CONFEDERATE VETERANS AND VISITORS WELCOME TO VETERANS AND VISITORS WELCOME

CONFEDERATE VETERANS IN ANNUAL SESSION

Tremendous Crowd Present at Opening Exercises

CALLED TO ORDER BY COLONEL REED

Every Seat Taken and Pavilion Crowded to the Doors— Formal Opening Under Auspicious Circumstances

The big pavilion on Walnut street was crowded to the doors with every seat taken and every available inch of standing room utilized when Col. J. W. Reed, the chief marshal, called the South Carolina Division U. C. V. to order this morning at 10 o'clock. Seated on the stage were Gen. Davis, Col. Reed, Gen. Teague, Col. Brooks, Major Simmons, Rev. J. S. Snyder, Hon. B. Caldwell, Capt. W. H. Edwards, Col. W. W. Lumpkin, Chas. S. Dwight, M. Bradford, J. H. Wharton, C. L. Schumpert, T. C. Lee, S. E. Welch, Gen. E. Davis, Maj. J. Willson, B. Caldwell, and Messrs. J. S. Cunningham, I. T. Todd, J. D. Dauter, J. W. Smith, P. W. Tinsley, D. P. Crook, J. J. Snupper, Dodge Robert Aldrich and Mr. J. H. Brooks and other notables of the Confederacy. On the right of the stage was the U. S. Navy band from Charleston, which furnished the music.

In the absence of the chaplain, General Gordon, Rev. J. S. Snyder, pastor of the Baptist church, invoked God's blessing on the convention. Mr. Snyder offered an eloquent plea for the Confederate soldier, thanking the U. S. Army and Navy for their services and praying for its continuance. Mr. Snyder's prayer struck a responsive chord in the nightly assemblage. Col. Reed then introduced Hon. B. Caldwell, who delivered the address of welcome. Mr. Caldwell made a hit with the soldiers and his speech was frequently interrupted by applause. Mr. Caldwell spoke as follows:

MR. B. CALDWELL'S ADDRESS: Mr. R. B. Caldwell welcomed the Veterans in the following words: 'My Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen, I am commissioned by the good people of Chester and Chester County to extend to the Confederate Veterans, and to their wives and families, and the friends who have come here with them on this occasion, a most hearty welcome to our city; and it is with a glad heart that I welcome you, for no where is the Confederate Veterans loved and esteemed more than right here in Chester, and no where do the people delight more to do him honor.'

Some ten years ago I had the honor of recalling you veterans hold one of your reunions in this city, and it was on that occasion you doubtless remember that it rained without ceasing almost the entire time you were here, and while we enjoyed your stay, you and we believe that some of you enjoyed being with us, the occasion, on account of the weather, did not go off to our satisfaction, and ever since we have waited for you to come back at some time when the elements were more favorable and give us the opportunity to give you a more fitting time. We sincerely trust that nothing will happen to mar your pleasure on this occasion, for we assure you that we want each and every one of you to have the best time that you can have ever had at a reunion. We have spared neither time nor expense in our efforts to accomplish this end, and if we have left undone anything that we might have done that would contribute in the slightest to your comfort or pleasure, we wish to assure you that it is a mistake that we have made, and we invite you to make yourselves thoroughly at home with us.

You will observe that many changes have taken place since your last visit to our city since you were last here. Our population has more than doubled, and our city has, in every way grown larger. We believe to be one of the best, if not the best town in South Carolina, and we sincerely hope that you will be ready to agree with us before your return.

A considerable acquaintance is being made these days among the newspapers over the question of whether or not the South is now glad that it was the North which you took part in. This idea was suggested in a recent speech at Gettysburg by the distinguished Secretary of War, Mr. Dickerson, who claims to be a southerner. I haven't the honor of knowing Mr. Dickerson personally, nor do I claim to know the sentiment of every book and corner of the South; but I do know the feeling of the people of this community, and I want to tell you that there isn't one here who is glad that you lost. The losses of the war were settled at Appomattox and were settled forever. We are fully reconciled to the manner of that settlement, and today we are just as good Americans as can be found anywhere on the face of the earth, but when this is said the whole story is told and nobody but a renegade would stand above the sacred dust of the greatest heroes that ever went down in battle and even suggest that the surviving comrades and the sons and daughters of those men are to be grieved by it, it is of course a waste of time to speculate to talk about what would have happened if you had won. I am sure you will all agree with me that I believe that we could hardly have experienced anything more disastrous than the horrors of reconstruction and the burdens of subsequent years. I believe that we could have taken care of ourselves in success, for in spite of our defeat, and in spite of the hardships and burdens that followed the war, we have brought our dear old Southland to the forefront once more, and today it is recognized everywhere as the most promising part of the nation.

