ROCK HILL, SOUTH CAROLINA - Power has been restored to campus after an early morning outage at Winthrop University. The outage lasted from 4:30-6 a.m. The cause is unknown at this time, but facilities management personnel are investigating.

Residual heat in residence halls helped students remain comfortable while power was being restored.

Faculty, staff and students received news of the outage through the campus' emergency notification system, WU Alert. They were advised that temperatures in classrooms and buildings would be chilly in the morning hours and that they should dress warmly. In addition, they were informed to expect full heat by noon.
