordidly, has hurt us and we want to hurt them.

If we can ever get jails up into the light of reason and intelligence the wretched will be as glad to go to jail as a man with a diseased mind will be glad to go to a sanitarium.

The Golden Rule Mayor of Toledo some years ago instructed his policemen that they were to act as the friends of the people and not as the enemies.

Every jail should be a friendly place, a place where deficient men and women are given proper care and supervision until they are brought back to normality.

The trouble with our whole punitive system is the idea that is behind it, the idea of punishment and vengeance. We ought to get rid of that, and put the same idea behind the penitentiary that is back of the hospital, the idea that it is a place to help and cure people and not to abuse and injure them.

The whole war conception is wrong. The decent portion of society should not be at war with criminals, but should be friend of criminals, not for the purpose of coddling them, but for the purpose of helping them get rid of their criminality.

It was not so very long ago that we treated insane people as we would treat dogs. We cast them out and stoned them. We have got over that brutality. Now we are sorry for them and try to protect and cure them.

It is not meudin sentimentalism, but it is sound common sense to approach the whole criminal problem with humanity and with science and not with barbarous vengeance.

A deep knowledge of the classics won't help you when looking for a good job.

IMMIGRATION AND ITS EFFECTS ON COTTON PRICES

The following article is from a recent issue of The Progressive Farmer and was written by B. L. Farmer, a man who is well versed on the subject discussed:

Recent and prospective legislation affecting the admission of immigrants to America is likely to result in a profound effect on the industrial and economic conditions in the United States and the South particularly. Our cotton production, it seems, are beginning at last to see that we cannot keep on admitting any and all classes of people, if our American interests and the interests of Americans are to be preserved.

A year ago or so Congress passed a law authorizing country at a rate not to exceed 3 per cent per annum of the total of such nationality in America at the time the law was passed. The object and effect of this was and has been to exclude many thousands of Southern and Eastern Europeans—peoples differing from us in ideals and standards of living and difficult of assimilation. At the same time, the law, as intended, has encouraged the entrance of undesirable immigrants—peoples closely akin racially to us, familiar with our form of government, and quickly assimilable.

Under the late Mr. Clegg, Congress, which seems to have a good chance of passage, would cut the percentage to 2, based upon the 1930 census. This will mean the closing of the door to undesirable. It is stated that under the present law we are getting about 350,000 immigrants a year, and that a new measure would give us about 168,000 a year. Compare this with the million or more a year we were getting a year ago, and it is hard to see how drastic the cut has been and will be.

For one, I favor excluding every foreigner who has been convicted of the makings of a good citizen. I have too many "reds" already. I shall ask my Representatives in Congress to vote for the new ideal measure now proposed, because I believe we need quality in citizenship, rather than quantity.

Negroes Go North

I believe that such measures are to be permanently in force hereafter, and that they are bound to have profound effects upon industry and agriculture, in the South particularly. When we were getting a million immigrants a year, most of them went into the great industries of the North and West. This great stream has now been dammed back, (North industrial centers are needing labor, and in order to get the pull of high wages is steadily taking Negroes out of the South.)

For 50 years, the men who have grown cotton, wheat and corn have been underpaid. This has been so because millions of laborers from Europe kept the Northern industries supplied, and there was no need of our underpaid surplus of labor. So it was that we could cotton at starvation wages or starve. Distance, lack of communication, and a total ignorance of the higher wages in the North. High wages during war times broke the jam at first, and hundreds of thousands of Negroes went North. This stream continues steadily, and will continue, it seems to me, until wages and living conditions, rural and urban, North and South, are of something like a parity.

Cheap Labor Costs

The ultimate effect of all this, it appears to me, is going to be a measurable benefit of the cotton-growing South. Our cheap labor is going to be cheap no longer. It has been that way since the Negroes came, and it is going to get them. Cotton production cannot pay these higher wages, then enough producers are going elsewhere to an extent that will automatically decrease production and increase prices.

If we have a 2½% problem, it too is going to be simplified by the operation of these influences. There is bound to be a dilution of Negroes over the United States, wider by far than ever before. The labor market will grow wider, but white North-acker.

There has been and will be competition at our door to get their possibly some sections and individuals will be temporarily hurt by it. Manufacturing and industrial centers have been and are being forced for a modification of the immigration restrictions. But amid all this, it will be well for us to remember that America has already come to the verge of nearly letting in more people than we are capable of supporting. The proposed further restrictions will benefit the whole nation, and the Cotton Belt in particular.

REWARD OFFERED IN DEATH OF YOUNG MOUNT

Chicago, May 16.—A reward of $10,000 was offered today by the trustees of Northwestern University at the request of Dr. Walter Dill Scott, president of the institution, for definite information that would clear up the mystery connected with the mysterious disappearance of Leighton Mount, who disappeared Sept. 21, 1921, after a class meet-

YOU OWE IT TO YOUR CHILDREN - TO YOUR FAMILY TO SEE THAT THEY GET THE MOST NUTRITIOUS WHOLE-SOME BAKINGS.

Don't take the chance of sacrificing quality, economy and food value by using self-rising flour mixtures. They are only substitutes for good plain flour and good baking powder.

The best baking results are obtained from good baking powder and plain flour. The results are far better than from self-rising flour.

