The man who holds this sort of view really has part of the truth, but not enough of it.

RIDING CULTIVATORS

What Types are Best and Why?

By G. H. Alford

There are several reasons for cultivating crops:

1. To prevent the growth of weeds and grass.
2. To reduce the evaporation of soil moisture to the minimum.
3. To permit the air to freely enter the soil.

Under normal conditions, flat smooth, shallow cultivation will give the attachment that least interferes with the roots of the growing crop best serves the purpose of cultivation.

There are different kinds of riding cultivators, and numerous attachments and types of shovels used on them. Practically every manufacturer of cultivators is putting out good, practical machines and nearly all make different patterns, some one of which is adapted to any land found on our farm that is at all fitted to the practical production of row crops.

The farmer with the smooth fields, trees of stumps and rocks finds the plain break-type model entirely satisfactory, while farmers who cultivate stumpy and rocky fields very much prefer the spring-tooth and spring-crip styles, which cost a few dollars more.

The late patterns as a rule are more easily operated than the old-style cultivators, but the drive of them must keep well awake and drive his team and carefully operate the cultivator in order to do satisfactory work.

The disk gang, the spring-tooth gang, and the two, three, and four-shovel gangs are used on riding cultivators. Each gang is especially suited to certain conditions, so it is best to buy all three attachments with the cultivator, so that the cultivator may be converted into a spring-tooth, a shovels, or a disk cultivator at any time. These attachments may be purchased with the cultivator at a reasonable additional cost.

The spring-tooth attachment is usually used while the crops are small and on stumpy and rocky ground. The shovel attachment is usually used when the crops are larger and the work to be done is much heavier, and the disks attachment comes in handy when there is grass to cover.

The spring-tooth attachment of any type of cultivator shovel that does not penetrate too deep does fairly good justice to the weeds and grass. The spring-tooth attachment and sweep shovels are considered ideal for surface cultivation, especially when the crop is small. These attachments do not penetrate deep, but stir the surface of the soil thoroughly, and move all small weeds and grass, cut few plant roots, and form a soil mulch to prevent the evaporation of soil moisture.

Shovels vary in number from four to eight for a pair of gangs, and while the larger number is to be preferred for destroying weeds and making a soil mulch, when narrow shovels are used on the gangs they often cause quite a bit of trouble in drabbing ground. While the two and four-shovel gangs are often used, the six-shovel gang is the most popular one.

The disk cultivator, usually has three disks on a gang and is useful because it can be used to cover rather large grass and weeds when necessary in the cultivation of crops.

If we keep the reasons for cultivating prominently in our minds at all times we will be more likely to do ideal work. For instance, the farmer who uses three-shovel gangs, the shovels only four inches in width, usually gets practically all the grass and weeds when cultivating his crop, but if he is not careful many plant roots are cut, and six small ridges and six small furrows are left behind the cultivator. The root pruning damage of the crop and the little furrows and ridges hasten the evaporation of soil moisture.

The farmer using the spring-tooth attachment or six small wheels on the gangs gets all of the grass and leaves the ground thoroughly pulverized and smooth behind the cultivator. Of course, we should destroy weeds and grass and thoroughly pulverize the surface of the soil, but we should also leave the soil as smooth as possible behind the cultivator.

For the average soil and field, the three-shovel-gang using four-inch shovels is very popular. But when there are running vines or grasses and weeds to be destroyed, a wide sweep is necessary, and for this reason, as well as for other reasons, it is advisable to buy a set of shovels and a set of sweeps that are interchangeable. When the ground is rather hard, and it is advisable to stir it for two or three inches deep, the shovels may be used, while the sweeps should be used to destroy a thick coat of grass and weeds and to leave the surface of the soil as smooth as possible.

Let us keep the reasons for cultivation in mind and we will not go far wrong when buying a cultivator, the necessary attachments, shovels and sweeps, and in the cultivation of our crops.

THE RISING FLOOD

What on earth will the college do about the swiftly swelling tide of high school graduates, increasing thousands of whom will be seeking entrance next September? Never before has the country seen anything like the flood of high school graduates now pouring forth from scores and hundreds of high schools—all prepared and eager for collegiate careers.

