While it is true that Chester is host of a considerable quantity of paved streets, it is also true that there are many streets in the city which ought to be paved. To pave those streets that are not paved would mean the expenditure of a considerable amount of money and this, of course, would mean an increase in the way of taxes.

It is the usual custom when building paved streets to assess the property holder on each side of the street one-fourth the cost and the city pays for the other half. This was the plan used in paving certain streets in Chester a few years ago. The cost to the property holders was in most cases around three dollars a front foot.

The fact has been called to the attention of The News, and we have also taken personal notice of same for the past few years, that where concrete gutters are built and clay roadways are built, a very satisfactory thoroughfare is secured. A fitting illustration of this kind can be found at Great Falls.

The trouble with the dirt streets of Chester today is, the fact that the material hauled and placed on the streets is soon washed away, and then more topsoil must be hauled. With concrete gutters the material placed between the gutters remains and the heavy upkeep is thereby eliminated to a great extent.

The idea comes in, as that if those people in Chester who do not have asphalt streets would agree to pay for the concrete gutters in front of their property, the city could furnish the material for the roadway and in this manner we would soon have excellent streets which could be maintained considerably less than those at present in vogue.

The News would like to see the city council and the Chamber of Commerce get together on this plan and see if it cannot be worked out. We feel that they would like the co-operation of the property owners without much trouble.

From all sections of the State come complaints about the failure of the South Carolina Highway Commission to make refunds on the amounts paid for license tags. It has been more than a month since the law was passed authorizing the refund and the people are complaining very much. However, the highway commission advises that they expect to get this money out within the next few days.

Many people did not order their license tags awaiting the final action of the legislature as to the exact fees, and The News personally knows of parties who applied for their license tags a month ago yet they have not yet received them. On the other hand, the highway commission has recently appointed inspectors who have been told to go out and round up those who have no tags. And the commission wonders why the people "case em."

Forgiveness And Cleansing.

Saint John the beloved Apostle, in his first Epistle, chapter 1:8-9 says: "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and righteous to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."

There is no fact within the reach of man's knowledge, that is more universally known, than the fact of sin. And the greatest and most universal need of the human family, is to be released from sin, and set free.

What is the object of spending so much money in the construction of school buildings, and the enormous sums of money required to maintain schools, colleges and universities? The object is to get rid of ignorance.

Laboratories are maintained throughout the world for manufacturing and compounding medicines. What for? To get rid of disease.

I am not a socialist; but I suppose that one main object of socialism, is to get rid of poverty.

But the prime object of Christianity is to get rid of sin.

The Gospel, in the New Testament, lays its finger on the moral evil, pointing to it as the real mischief which causes the misery of the whole race of man.

"We have all sinned and are short of the glory of God."

To deny the reality of sin, is to take to sin's own knowledge of right and wrong.

John's meaning is that those who say, "We have no sin," deny their responsibility, and cannot be blamed. He does not mean to say that one cannot live without sinning. To take that attitude, would reflect upon God's ability, and contradict Christ's promise, to keep those who put their trust in him.

I am aware that it is claimed by multitudes that it is impossible for us to live without sinning.

No one would be so rash as to deny that God's desire and will is that man should live a sinless life. Then to contend that sin is a necessity, would be tantamount to the assertion, that Satan is strongest, and has more power than God.

But to deny that we need to be redeemed, is to make God a liar. In the Scripture, when Jesus Christ made, His the only hope of absolving us from sin.

The multiplicity of promises of forgiveness and removal of sin, we should have no fears about God's willingness to forgive; and his readiness to give us a new sense of life. That is the very purpose for which He sent His Son to die.

How reassuring are the words of Jesus, when He says: "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. For every one that asketh, receiveth; and to him that knocketh, it shall be opened."

To confess, sin, is to own up to them before God; to make acknowledgment to heart and tongue. In other words, it is to take God's word in the matter of our guilt.

Just as we reveal to the doctor, all our trouble and sufferings, so must we confess to God, and absolve ourselves to Him, for healing grace. But confession, to be efficacious, implies forsaking the sin confessed, and reconstruction of the principles of our life.

Much so-called repentance is only sorrow at being caught in the wrong. It is not to inform God, who already knows; but to train us into a personal relation to Him.

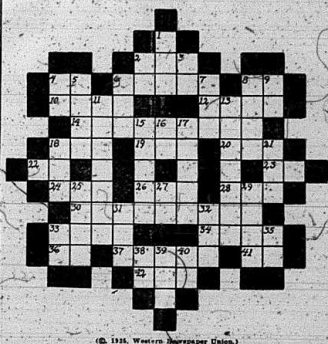

We cannot earn or merit forgiveness by penance or otherwise; for it is a free gift, which is the outcome of God's nature and justice.

"If we confess our sins, God is faithful and righteous to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."

We greatly need cleansing as well as forgiveness. And a really watered conscience desires freedom from all defilement as well as forgiveness for sins committed.

GETTING THE GIZZARD

By Wickett Wannabold

A young man was being entertained at dinner one day. They had yellow-legged chickens in his honor.

After the grown folks had seated themselves the youngsters who had been made to wait for the second-table crowded around the dining-room door and refused to be showed away.

They were in a state of supplication, except the waiter of the chicken was passed to the minister, their excitement increased.

And when the minister helped himself there was a host of dismay: "Oh Lord, he's got the gizzard!"

That gizzard was the cause of all the agitation. The gizzard was an institution with those children. When they had chicken the gizzard occupied the center of the stage. "Who gets the gizzard?" was the burning question. Each of them wanted it.

After apologies and explanations had been made, the minister, who was a regular fellow, stuck his fork into the gizzard and walked to the dining-room door with it and with much ceremony presented it to the children.

But not all people who visit other people are so discerning or so diplomatic, or so cooperative. Now, we knew an old lady whose untoward conduct on taking her departure was to stand in the door and hold it open and talk for 15 minutes. In Summer she filled the house with flies and mosquitoes. In Winter she froze folks stiff. No amount of blinling could get her in or out until she was good and ready.

And we knew an old man who used to come over just before supper time—and he came a great deal. When the supper bill rang he would refuse an invitation to the table because he had "done dinnering" for his host.

And he would also refuse to come into the diningroom and sit and talk with the folks while they ate. No, he would going right then. But he had just one thing he wanted to say. And then he would talk for 30 minutes without catching his breath.

Folks who visit folks and plunge around and thoughtlessly ahead without noticing where they are going and what they are stepping on, not only get folks' gizzards but they are apt to get their goats also.
