AGREE UPON DRAFT BILL

Provision for Colonel to Lead Division to France Stricken Out. Proposal for Volunteer Reservations to Polish Mexican Border Also Deleted. Two of House Conference Objections.

Washington, May 10.—The long deadlock of senate and house conferees on the selective draft military bill was broken today with agreement on a compromise measure under which a great army would be men between the ages of 21 and 36 inclusive.

Authorization for recruiting Col. Roosevelt's proposed volunteer division for service in France, written into the bill by the senate and defeated Thursday by the senate conference, finally was thrown out on the insistence of compromise representing the house. In return, the house yielded to the senate's proposal for prohibition of military posts. The conference report, making the bill to be approved by both senate and house within a few days, and within two weeks after the president has affixed his signature reorganization of these statutes for conscription will be under new management. Some States already have selected their registration boards and the war department has issued a vast field of intricate war machine for training camps in September.

The compromise bill is understood to be a preliminary measure to the administration of the army general staff, on whose advice the original bill was framed.

The most important change made in congress was in the age limit, fixed by the staff at 18 to 25, inclusive. The senate raised them 21 and 36 and the house 21 and 49. The agreement in the conference agreement at 21 and 36, inclusive, making the draft applicable to all men under 36.

Although there has been no direct substantive expression from the White House regarding the Roosevelt volunteer proposal, administration spokesmen have indicated from the fact that no provision for volunteers was contained in the bill as sent to congress from the department.

With the Roosevelt proposal, the conferees also have agreed on a amendment under which three regiments of volunteers could be raised for service on the Mexican border.

The section dealing with exemptions from draft registration in part by the conferees, including provisions for the business and professional classes, was also amended. It will now be subject to a second trial and finally to a second trial and finally to a second trial.

Jacksoville, Fla., May 9.—Declaring that there shall be no loafers in Florida, the nation needs soldiers and the farmer calls for hands, Governor Catts has ordered efforts to start a crowd-up of volunteers. Locally the campaign is being carried on even closer and deputies are bringing orders to the county jail without the general charge of vagrancy and loitering. The governor's instructions called upon sheriffs to advise men who did not work to make honest efforts to get employment in the army or navy with the alternative of being drafted. The order was issued a few days ago and today the officers started working, visiting positions and other housing places. The campaign is general throughout the state.

As Commissioner of Agriculture, Wade of Alabama, very aptly says, there are three ways men of the South can help in the war: they can fight or furnish credit; they can fight or furnish credit; they can fight or furnish credit. This is the only way in which a man can do the fighting and not be drafted. It is the only way in which a man can do the fighting and not be drafted. It is the only way in which a man can do the fighting and not be drafted.

HARK! YOU ENVOYS! DIXIE IS CALLING

The South years for the impudent presence of the French and British in Mexico. Dixie is calling for a more aggressive policy.

SWEET POTATOS ARE CHEAP FOOD

Settlement of Methods of Handling Sweet Potatoes. Greatly Improved Product, Says Department of Agriculture.

Washington, D. C., May 10.—Sweet potatoes can be made an important and cheap source of food, say specialists in the United States department of agriculture. It is quite easy to increase the acreage enormously and the adoption of better methods of handling and storing would improve the product to such an extent that the demand would be greatly stimulated.

Storing sweet potatoes has always been a more difficult problem than producing them. A large part of the southern crop is kept in pits and bins, with the result that probably thirty per cent of the potatoes decay and even those which are fit to put on the market do not keep well.

These difficulties can be done away with by treatment by the use of sweet potato storage houses, the management and a structure of which is discussed in the Farmers' Bulletin 818 of the department of agriculture. Records covering the storage of six hundred tons of sweet potato tubers for an average period of 124 days show the average loss to be only four per cent.

The important thing is that the British and French come down our way and we can face it or face it whether fighting or fighting men. It is possible that the South needs to be aware of its own strength and its own weakness.