But I must not consume more of your time. Let me say once again that all Chester is delighted that you were here, and I want to hope that you may enjoy every moment of your stay, but I sincerely wish that before your now fast disappearing lines I had a memory, that you may hold many reunions in this city, for in the Rome of the Carolinas you will find that you can come in the evening or come in the morning.

When you're looked for or come without warning; A thousand warm welcomes you'll find here, and we'll be glad to see you. The more often we see you the more we adore you.

GOOD MUSIC: The Navy band furnished some fine music adding very much to the enjoyment of the day. Caldwell Major Simmons delivered the keys of the city to Gen. Davis, assuring him that the city of Chester belonged to the veterans, and that the surviving soldiers of the Confederacy.

Following this Gen. Zimmerman delivered the address of welcome. Gen. Davis paid a glowing tribute to Col. Reed, saying that he had expected much but that they had been overwhelmed by the cordial hospitality displayed by the good people of this city. Gen. Zimmerman then addressed Gen. Davis, giving him a tribute to the men of the Confederacy, telling of the heroism of the leaders and the equal bravery of the private, not neglecting the noble women who stood so nobly to the front at the darkest and trying days of the conflict. He said many angels of mercy. Gen. Davis delivered an eloquent and forcible address to the men of the Confederacy as well as the youngest of the boys. Present cheered his noble and patriotic utterances to the echo. Not in a long time has such a great speech been heard in Chester, and it was made a great hit with the audience. Dr. Lee Davis Lodge, of Limestone college, delivered the annual address, as well as the youngest of the boys. Present cheered his noble and patriotic utterances to the echo. and again at the different references in his magnificent speech. This morning the exercises of the morning to 5 o'clock the members were served dinner on the court house grounds and such a feast as they had. They made merry while they partook of the good things which had been prepared for them and they were glad to their content.

It has been a great day. Everywhere the men and the visitors are enjoying the different exercises and amusements and it is a red letter day in the history of the city. The program for tomorrow will be found inside.

AFTERNOON EXERCISES: This afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the veterans again convened in the big pavilion. The first thing on the program was miscellaneous business, several things of interest to the organization being discussed. Following this came the annual tributes to the Confederate dead, beautiful, feeling and touching appreciations of the departed heroes being made by Messrs. G. B. Butler and Carlisle, both of whom died during the past year.

Gen. Butler was the ranking general in the city and his death was a great loss and he was beloved by the entire county. Gen. Carlisle, at the time of his death, was the commander of the South Carolina Division, and in his death death soldier had a double bereavement. In their lives tributes were paid to them by the city and their families. No true man ever lived. Several of their comrades paid glowing tributes to the departed general and their loss in the eyes of the surviving soldiers of the Confederacy.

Adjustment was taken at 4:30 p. m. Another meeting will be held in the evening at 8 o'clock and will appear from the program which will be found on another page of this issue.

Brigadier General Zimmerman Davis, of Charleston, S. C., is the commanding officer of the South Carolina Division, U. C. V.

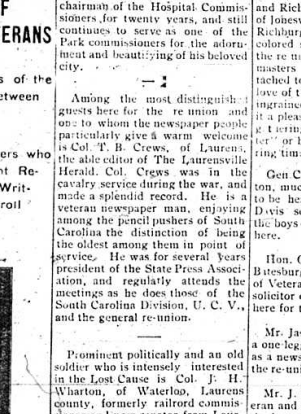

AT THE COMMERCIAL CLUB: The Commercial Club is the mecca for visitors. Everyone is delighted with the fine club rooms and expresses delight that Chester has such fine quarters for her social and commercial body. Veterans and visitors are welcome here and invited to make this their headquarters.

Messrs. James Clark, formerly of York County, but now living at the Old Soldier's Home in Columbia, Joo. D. McCarlier of Winthrop, and William Hilly of York County, all of Co. B, 14th S. C. Cavalry, are attending the reunion. Mr. Lawson Walker, of this city, was a member of the same Company and was standing by the side of Mr. Clark, when he was desperately wounded at the battle of Haws Mill.

As announced in yesterday's issue, the Masonic and K. of P. bodies are today serving refreshments in their hall on the third story of the Kiwanis Building. The hall is cool and pleasant, and a fine place to spend a quiet half hour, after walking the streets. All veterans and visiting brethren are cordially invited to visit the hall.

Among the veterans in the city is Mr. D. A. Campbell, of Ruby in Chesterfield County, who was a member of the Chesterfield Battery in the Army. Mr. Campbell says that he is having a great time and voiced his sentiments of the day during which he enjoyed on the Court House grounds by saying "There was a great waste of bread here."

