Who Really Did Win Classes Night?

We would just like to make a few comments about Classes Night this year. In a preceding editorial, O. C. Johnsons' editotial page stated that this was a question as to whether it was really the classes that did win or lost. We would just like to say that we thought it did last week, and that their skill was certainly magnificent. Their Moslem was breathtaking, and we have heard many comments to the effect that the senior class truly deserved to win the title. The attitude was noticeable when the senior class made the entrance—this entire auditorium, including the other classes, was moved to applauses. We think respect for the senior class scored during the entire night.

Not only did the seniors command respect and attention, but also the Classes Night spirit was shared by all four classes. The class of Class IV are capable and promising students. The respective class songs were sung by the entire student body, as was the class game of "Oh, Brother, How Much Are You Worth." We know what this is, and it is true.

Thus, the individual classes received a feeling of oneness, and we think the entire student body really had this feeling. The classes united on the silver silver and also united on the even more covered respect of their present in the auditorium that night. The evening was entertaining and, one must say that this year Classes Night certainly reestablished its original purpose.

Blind Date May Be Fun

Clemson Man, WC Woman

Have Many Dissimilarities

By LOISALE HANER

Hereafter simply at Whiteman, a freshman usually finds himself as his own best companion. brews from then on, when he has taken advantage of this the guy, when he has taken advantage of this opportunity to learn the "same thing" in "a different way." Have you heard how much it costs to get drunk? You and your friends have probably observed on their first blind date, "hi, this is my friend, let's go on a date, me, we go nowhere. Have you heard this story about a girl who is "drinking for fun" or by telling her friend's boyfriend, or her best friend's boyfriend, or her friend's boyfriend's best friend to see who can get the most blind dates? Wine is a very useful drink, however, it is possible for the girl who has the date to be the aggressor. It is unknown that she is sitting on her 藻ent,"people say, don't turn out that well, there.

Who Really Did Win Classes Night?

We would just like to make a few comments about Classes Night this year. In preceding editorial, the appropriateness of Classes Night on this campus was second-guessed. It accomplished its original purpose. We would like to restate that since Classes Night was held last week.

Everywhere you turned and their spirit was simply magnificent. Their courtesy was breathtaking, and we have heard many comments to the effect that the senior class truly deserved to win.

But the spirit is not the only respect and attention, but also the Classes Night spirit was shared by all four classes. Each class, in its own fashion, presented a respective class song sung by the entire student body. We think that this is one of the finest things that the individual class that wins is important. It creates a unity that is based on the entire student body and in to togetherness.

Thus, the individual classes received feeling of togetherness, and we think the entire student body received this feeling together. The seniors gained the cortisol oval cap, and they also gained the ever-growing respect of those present in the auditorium at the ceremony that night. The evening was an enjoyable and entertaining one. We must say that this year Classes Night certainly accomplished its original purpose.

Bicyclists: Arise For Equal Rights

A while ago The Status Symbol on campus was The Student Who Owned Her Own Bicycle. Now it is the Student Who Does Not Own Her Own Bicycle and the college gravitated and moved seriously to accept bicycling. And, for a time, all vehicles on campus had a parking space reserved for them.

But now a new transportation vehicle has been rediscovered. The latest "in" group are turning up their noses at cars and Fords. For intra-campus trade and short excursions, this group is clinging to the handy, old-fashioned bicycle.

Bicyclists claim derived advantages in favor of the all-American bike—they say it's quicker than walking and easier than running. Bicyclists also say that keeping it low is easy and the exercise helps figure projection.

In addition to the numbers who are already two-wheeled-around campus, others are probably even a larger group, who are enviously eyeing the students who bicycle and who are already making plans to acquire their own Bikes. In most hate cases Bikes are the kept, imported, foreign brands of com- mans and poppies. At any rate, hardly a day goes by that someone doesn't get a bike—or at least mention getting one.

But the real bicycle ownership is not always smooth—between the campus and campus. The new owner seems to discover that his bicycle parking space provided for her by the rules. Therefore she must leave it, proped against the dorm wall or anything else that looks like a suitable and safe parking space during classes. At night the two-wheeled vehicle is left by the dorm wall or by the steps in the way the owner himself has an impression to do it.

Frankly, we are predicting that the number of bicyclists on campus will continue to increase. Harvard, for instance, is in a fairly easy cycling distance for the student body. We think that the students feel like walking or the Burger-Chef. In addition, the completion of the new shopping center nearby should attract bicycle-users who don't care for a hike downtown.

And with the growing number of circles the problem of their parking will increase. Many times certain tents exist from class buildings are made hazardous for hurrying students by the bicycle.

Students also wonder about when they are supposed to park the vehicles. Certain rules are not always clear. In Harford. And, some worried, protection of their property is rather difficult—since these rules are lacking. A lime like night easily be signal err for vandalism while a group of the probably would not eat.

Now, we say, it is up to the students—owners of bicycles, the prospective owners and the walkers—who don't care to break a leg on a carelessly placed bicycle—to appeal to the authorities of the school administration for provision of these vehi- cles. The right to have the bicycle in a specific parking place, especially, makes the problem a common campus problem. The same problem exists at various colleges.

Taxes Could Support Scholarships

A new policy toward college scholarships has been gaining some support from educators, legislators and businessmen. This is that all students of sufficient mental ability should have the opportunity to obtain higher education at "tax supported" institutions if other funds are not available.

Many times capable and promising stu- dents are not able to attend college because they are unable to obtain sufficient funds. There are many scholarships available, but these often go to students of certain sort of conditions with them.

In some cases these scholarships cannot be ob- tained, but those involving in debt for several years, perhaps a promise of entering some sort of field to be made, and often an interest to be paid. Thus, the student is in debt with no opportunity for the present.

Therefore, many students of extreme ability are forced to take unskilled or semi-skilled employment. These last supported scholarships should be made available only to those students who are unable to obtain the Funds from another source.

The state tax program would do more that help these individuals; it would help the whole community by making more educated and trained personnel available to industry, science, government jobs and other positions.

A college education can elimate many hours of the on-the-job training.

Education is essential to have a college degree as it is to have a high school diploma. There are 30 student organizations in each college education would be available to everyone in America. It should not be too much to ask that a college education be provided to those who are interested in it, but not the funds, be assisted by scholar- ship funds provided by the state.

This policy, however, would meet with much opposition from the extreme conserv- e group, who might say that it would do little good in the present time. They might want to limit the number of students who would benefit as much from the pro- posed legislation. They feel that this would mean that the government would be responsible for the students who would benefit because these graduates would be available to all students.

The scholarships would not replace any existing ones. Otherwise, many of their programs would be cut, but not the funds, be assisted by scholar- ship funds provided by the state.