The Power of Insistence.
It is the continued application of will power which accomplishes the best results in every field of endeavor by which we may engage. Those who are easily discouraged, rarely, if ever, become telling factors in life's problems, and are forced to wait longer or later by others who are credulous than themselves to reach a desired goal. It may take years to achieve the ambition we have in mind, but the delay does not necessarily rob them of their triumph and real usefulness. In fact, it often happens that it is only by ceaseless endeavor and the continued concentration of will upon the matter in hand that we are able to attain the desired results. The answer of Thomas A. Edison to a friend who had inquired of him how he was getting along with a certain piece of work on which he had been engaged for thirty years was simply this: "The importance of continued application." "Sometimes I think we are making progress, and then again I think we are not, but the only way we can achieve it is by keeping everlastingly at it, and when I can't work I let my men work on it, and we are slowly getting results."

Insistence is a quality of mind the importance of which is being recognized more and more every day, and perhaps it never had a better opportunity for displaying its possibilities than in the present campaign for food production and conservation. We do not, as a people, entirely recognize the vital importance of this campaign as yet, but by degrees we are being educated to a better understanding of the issues at stake, and only because of the insistence of the agricultural experts, the newspaper, the publicity bureaus, the youth leagues and all the other important agencies which have undertaken to do the educating, have we, as a people, every patriotic citizen in the United States. These agencies have learned the value of the concentration of will upon the subject at hand, and of insistence in the matter of laying before the people of the country the importance of the cooperative method of them. They are again, day in and day out, doing this, and they are not discouraged by the setbacks which we have met and are met. We shall probably have no better chance to put in practice the qualities of mind and heart which insure cooperation in a cause than at the present time, which confront us at the food crisis which confronts us at the present time. It is surely the crisis of our life, and we are called upon to meet it with the same determination and the same courage as we meet any other crisis which we meet.

Submarine Campaign Threatens Cotton and Tobacco Prices.
Imperative as were then the reasons for making every farm feed itself, these reasons have been made doubly emphatic by developments since America's entry into the war. A month ago we refer, of course, to the newly discovered facts as to the alarming success of Germany's submarine campaign. A month ago most of us supposed that this campaign was not succeeding so well as we have many had expected. On the other hand, it appears that it is now surpassing the Kaiser's expectations, and even if Germany planned it is safe to state that each month she is taking 1,000,000 tons capacity, while as a matter of fact she is actually taking 1,200,000 tons a month. So conservative an agency as the Associated Press declared that "each week the German keep up their present rate of destruction officials admit without hesitation that their campaign has cleared the seas." It is the belief of The Progressive Farmer that the Germans will not stop up this present rate of destruction in the least. That sentiment which must be held and will be found to extend the extent of their ravages. At the same time we must face the fact that after all we must face the fact that after all it is a commodity which in this respect is unobtainable in Europe. This is a fact which is being forgotten by many of our people, and which has caused the food which we are accustomed to the struggle to make the limited means serve their needs and even if our supplies were to be cut off, we should have the means to do so. The Progressive Farmer has all that he wants in the way of cotton and tobacco. He has a long list of worldly possessions which he has accumulated through the years. He has a car, a house, and other things which he has accumulated through the years. He has a car, a house, and other things which he has accumulated through the years.

Gettin' Mech-Out of Little. Those persons who are compelled to get the most out of a very little are, in fact, the ones who live the sanest and highest lives. They are accustomed to the struggle to make the limited means serve their needs and even if our supplies were to be cut off, we should have the means to do so. The Progressive Farmer has all that he wants in the way of cotton and tobacco. He has a long list of worldly possessions which he has accumulated through the years. He has a car, a house, and other things which he has accumulated through the years.

It is such persons who learn from the outset to value their few possessions, who look upon them with an appreciation that their more fortunate brethren are unable to understand. They manage to get more out of their limited resources than would seem possible, and it seems that the simpler their needs, the fewer their pleasures, the sinner and more wholesome their lives. It is a fact which we should take a justifiable pride in, and which is in the acquisition of those things in life for which they have to strive every day and night.