Miss Hattie Lee Jones of Denmark is the attractive guest of Miss Kate Glenn during the reunion. Born to Mr. and Mrs. B. McMill of Cornwell, Tapsara, S. 22nd, a daughter. Miss Ruby Elliott, one of Lancaster's prettiest young ladies and most musician, is in the city furnishing music at the opera house for the vaudeville and moving picture show. Mr. Lawson Elliott, her brother, has charge of the box office.

Edmund Gilliam, colored, of Cross Keys Station, is honored with a badge and a Cross of Honor pinned proudly on his coat.

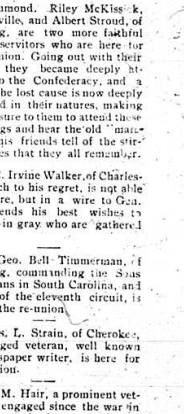

THE OFFICERS OF THE S. C. VETERANS: Sketches of Survivors of the Heroes in the War Between the States. Among the most distinguished guests here for the reunion and one to whom the newspaper people particularly give a warm welcome is Col. T. B. Crews, of Laurens, the able chief of The Laurensville Herald. Col. Crews was in the cavalry service during the war, and made a splendid record. He is a veteran newspaper man, enjoying among the pencil pushers of South Carolina the distinction of being the oldest among them in point of years. He took over twenty years president of the State Press Association, and regularly attends the meetings as he does those of the South Carolina Division, U. C. V., and the general reunion.

Prominent politically and an old soldier who is intensely interested in the Lost Cause is Col. J. H. Wharton, of Waterloo, Laurens county, formerly railroad commissioner and now senator from Laurens county. Col. Wharton is widely known all over the state, and is a stump speaker of acknowledged ability. He took an active part in the proceedings of the Legislature last winter, and will become one of the most valued members of that body. He will take an active part in the proceedings of the reunion.

Col. W. W. Lumpkin, erstwhile candidate for the United States Senate, is a prominent visitor. Col. Davis was named for his eloquence, and he is expected to make the speech nominating Col. J. W. Reed for commander of the First Brigade.

Capt. L. M. Davis, of Rock Hill, is here shaking hands with his many friends. Capt. Davis is prominently known in the Camp at Rock Hill, and to his efforts is largely due the flourishing condition of the organization. Capt. Davis was, for many years a prominent merchant, but is now retired.

Judge Robert Aldrich, of Barnwell, is one of the old soldiers who loves to mingle with his old comrades-in-arms and live again the stirring days of 1861-65. Judge Aldrich, who is regarded as one of South Carolina's ablest and most fearless jurists, is with Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Aiken.

Hon. Geo. Bell Timmerman, of Biesburg, counting down the days of Veterans in South Carolina, and solicitor of the eleventh circuit, is here for the reunion.

Mr. Jas. L. Strain, of Cherokee, a one-legged veteran, well known as a newspaper writer, is here for the reunion. Mr. J. M. Hair, a prominent veteran and engaged since the war in the insurance business with headquarters at Williston, is here for the reunion.

Mr. J. N. Mulliken, of Esler, aged eighty-four, but still spry and sprightly, is quartered at the Chester Hotel. Mr. Mulliken, who is a successful farmer, retains an unabated interest in the Lost Cause, and is a regular attendant upon the reunions of the Division.

Dr. Bacot and Capt. Brunson, both of Florence, are prominent reunion visitors. Capt. W. S. Hall has with him as guests Messrs. W. A. and J. W. Brunson, both of Florence, and quite a pleasant little reunion of the three old comrades is being held. Capt. Hall and the Messrs. Brunson are members of the Pee Dee Battery, W. J. Pegram's battalion, and members of the Camp at Capt. Hall and Mr. W. Brunson were at Wofford College when the war broke out, and left that institution for the artillery. Mr. J. W. Brunson was at Furman when the war broke out.

Mr. S. B. Nail, of Carlisle, is visiting his mother, Mrs. M. A. Nail on York street. Capt. J. P. King is running a picture and vaudeville show at the opera house, and it is a good one. Capt. King has been in the bluesiness for some time, and although the Chester people have not seen for a long, long time, will be good. There is intense rivalry among the owners, and the sports have the records to make the spot high class.

The Chester Horse Show tomorrow afternoon will be one of the largest and best in the history of this country. The entries are coming in fast and the races, some of which Chester people have not seen for a long, long time, will be good. There is intense rivalry among the owners, and the sports have the records to make the spot high class.

Dr. Jas. P. Kinard, of Greenville, English at Winthrop College, came down this morning to attend the meeting of the Sons of Veterans.

Records of the Leaders who Attending the Present Reunion—Names Are Written High on the Scroll of Fame

Among the most distinguished guests here for the reunion and one to whom the newspaper people particularly give a warm welcome is Col. T. B. CHILDREN LAUGHTER IS HEARD IN THE PUBLIC PLACES

Children's laughter is heard in the public places of over 300 American cities, and the fact that the state in the matter of the old diary is proving more difficult as the commission shows more plainly that they really have good names against the gentleman—Florence Times.