Already nearly every college and university in the land is carrying all the students for whom there is proper space, teaching faculty and equipment to accept more means merely a degradation of standard in efficiency. This is an injury to all alike. Yet it requires years to elaborate efficient college plant and equipment to meet the needs of a doubled attendance. A potential doubling of attendance within just two or three years, however, seems now to confront the institutions of higher education—few women not less than for men.

This lack of balance between the lower and higher grades of education as regards preparation to handle them effectively will sooner or later be corrected, of course, but in the meantime college presidents will face conditions unknown previously. It would not hurt if more vigorous and rigid standards for admission to college were set up to be applied wisely. For there are too and of young men and women seeking admission to college, not in a serious intent to study, and in the advantages provided, but merely for the name of the thing and to have a good time spending money away from parental inspection and restraint. Rather than fill up needed space with waters of opportunity, these make-believe students should be excluded as far as practicable at the start, or weeded out as promptly as possible after disclosing no appreciation of what they have.

It is very likely that most college authorities will write the opportunity to exercise selection in admitting applicants and do so with more severity than ever before. It is thus likely to become a stern western of collegiate opportunity. We have none to spare today for such—Spartan-Burg Herald.

AMONG THE SHOWS

The true desire of the day, these sultry times, is to keep cool and the one best way to do this is to cool your body. But before you change, a nifty swimming suit must be had, and there you are at the very beginning. So down you go today and get the most becoming one you can find. Now will be a difficult task, as every shop in the city has an altering line that simply calls one to choose the loveliest and his pocket for the nearest swimming pool.

A bathing suit is no longer strictly a garment made for utility alone. Line and color, they are made for becomingness as well and becoming they are. This year you will find the neck line entirely different and there is also a trend to combination of colors rather than the plain ones. The longer the neck plain and round here you will find the neck cut straight across the front there you will find straps used across the shoulders.

Red is the first choice as to color and, whether you choose a solid red or white stripes either you can feel perfectly comfortable. You will find a soft jade green and the gray blue running a close second. The leather mixtures are also good; not the ordinary plain leather of last season but a rose and silver, or a silver and black, a copper with an occasional black thread or blue, with green or white.

Tights of one color with the waist and skirt of another will be frequently found also; for instance, the skirt is of brilliant green or red you are apt to find the tights of a solid black. Or tan tights with a blue skirt, and so it goes until every individual taste is satisfied.

One unusual model is a black and the gray blue and white. Another of silver and white has bubbles in groups of three by the silver, which clearly shows the influence of printed materials. These are all very practical swimming and bathing suits, but if one so desires regular beach suit can be had.

Not in the younger generation is the best. In fact, you will find a more complete stock for the juniors and little tots than for the grownups. The prices run from $2.00 to $12.95, according to quality. And, by the way, the merchants have found that the cotton suits here are at all practical, so heavy all-wool jerseys in both a light and heavy weight, so you may take your choice.

Buy Southern Pine for $18.50 and Sells for $48 Per Thousand

Early in April we had a lumber buyer at a traveling commission in South Carolina and learned from him that he had just bought two cars of 2x10 yellow pine lumber in Williamsburg County, paying $18.50 c. o. b. per thousand for the lumber. We also learned from this gentleman that his firm had just bought 100,000 feet of 2x10 yellow pine lumber scattered from Arkansas all the way to North Carolina, and that they were expected to ship between seventy and eighty cars a day to the Northern headquarters of the firm. The price paid per thousand was $18.50, and the average sales price in the North, after regrading, was $48 per thousand. This lumber undergoes a change between the time it is loaded in the South and sold in the North, a change from two to four grades. It is "reclassified" always upward. In other words, the farmer is told that his lumber is severally first, second, and third grade, but few farmers having small lots of lumber for sale get more than half its market value, and we are sure that cooperative cutting, grading, and marketing of surplus farm timber would not be the farmer's fully double as much as they are now being paid.

Further, a large proportion of the timber being cut in the South is being cut destructively. Cutting, the renewal of the timber growth, nor the maturity of the trees for timbering being considered.

We are poor salesmen. We have been taking what the buyers offer us for our cotton, tobacco, and other farm products for so long that we overlook the market price of the things we have for sale and take the buyer's price. The farmers of the South lose millions of dollars annually by not having a marketing organization for the sale of their timber. We do not know of a farm product for which the farmer is paid a price so far below its real value.