There is no substitute for good baking powder and plain flour.

Economy does not necessarily mean cheapness of price, nor does it mean the easiest way. In these times the greatest care should be used in determining between true economy and the sham of mere cheapness because there are so many preparations and substitutes in the way of leavening agents on the market.

For best results use—Calumet Baking Powder and a good plain flour.

THE FAITHLESS TURK.

The way the Turks have been treating the French lately is rather amusing to the general onlooker from this side of the water. France, it will be remembered, asked the Allies for help in helping the Turks to get on their feet again after the Allies had put them thoroughly out of business. The Turkish Sultan was rightly deserved. It looked like the opportunity, destined for centuries, for European civilization to get rid of the Turkish peril. But France, for her own purposes, supplied the Turks with arms and money, got their riddled armies into fighting trim again and backed them against Greece. France hoped to get profit out of it through Ottoman concessions, and a firmer grip on her own on Asia Minor, and wanted to strengthen Turkey against the British.

Everybody knows what happened. The Turks, under Kemal Pasha, came back so vigorously that, having smashed the Greeks, they de-

WIDOWS ARE WITNESSES

When we stop to think that there are 5,000,000 widows in the United States who do not have the common comforts of life, we know the neglect that has been made for provision, and when we look around us and know that there are very small percentages of our high school boys have the opportunity of getting a college education, we see another great reason for the progress of life insurance. These things are the makings to look at. Contrasted with them is the happy home which is kept together by the life insurance policy, and no matter how small the policy may be, if it is barely sufficient to keep the home together, it has done a wonderful work because the home is the unit of civilization in this country of ours, and if the roof is kept over their heads and the family can be kept together, they will manage some way to get through and make their way.

There is no question in the mind of any thinking person that the life insurance business is the greatest business in the world, both from its financial magnitude, as well as from the great good that it does.

A policy contract in the good old "Union Central" would be a wonderfully good thing for each man reading this advertisement to do. Many families in Chester county would today be out in the middle of the "big road" had it not been for policies I had had the honor of writing on the heads of those families.

A BOY-BUILT BUNGALOW.

Under the management of a little boy, the superintendent of a school of 12 high school boys have just finished building a bungalow residence for a progressive citizen of a little town. The total cost was $5,000.

The excitation was made, the foundation and cement walls laid and the superstructure erected exclusively by boy labor. They even took the place of assistants to plumbers, painters and electricians. The boy was satisfied with the job and has saved some money on costs. The boys are a few dollars to the good per capita, and the job of house building is the "talk of the town." The family will move in shortly and will give a reception in honor of the boy carpenters, who are, the fact, the members of a vocational training class of the high school.

Now, here is an example of a piece of real education. Handicraft, hard work, school credit, modest earnings and a neighborhood recognition and honor, all combined. We are especially proud of this class, and are proud to see it as lined them up for a photo.

It is doing the job that counts. Vocational instruction with little or no vocational practice is the most discouraging situation the city high school. A boy can not learn to build a house by looking at the drawings and reading the specifications. Worst of all, such state methods fail to awaken even his interest, much less to stir his emotions.

The athletic development of the schools has done much during recent years to keep youths in line. But in the many situations where the extramural program is all athletics and no shop work the thing is badly off-ended.

There is not a class of common industrial work from carpentry to carpet weaving, but that the rudiments of it could and should be taught in the public schools. We are still training far too many five-hundred-dollar boys. No girl should be given a high school diploma until she is proficient in at least one line of household or industrial art.

Thus, we shall in time, merge industry and so-called culture, proving them to be halves of the same complete course of training.

Nervous Break-Down

MRS. ANNIE LANGE, R. P. D. 1, Burlington, Tex., writes as follows regarding her experience with Cardui: "Some time ago I had a nervous break-down of some kind. I was very weak and nervous. I had sleepless nights and suffered a great deal, but more from the weak, tremulous, no-account feeling than anything else. I knew I needed a tonic, and needed it badly. I began the use of Cardui to see if I couldn't get some strength, as I knew of other cases that had been helped by the school."

FEDERAL ROAD BUILDING DURING THE PAST YEAR

Federal aid road building during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1925, has progressed steadily toward the goal of almost 200,000 miles to be included in the Federal aid highway system, reports the Bureau of Public Roads, United States Department of Agriculture. On March 31, 7,895 miles had been completed since the beginning of the fiscal year, and with three months of good construction weather still remaining it appears likely that the 10,000 miles completed in the preceding fiscal year will at least be equaled. At the same time, prospects are good for rapid progress during the coming fiscal year, as on March 31 there was under construction 14,000 miles and slightly more than 10,000 miles in prospects approved but which have not reached the construction stage.

The family weighs anchor

TODAY we don't wait on the porch for breezes to seek us out. Instead, the whole family sets out to take all the fresh air it needs. We make our own breezes. One invention has brought this wholesome change into the life of town and country—the internal combustion engine, driven by gasoline.

A great new force—a great new influence. Highway transport is now reported to have created an entire transport in capital investment; the last decade alone saw sixteen billions of new capital go into highways and motor vehicles. As the pioneer in motor fuels, the Standard Oil Company (New Jersey) feels in no small degree responsible for this development. No place is too remote for an "S. O." pump. Ask for "Standard" Motor Gasoline—by name.