Perhaps the oldest who says, "In twenty years we'll all be flying" is afraid to come right out and predict the end of the world.

Editorial

WE BID YOU WELCOME.

To the men who were the grey and who are now our guests the city and county of Chester extend a most earnest and hearty welcome. There is in this welcome a recognition of the bravery and self-sacrifice that impelled these soldiers to bear the brunt of battle for four long years, only to meet with defeat in the end and return to a home that is cruel and rapacious enemy had laid desolate, and a feeling of proportionate pride that we have as our guests survivors of that host whose deeds of valor the world will laud as long as there continues to be any disposition to appreciate patriotism. It is our purpose at this time to bear witness from the record of the Confederate soldier. That record stands for itself, comparing favorably with the martial exploits and achievements of the bravest soldier that ever laid lance in rest or barrel bosom in defense of home or right. With our referring further to this record we simply bid the old soldiers welcome, pledging them the same in the way of entertainment and assuring them that we are glad to have them now, and will be glad to have them again and yet again before the sun goes down upon them forever.

To the Sons of Veterans in the name of the people of Chester we extend the same hearty welcome. You are doing a noble and worthy work in seeking to keep alive the deeds of your fathers, and when the record of life is finally written this thing that you have done will appear as a worthy memorial unto you and them.

To the beautiful daughters of the South who come representing the brigades and camps, testifying by their presence to their interest in the dead Confederacy, we extend a welcome that is emphasized during the time spent among us, and upon you likewise we pronounce a benediction for your labor of love and your zeal for and interest in the Confederacy that is dead and is yet alive forevermore in the hearts of all the South.

Finally, the people of Chester bid welcome to all other guests within their gates, visitors who have come here from promontories of interest in the Lost Cause, or impelled by other reasons whatsoever they may be. The latch string is on the outside, and we bid you welcome on this visit, and on any subsequent visit that you may care to make among us. There is one of the best small cities of the Piedmont here, and we that live here and know its advantages will bid any of you welcome who care to come at any time and see if the land is as fair and fertile and altogether lovely as we fond enthusiasts have pictured it.

TO THE SPONSORS AND SONS.

Along with the heroes of the streets of this city are their fair daughters and gallant sons. And to these as well as the veterans we extend a hearty welcome. And we would not omit the pleasure of having them, when her husbands were absent at the front in defense of his state, stayed at home and provided food and sustenance for the children and helped nurse the wounded and sick of the Confederacy. Surely she was an angel of mercy and Chester feels peculiarly the pleasure of having them with us now. Welcome to Chester everybody!

At Strange-Robinson Shoe Co.

One of the star features of the work is the cut price shoe and bootery sale going on at the shoe store of the Strange-Robinson Shoe Co. This is a reliable sale in several respects. First because few cities the size of ours ever boast of as nicely selected stock as is here shown. Second, because almost half on brand new this season's goods before the summer is well begun.

But that is due to the fact that their room is limited and to a policy of this concern not to carry over of one season's goods to the next. So that each season both style and stock will be new. And while the prices are but little more than half, still they will take life as much paths in fitting you and give you the same liberal guarantee that every thing will be satisfactory, only if you were paying full price, you do almost double duty. Their window is full of pretty styles, there are lots of others inside, it matters not whether you want a statement of the price, or a sample or tennis shoe you desire at the reduced price.

Dance Last Night.

The festivities of reunion week opened with a little informal dance last night in the spacious dancing hall at the Commercial Club. Music was furnished by Lucius Lee's orchestra and was of the lightest order. Fair visitors from all parts of the state beguiled away the hours with the dance and it passed all too soon. The following were among those present: Misses Eleanor Bell of Gastonia; Cooner, Batesburg; Bell Knox Montgomery, Starkville, Miss. Alice Scott, Monticello; Mildred Patterson, Mary Patterson, Hatfield Lee Gress, Denmark; Louise Liby, Memphis, Tenn.; Cora Irby, Memphis, Tenn.; Harriet, Strifflinger; Nan Walker, Strawwell; Bertha Groschel, Mrs. E. H. Hall, Clinton, Forah and Ella Wacette Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Morfitt, Miss Collins, Batesburg; Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Struffel, Miss Lou Groeschel, Carrie Hood; Bill Hood, Carrie Pool, Newberry, Mary Carline Burton, Newberry, Thompson, Greenbury, Perry, Griffith, Thomas, Wills, N. C. and Messrs. R. E. Cooser, C. L. Jones, W. A. Eckle, A. B. Carroll, David Heden, H. J. Withers, E. A. Crawford, L. C. Greenlee, Walker, Spartenburg; G. J. Patterson, J. M. Hemphill, W. S. Robinson, S. R. Lathan, J. H. Glenn, W. L. Davidson, Walker, Strawwell, Mrs. C. E. Campbell Spratt, Julian Arnett, Wimsboro; Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Alken, Chaparrons, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Dye.