It is not here as great an opportunity for the extension service to engage in, as the remarkably successful "carrot sales" of poultry, hogs, and other farm surplus. The most outstanding recent achievement of our agricultural leadership is its marketing demonstrations. There is no field it can enter in which its service is not needed.

Lady Says She Took Cardui and Never Saw Such Improvement—Was So Weak Couldn't Stand.

Weatherly, Miss—Mrs. James H. Hall, of this place, writes that she was "getting weaker all the time" when Cardui, the woman's tonic, was first brought to her attention. After she had taken Cardui a while, she writes that she "never did see such an improvement." "I suffered all the time and had pains all over my body. My strength was so weak I could not stand. My skin was cold and flabby, I did not have any color. I had always been a very active woman—used to outdoor exercises, walking and going where I pleased, and to get down, and able to take myself a drink, was indeed a hardship. "Nothing seemed to help me, till I began on Cardui. The first bottle seemed to strengthen me, and I went for five more. By the time I had taken these, I was on my feet again, and doing my work, feeling in health and strength. "I took two more bottles, and I am well and strong. I can work my garden. I haven't had any more sickness. Ask your druggist. NC146

FIDDLERS' CONVENTION

Large Crowd Present at Richburg High School Friday Night for Convention—Richburg Has Handsome and Commodious School Building.

Probably the best and largest fiddlers' convention ever held in this section was that of last Friday night at the new High School building at Richburg. The auditorium, which has a seating capacity of 360, was filled to overflowing with people from the immediate neighborhood and for many miles around, quite a number from Chester being present.

The musical numbers were not confined strictly to fiddlers. There were harps, banjos, etc., and a variable program was rendered. Musicians were present from Richburg, Chester, Cornwall, Beaufort, the Springs, Erwin, Van Wyck and several other places, and the old time selections were greatly enjoyed by the large audience.

The new Richburg High school is modern, in every particular, having electric lights generated by a motor, and also a gymnasium in class rooms in addition to the large auditorium; all being fitted with the latest style for the accommodation of the pupils.

BOARD REDUCES COSMETICS TAX. Levy is Removed Entirely on Ice Cream Sold in Bulk. Some Appeal Has been Made for Consideration for Some Time, Governor Says. Columbia, S. C., June 12.—The cosmetics tax was reduced by the Governor's board from 20 per cent to four per cent, at a meeting held in the office of Governor McLeod today. The tax on ice cream, as sold in bulk, was removed. However, ice cream when sold at soft drink stands will be subject to the usual tax. The motion for the reduction of the two forms of taxation was based on motion of Representative Carroll Ebers, of Laurens.

Following the decision for the reduction, the board of appeals called by Dr. E. E. Wingfield and W. J. Murray, Jr., Columbia drug retailer, and Frank Keller, of Clinton, Anderson, an ice cream manufacturer, and advised them of the decision. J. A. Russell, of Anderson, an appeal has been made to the board.

Following the meeting Governor McLeod stated that the members of the commission had had the matter of reducing the cosmetics tax under consideration for some time. They had given the matter their best thought and they believed to be the spirit of the legislature in passing the tax act, the chief executive said.

Sam McChesney, Major-Act of Last Legislature, Pointing Out Various Mistakes.

Former State Senator S. H. Alden, N. C., has become general manager of the major acts passed during the session of the last general assembly, expressed some opinions in recent interviews that are worth reading with interest.

Several weeks have passed since the bill passed as still subjects of conversation and debate and Mr. McChesney's comments, which he says are perfectly "harmless," are worth putting in the record.

He has been out of the State for several weeks and has not had time to digest the important points in the following succinct paragraphs:

"The question of a constitution should be considered in the future. We will never have general tax reform under the present constitution.

"The constitutional amendment for a quadrennial term for the Governor and State officers have been ratified. They were favored by the people and are not essentially a part of the biennial sessions' amendment.

"The income tax should be revised. The inheritance tax should be revised. The property tax should be revised.

"The bill for revaluation should be passed. No valid objection was raised or could be raised.

"The gasolines should not be increased. The South Carolina law has a higher gas tax than any other State in the Union.

"The Parks Hosiery Mill has been started on full time. J. M. Sams will be the manager.