The Cotton Mills of the South.

Cotton manufacturing is the prominent industry of the South, and its growth has been the great factor in the industrial and commercial development which has attracted the attention of the business world. Capital to the hundreds of millions has been invested in this industry, not only to its own splendid profit but to the immense advantage of all business interests, the benefit of thousands of people, and the permanent improvement of many sections.

The growth of the industry has been phenomenal. In 1850 all the textile plants of the South had but 667,000 spindles, barely six per cent of the total in the United States; now they are credited, in round numbers, with 16,000,000 spindles—practically fifty per cent of the number in the entire country. The capital employed has grown from $21,000,000 to nearly $300,000,000, and the number of bales of cotton annually used from 210,000 to over 2,100,000. No other manufacturing sector ever increased its spindle capacity so large percentage. South Carolina has 3,400,000 spindles as against 1,100,000 in 1900, and North Carolina in the same period increased its capacity from 1,100,000 to 3,100,000. Notable increases have also been made in Georgia and Alabama. During the last half of 1908 North Carolina reported the mill capacity of her number than any other state.

Of the cotton manufacturing states, South Carolina is second, North Carolina is first, and Georgia is third, according to the latest available statistics. The Piedmont region is one of the great cotton manufacturing districts of the South, and is particularly noted in this industry that the territory of the Southern railway between Danville, Va., and Atlanta, Ga., a distance of four hundred miles, has been referred to as one long cotton mill village. Of an intermediate section of this territory the American Textile Manufacturer, "renominating the Southern railway as 'The Cotton Mill Line,' recently said:

"The distance between Charlotte, N. C., and Greenville, S. C., by the Southern railroad, is one hundred and seven miles. There are branches of cotton mills at almost every station between the two places. If all the cotton mills between and including Greenville and Charlotte were strung out in a line, there would be one mill to every mile. This would include the mills in the villages which have to go with the mills, the Southern trains would run through a solid compact line of cotton mills for the entire distance. Much interesting and valuable information concerning Southern cotton mills was given in a late number of the American Wool and Cotton Reporter, together with illustrations of plants, water powers, villages, operatives and other scenes connected with Southern mill life. In its review of 'Southern Conditions' the authority says: 'It is certain that Southern cotton manufacturing is as yet in its infancy. It has not yet got beyond the stage beginning.' The Southern

The Southern railway serves the territory of greatest activity in cotton-mill building and reaches all the important centers of manufacturing activity of the South. Sixty-eight per cent of the mills under construction in the South during the first quarter of this month are equipped respectively ninety-nine per cent of the looms and eighty-two per cent of the spindles, were being built in towns reached by the Southern railway.

LIFE HISTORY OF THE CATTLE TICK

FULL OF INFORMATION FOR THIS SECTION

Facts on Which the Campaign for Eradicating the Pest is Based.

An intimate knowledge of the life history of the cattle tick is necessary to those who have the pest to contend with in order that they may wage their battle more intelligently and at the same time secure better and greater results. A knowledge of the manner in which the tick propagates can not fail to be of value in the war of extermination now being carried on against it in the south.

Only a part of the development of the tick takes place on the host (animal), while the remainder occurs in the soil. The female tick, which is attached to the skin of the host, increases enormously in size as the result of drawing liberal quantities of blood, and when fully engorged drops to the ground, where she at once begins to search for a suitable hiding place that will serve as a protection from the sun and enemies. The female ticks may be devoured by birds, destroyed by ants, or may perish as the result of unfavorable conditions, such as, for example, low temperature, lack of moisture, etc., so that they may be destroyed without having laid any eggs.

Egg laying begins during the spring, summer and fall months in 2 to 20 days and during the winter months in 13 to 18 days. The eggs are small, elliptical shaped bodies, of a light amber color, which later changes to dark brown, one fiftieth of an inch in length, coated with a sticky secretion that causes them to adhere in clumps and they keep them from drying out. During egg laying the tick gradually shrinks to about one third or one fourth her former size. The egg laying period continues for from 4 days in the summer to 51 days beginning in the fall, and during this period from several hundred to 5,000 eggs may be deposited. The mother tick dies then within a few days.

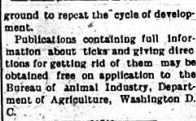

In from 10 days (in summer) to 185 days (in fall or winter) after the eggs have been deposited they begin to hatch. From each one issues a small oval, six-legged seed tick, at first amber colored, later changing to a rich brown. After crawling about the host it usually remains quiescent for several days; then it displays great activity, especially if the weather is warm, and ascends the nearest bit of vegetation, such as grass, herbs or shrubs.

Since each female lays her eggs at one spot, thousands of newly hatched ticks or larvae will appear at the same place and later will ascend nearby grass stems and collect on the blades. This accounts for the brown masses of larvae observed clinging to vegetation in pastures, or on fence posts. This upward instinct of the ticks increases their chance of reaching a host, for while the vegetation is disturbed they become very active, extending their long legs vertically upward in an attempt to seize hold of a host.

When the tick has found a host, it begins to feed. It takes no food and hence does not increase in size, and unless it reaches a host it dies of starvation within a few days. One of the chief advantages of the work of exterminating the ticks, their endurance, however, is very great, and under certain conditions they have been found to live without nourishment nearly eight months during the colder part of the year.

The length of the period from the time females lay their eggs to the time the seed ticks hatch from the eggs laid by them are dead, or in other words, the time required for pastures to become free of ticks after all cattle, horses and mules have been excluded, varies with the season of the year, being shortest during the warm part of the year and longest during the cold part of the year. For example, all the seed ticks resulting from females dropped June 15 will be dead by November 1, and those of females dropped in October, but some of those resulting from females dropped September 1 may survive until the following July, a period of ten months.

Another phase of development becomes apparent when the ticks reach a favorable host, such as a cow. It is usually attached to the skin of the neck, chest, or the inside of the tangles and flanks, or to the dewlap. It at once begins to draw blood and increases in size. In a few days it changes from brown to white. In from 5 to 12 days it sheds its skin, the new form having either instead of six legs and being the size of a nymph. In another 5 to 11 days after the first molt the nymph sheds its skin and becomes sexually mature; and it is at this stage that the host and tick are conspicuous for the first time. The male emerges as a brown oval tick about one tenth of an inch in length. Having reached the full measure of its growth he displays greater activity in moving about on the host. The female is slightly larger but shows much less activity, seldom moving far from her point of attachment previous to molting. After mating she increases rapidly in size, and in 21 days (in hot weather) to 90 days (in cold weather) after attaching as a seed tick she becomes fully engorged, and drops to the

Go South, Young Man.

Last year the nine cotton States produced 14,100,000 bushels of cotton, against 40,625,000 grown by the eight Northern States of Pennsylvania, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Kansas, the District of Colorado, and the Territory of New Mexico, Delaware, Maryland, the Virginias, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Missouri, the last three important grain States are not computed among the cotton States in the foregoing calculation.

This year the cotton acreage at the rate is less by 2.5 per cent than last year, but the yield per acre is more than that of last year by 1,000,000. This is a good sign. When the south grows its own grain and does its own work, something it has not yet done, it will have become the most prosperous agricultural community on earth.

But there is another advantage. When the South develops attention to grain growing it will necessarily lead to better farming. Already truck gardening and fruit growing are prosperous industries at the South, where numerous successful canning establishments are located.

Cotton will some day be the surplus crop, and grown on land that will produce two bales an acre. With intelligent crop rotation and careful selection it will be an even better source of profit. The soil through crop rotation, and peas and alfalfa will enter largely into the farm economy. This will necessarily bring about cattle and hog breeding and feeding, and ultimately the dairy, the cheese factory, sheep husbandry, and poultry farming. Already truck gardening and fruit growing are prosperous industries at the South, where numerous successful canning establishments are located.

Refreshments will be served.

Friday evening a committee from the Masons and K. of P's met in the office of Mr. W. D. Knox in the courthouse. Both of these secret orders use the same hall and the matter of some entertainment for the veterans during the reunion came up. The joint committee consisted of Messrs. J. L. Davidson, B. L. Cunningham, W. J. Irwin, W. D. Knox, Clark Walker, W. L. Ferguson and S. E. Wylie. It was decided to serve refreshments on Wednesday and Thursday at the hall consisting of lemonade and cigars for the veterans. All visiting Masons and K. of P's are invited, of course, to make headquarters at the hall and the veterans are especially urged to make themselves at home here and partake of lemonade and cigars. A subcommittee consisting of Messrs. W. D. Knox and S. E. Wylie has the matter in charge. They are now waiting volunteers to come forward and stay at the hall while it is open. Some one will be on hand all the time to look after the hall and different ones are wanted to volunteer for the duty. See the committee about it as once.

Mr. Moss Stone, of Hainsville, one of the heroes of the Grey, is in the city for the reunion.

Floats Will be Handsome.

From what can be learned it is evident that the floats in the parade on Thursday will be the finest ever seen in this section of the country. The business houses have spent much time and labor on their respective floats and a creditable showing will be made. The number of floats will be large and many handsomely decorated vehicles will also be in line. It is also understood that many others will enter the parade. In addition to this will be the veterans, the sponsors, the Governor and other notables, the militia, the sons of veterans, the secret orders and possibly some other organizations. The parade also will be well worth a trip to Chester on Thursday. There will be several bands in the parade, the Union Military Company will be accompanied by a band.

Militia Coming this Evening.

The Union military company, Capt. J. Frost Walker, in command, accompanied by the Union band will arrive this afternoon at 4 o'clock and will go into camp on the Monday property in front of the residence of Mr. J. B. Simrill, on Saluda street. The Winchester company will arrive in the morning as will the Hazelwood rifle. Capt. J. D. Fulp is in command of the Winchester company. Capt. J. S. McKnown, of the Cornwall rifles, will be in command of the three companies, being the ranking captain. The soldiers will be in the parade tomorrow afternoon and will give a dress parade on the horse show grounds just before the horse show opens. They will attract much attention and will be accompanied by a large crowd of visitors.

Gov. Ansel Not Here Today.

Much to the regret of every one Gov. M. F. Ansel is not here today. Col. Reed received a telegram yesterday announcing that it would be impossible for the governor to be here today. However he will arrive in the morning and will review the parade from the reviewing stand in the yard of Col. Reed's residence which has been erected for that purpose. Gov. Ansel is justly popular with all and that he is not here today is a source of genuine regret.

And our weather prediction proved true. There is nothing in the looking on the bright side of a picture.

Judge J. H. Nell, of White Oak was a member of Co. B, 7th South Carolina Battalion of the Confederacy in the city for the reunion. Judge Nell was a gallant soldier and is busy today shaking hands with his many friends.

Hon. T. B. Butler, of Gaffney, is among the reunion visitors.

Mrs. Jno. O. Hardin and Messrs. Madison and W. J. McGarity are in the city today.

All persons having visiting young ladies who dance will please notify as soon as possible G. J. Patterson.

Hon. Geo. Bell Timmerman, state commandant of Sons of Veterans, arrived in the city yesterday.

Miss Helen Patrick, of White Oak, arrived with aunt, Mrs. G. B. White, on York street.

The reunion visitors are beginning to arrive. Yesterday afternoon No. 28, from Columbia, brought two coaches of the veterans, their wives and daughters and other visitors. The Navy band of Charleston also arrived on the train. Immediately upon alighting the veterans were given tickets and directions to their stopping places by Mr. Z. V. David and escorted to carriages by Messrs. G. J. Patterson and J. M. Semphill. The old boys' are being given a warm welcome and made to feel perfectly at home.

This delegates from Catawba Camp, No. 278, U. C. V. of this city to the Chester reunion which will occur on Wednesday and Thursday of this week are as follows:

J. W. Marshall, W. J. Rawlinson and B. W. Roach.
Miss Madge Johnston, who was appointed sponsor of the camp has selected her sister, Miss Jenks, as maid of honor who will represent the camp. —Book Hill Herald.

WINDOWS SHOW UP BEAUTIFULLY HANDSOMELY DECORATED FOR THE REUNION

Never Has Such a Display Been Seen Here.

On no other occasion in the history of Chester has the decoration of windows been called forth in such lovely and bewildering style as in making preparations for the reunion of the South Carolina Division, I. C. V. and Sons of Veterans now in progress in this city. The colors of the ill-fated Confederacy are to be seen on every hand, and flaunt forth at the proudest moment of victory when the sons of the South charged upon some glory high and snatched victory from the enemy's hands.

The residence of Col. J. W. Reed, where Gov. Asst. is to be entertained while in the city, is covered with bunting and flags, while a hand some shield on which the Confederate colors show prominently forth and which is lighted with five in colored lights adds to the attractiveness of the decorations. Other private residences all over the city are also adorned with the colors of the South being everywhere predominant and giving a color and tone to the occasion that would be entirely lacking but for the presence of these indelible flags, each waving so jauntily forth.

But it is in business houses especially where the most magnificent displays are to be seen. Expense had been regarded as immaterial, the only object being to prepare for the occasion and make a show of the city as follows: The display of the gathering, which is probably meeting in Chester for the last time, for by the time the year is over, the city again would be Chester's turn to entertain the reunion most of the boys in grey who are gathered here to talk over old times and to relate the deeds of themselves and comrades who are dead and gone will have themselves gathered across the river and marshalled into the city commands on high. The decorative display as prepared by business men in the business district of the city is simply magnificent, and the windows will go away with a pleased idea of the progressiveness of Chester people and their tender regard for the cause that perished so bravely.

Time forbids us to mention all of the interesting displays that have been so zealously arranged, and in a brief article it is possible to give only a brief and fleeting description of a few. For historical value and general attractiveness of arrangement the relic display of Jos. Wylie & Co., which is to be seen in their big show window is one of the first that would attract attention. This is a window displaying with a lavishness and eye-to-historical association and setting that does credit to Mr. Hardin and his assistants. With the intention to give a complete description of the window we might call attention to the flag of the Sixth S. C. Regt., which is in possession of M. J. McCadden and which is jealously guarded. There is also the flag of the old Chester Guards that passed through the hands of a cannon ball. This flag belongs to Mrs. Maggie Hafner, whose father, the gallant Capt. Obadiah Hardin, commanded this company. A portrait of Capt. Hardin is also shown. Of much interest is the gold pen with which Chester's signers of the Ordinance of Secession signed their signatures to that immortal document, a fac simile of which is also to be seen in the window. The sword of Capt. J. L. Cantelero, who was killed at Seven Pines, also his sash and canteen, are on exhibition, also a book pierced by a bullet which contained his last flight, inflicting a deadly wound upon Thos. Willis, the owner of the book. A compass and a barometer, belonging to Miss Mattie Graham, are interesting souvenirs of the Confederate navy. Pistol and rifle balls, gathered from many a battle field, Confederate money of all denominations, and a camp scene with fire kindled and meat frying, and with the Confederate colors on a stand in the background, complete a little Confederate museum that is being much admired and that is a distinct credit to the enterprising firm that arranged it.

S. M. Jones & Co. have on display life-sized portraits of Robt. E. Lee and P. G. T. Beauregard, also a life-sized figure of a Confederate private clad in the regulation grey of the Confederate army. A spur given to Gen. W. A. Walker by Mr. T. N. Bennett, and showing the marks of hard usage is an interesting war memento; while the portrait of Lee and his Generals is an ever interesting feature. Jones & Co. have paid a great deal of attention to their overhead display, and it is simply magnificent—a profusion of the colors that we all love in beautiful abundance.

The Lindsay Mercantile Co. have also arranged an interesting and instructive relic display, and a beautiful background of flags and as a center-piece stands forth a life-

BIG HORSE SHOW TOMORROW EVENING

Will Be a Big Event For The City

People from all Sections of The State Will Be in Attendance To See The Horse Show

The focus for the horse show now taking place and everything is ready for the big event which will be pulled off at the Athletic grounds tomorrow afternoon. The track is first class sharp, there are lots of entries, and the best horseflesh in upper Carolina will be seen.

All persons are advised to be in the arena at 7 o'clock so as to witness the parade and see the dress parade by the militia. The horse show will start promptly. Tickets will be on sale at the Chester Drug Co. tomorrow morning from 9 to 1 o'clock and all persons in the parade who must have tickets are urged to get them in advance so as there will be no confusion. This should be borne in mind.

And the horse show will be great. A great deal of money has been spent on preparing for it and the people should turn out en masse to witness the different events. And the decorations are to be in the breaking crowd at attendance.

Advertisers In This Issue.

In this special re-union edition, issued today by the two local papers for the purpose of giving to the local public the latest re-union news, we call special attention to the advertisers, and ask our readers to give the advertisements their special consideration.

The Strange-Robinson Shoe Co. offer special bargains in shoes and overalls. They have a select stock of goods, goods all new and of the latest and best patterns, and the trading public can rest assured that all offers they make are bona fide.

Jos. Wylie & Co., whose big store is so attractively garbed in the Confederate colors as to prove an irresistible gathering place for the old vets, offers special bargains in clothing, shoes, ox-yards, etc. See them before you go away.

The Chester Amusement Co. have just opened their handsome pavilion on Walnut street, and are offering clean and interesting amusement. Go out and enjoy yourself.

Reed & Crenshaw, the produce men, need no introduction. They make a specialty of fruits and produce and always have a full stock of both in season.

Another Rock Hill Citizen Dead.

News was received here this morning of the death of Mr. A. A. Barron, a prominent business man of Rock Hill, who has been sick with stomach trouble for about two weeks. Mr. Barron was about fifty-eight years old, and was widely known as the president of the Rock Hill Hardware Co., a very successful concern. He was an elder in the A. R. P. church at Rock Hill, and will be buried at Rock Hill this afternoon. Services at 5 o'clock. He leaves a wife and the following children, Messrs. William, Edward, A. A., and John Barron, Mrs. E. Hunter, Miss Lotie Barron, and two younger daughters.

Mr. J. D. McCarley, of Winnsboro, is here taking in the reunion.

Dr. R. F. Diver and Messrs. G. A. Rankin and Oliver Bolt have been named as delegates from Camp Stephen D. Lee, United Confederate Veterans, to attend the state reunion, which opens in Chester Wednesday. They will go to Chester tomorrow.

The reunion will open Wednesday morning and will continue through Friday. All of the veterans are expected to attend and the delegates are named to represent the camp officials. It is expected that the meeting will be largely attended and elaborate preparations have been made for the entertainment of the veterans—Anderson Mail.
